CENTENARIAN LOOKS BACK

Ferries, Brass Bands Of The Good Old Days

By MARC NURRE

The old ferryboats which lie rotting on the tidal mud flats in Sausalito, stripped by vandals and weathered by the salt air, disturb Francis Baptiste.

He'll be 100 years old next Saturday, and from an upper story window of the house he built as a young man 60 years ago he can still look out over the bay in which they and he once sailed.

They've both grown old, but he has retained his wit and spirit while they have surrendered theirs.

One hundred. A century.

It will be a milestone, he acknowledges, but it's not one which concerns him. "I just want to get there and live a while and be quiet," he said.

He was entertaining a group of visitors, including some men from the Social Security Administration who had come to present him with a letter of congratulations from their boss. He looked across the room at them seated on the couch opposite his and announced, "I don't want any brass bands around or anything like that."

A short, stocky man, his frame still reflects the strength of his youth; the strength which kept him working with his son in the building trade until he was 80. His hands are still muscular, and a handshake proves that some of his power remains.

His eyesight and hearing have faded a little in recent years, but the being within the body is still alert, still able to reflect accurately upon the world.

"I walk all over the grounds here," he said. "I'm kind of timid about the stairs, but I walk all over the grounds here."

A son and daughter with whom he shares the house take him out occasionally, and he doesn't always like what he sees. The decay of the old ferryboats bothered him, but their replacement, the brightly painted, steel-hull-and-diesel ferryboat golden gate just rubbed salt in the wounds.

"It's only got a name," he groused. "That's no ferryboat, that damn thing." It was a shame, he said, that the auto took away the passengers from the big wooden elliptical boats. The old boats, the ones he remembers, "they just pulled 'em up on the mud and forgot about 'em. The kids break the windows and steal the doors."

"I never made any big money . . ."

He was born in Boston in 1872, and came West on a train a decade later, landing with his family in Oakland where he lived for a short time. His father worked on a dredge in the Oakland harbor, and Baptiste can remember playing in the harbor in a rowboat.

But the family wasn't there long when Marin County aroused his father's curiosity. "Dad worried about what was in those hills over by Marin County, so we came here," he said. "I came here in a sailboat, and I stayed here." He laughed as he recalled the day in 1893.

He went to work in San Francisco at the California Door and Sash Co., where he learned the trade which still gives him pride. "I learned how to do a lot of woodwork that nobody else knows how to do," he said. He worked for the company for four years, then became a homebuilder in Sausalito. "I built houses galore," so many that he said he forgets the number.

He considers his own house, built in what was then a marshland north of Sausalito, an example of his work. "This house is built, no maybes about it. No gingerbread work here."

He married his wife Jeanette

Skyjacker Jumps With Loot

PROVO, Utah (UPI)—Police said today they "have a suspect" in the half-million dollar ransom skyjacking of a United Air Lines jet.

Officers declined to give further information, but a Utah Highway Patrol spokesman said the suspect was "not in custody."

The skyjacker parachuted from the jet near the Provo Airport and an all-night ground search was temporarily called off at dawn. At that time the police said they found "no sign of anything."

Several hours later police said they had the suspect. Part of the drama was played out at San Francisco International Airport.

In Provo; authorities were checking a lic. report that a mystery helicopter was seen in the area and took flight when officers approached it.

"We found no human footprints and no signs of anything out there," said Provo Police Chief Jesse Evans, search coordinator. "We're going to try and coordinate our ground search with the air search."

The hunt for the cool, bespectacled hijacker who jumped from the airliner last night with a bugged parachute was concentrated in an area near the Provo Airport, eight miles west of Provo.

A helicopter was reportedly seen hovering in the area at the time the skyjacker jumped.

Highway Patrolman Ron Law said the helicopter flew away as soon as officers approached and they could not get close enough to see its markings. But he agreed that the craft might have been there to meet the hijacker late Friday night.

"It sure as hell could be that way, couldn't it?" he said.

A radio signaling device planted in the hijacker's parachute led searchers to mud flats about eight miles west of Provo, a city of about 37,000 in North Central Utah and the home of Brigham Young University.

A spokesman at Hamilton Air Force Base in Marin confirmed today that a C130 Air Force plane had followed the airliner on its flight over Nevada and Utah.

He said a "beeper signal" came from skies near the jetliner over Nevada. But he said there was no way of knowing immediately if the gunman tossed out a bugged parachute in an attempt to throw the plane off his trail.

The FBI would not discuss the Air Force report or say what had happened to the other parachutes handed over to the hijacker in San Francisco.

LBJ Hit By Heart Attack

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (UPI)—The chest pains suffered by former President Lyndon B. Johnson yesterday were officially diagnosed today as a heart attack, but his doctor said Johnson had a "very good" chance of recovering.

Noted heart specialist Dr. John Willis Hurst, who flew here from Atlanta yesterday to treat the 63-year-old former chief executive, said Johnson suffered a "myocardial infarction" in the front area of his heart.

He also said tests also showed Johnson was experiencing some lung congestion, but not enough to bother him, and that his chances are "very good" of recovering.

Hurst described the seizure as apparently less severe than the near-fatal heart attack experienced by Johnson in 1955.

The famed doctor, president of the American Heart Association, said comparisons with the 1955 heart attack were difficult, but he noted that Johnson's blood pressure was standing at a better level this time.

Hurst spoke to newsmen at the University of Virginia Hospital where Johnson was taken following his seizure at the home of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Robb. Johnson's wife, Lady Bird, was at Hurst's side when he spoke.

Hurst said Johnson was "comfortable," although he does have spells of "periodic pain."

Mrs. Johnson said the former president's morale was "quite good," and added: "I think I will be able to convince him to live a little more quietly somehow."

Mrs. Johnson said the three days immediately preceeding the former president's attack were "extremely busy days." Just the day prior, Johnson had attended a funeral for former Tennessee Gov. Buford Ellington.

Following the Tennessee funeral, he and Lady Bird flew to Charlottesville in a new plane they had purchased last week. They were to go on to a wedding in New York after a visit with the Robbs.

Mrs. Johnson said her husband began smoking again last fall after having given up cigarettes following his 1955 heart attack. At the time he quit, he was smoking three packs a day.

"I don't know if I'm going to try to persuade him to quit again," Mrs. Johnson said. "He enjoys it very much."

Dr. Hurst smiled at Mrs. Johnson's comments. "I can tell you how much he's smoking now," Hurst said. "He's not smoking at all.

Asked whether Johnson would be permitted to smoke in the future, Hurst commented: "We are negotiating."

The specialist said the former president was not being given any anti-coagulants at this point but was getting periodic doses of oxygen, administered through the nose.

U.S. Air Strength Pounds Red Fronts

Big Effort Made To Halt The North

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. jet bombers and fighters from Vietnam, Thailand, Guam and four carriers in the South China Sea pounded Communist forces today in an effort to halt the offensive that already has overrun one major South Vietnamese outpost 75 miles from Saigon.

Heavy strikes were reported both north and south of the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ). Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird said in Washington Friday that the bombing of North Vietnam would continue until the Communist forces pulled back across the DMZ.

In Paris the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese delegations to the Vietnam peace talks today denounced Laird's "odious allegation" at his news conference.

They said his statements confirmed that Washington is sabotaging the talks here and clinging at all costs to the present Saigon regime.

Military sources said the U.S. moved three more fighter squadrons, totaling more than 50 planes, to South Vietnam and "indefinitely" delayed the scheduled withdrawal of observation pilots who direct the bombing runs.

In related moves, the navy reestablished its southern "Dixie Station" off the South Vietnamese coast—to reinforce the carrier task fgrces on "Yankee Station" off North Vietnam—to provide airstrikes around Saigon. It also ordered two heavy cruisers into the war zones to help other warships shelling Communist shoreline defenses.

Four American soldiers were wounded when a U.S. base came under attack for the first time since the North Vietnamese offensive began on March 30. Communist forces poured 150 mortar rounds into the U.S. Army radio relay station atop 3,235-foot Black Virgin Mountain (Nui Ba Den), only 556miles northwest of Saigon.

Fighting raged both to the north and south of Saigon. In Cambodia, the high command reported that Highway 1, which links Phnom Penh and Saigon, was reopened Saturday morning after being cut for more than 24 hours by the North Vietnamese. It said another supply road, Highway 15, to the province capital of Prey Veng still was cut by the Communists.

In the area between Saigon and the Cambodian border, where the Communists overran the town of Loc Ninh Friday, U.S. fighter-bombers flew 107 strikes, the most in at least three years in the area, and four waves of B52s dumped tons of bombs on suspected North Vietnamese concentrations.

To the north, where the Communist offensive started across the DMZ April 1 after two days of intense shelling, American air might continued o pound North Vietnamese military targets for the third day in the row. However, storms were

AN ELECTION SPECIAL IN I-J MAGAZINE

On Tuesday, the citizens of 10 of Marin County's 11 incorporated cities will go to the polls in their municipal elections.

And in every one of those 10 cities and towns there will be a contest for councilmen positions.

To help the voters in deciding how they will mark their ballots, today's issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is a special election edition, devoted largely to the candidates, their qualifications and their stands upon the issues.

Two Southern Sonoma County cities — Cotati and Rohnert Park — are also covered.

Beban Due Quizzing In Report Leak

Richard W. Beban, ostracized member of the Marin County Grand Jury, is expected to be called before the panel Tuesday, as part of the jury's investigation of how a report on its investigations of Sausalito police operations was prematurely "leaked" to the press.

Milen C. Dempster, grand jury foreman, today told the Independent-Journal he wasn't "free to comment" on the reports that Beban would be quizzed, but said Beban had not been formally subpoenaed to appear.

Beban was suspended from committee assignments by the jury last October in a dispute over investigations of San Quentin Prison and other problems. He failed to win a Marin Superior Court order reinstating him to the jury committees last month.

Dempster today said that any information about the progress of the investigation on the leak of the Sausalito report would have to come from Timothy Riordan, deputy state attorney general. Riordan was not available for comment.

Joan Boessenecker, chairman of the jury subcommittee that probed the Sausalito police operations, today said she doubt-

Sausalito Candidates' Split On Jury Report As Election Nears

By PAT ANGLE

Reaction among Sausalito City Council candidates to recent charges against the city's police department by the Marin Grand Jury and others ranges from a call for suspension of its three top officers to the view the allegations are vague and undocumented.

Eight of the 10 contenders who will vie for three council seats on Tuesday seemed to agree that a thorough investigation is needed to prove or disprove the charges, which include that the equivalent of a quota system of arrests exists.

One candidate, Robert D. Bauerle, declined to comment on the police situation and another, Serge Trubach, could not be reached. Interviewed on the subject by the Independent-Journal were: incumbent Robin Sweeny, Evert Heynneman, Helen K. Armstrong, Sally Stanford, Howard Chadd, Robert G. Martin Sr., W. Daniel O'Connor and Leonard Rappa.

None of the candidates seemed to believe that the jury report of the quota and a lack of police leadership presented sufficient evidence to justify the panel's recommendations that the three top police administrators be fired.

Last week the jury called for dismissal of Chief James D. Wright, Capt. R. David Malkin and Lt. William Fraass, a demand rejected by the city council. The council issued a rebuttal to the jury report and appointed councilmen Stephen A. Fraser and Earl F. Dunphy to conduct the council's own probe of police activities.

Most of the contenders thought the council had handled the jury report and recommendations poorly and gave various reasons for their views.

The individual candidates responded in this fashion:

MISS STANFORD — "I have not seen the jury report or the council's rebuttal of that report, but would certainly look into the police situation if elected. Without seeing the report, I can't make a decision on the issue at this point. I don't judge anyone unless I know what I am judging them on. I want to see what's under the rug, not what's on top.

MRS. SWEENY — "I am very pleased with the police department and think they are a hard-working, energetic group and have no complaints against them. I have studied the grand jury report very carefully and I feel there is nothing in it to act upon; I think it's incredible the jury would expect us to remove our three top officers on the strength of that document. Due to the inadequacy of the report, the council has decided to conduct its own study of our police. I believe all the council members have the public trust, are responsible citizens and will do the job honestly."

CHADD — "The police chief and his two top subordinates should have been suspended immediately until the jury's charges were confirmed or proved false. This has been the policy in other bay area cities when serious charges have been made against policemen.

Mideast Skirmish

By U.P.INTERNATIONAL

Israeli troops killed an Arab guerrilla on the Lebanese frontier and exhanged fire with Syrian-based commandos during the night, a military spokesman in Tel Aviv said today.

No Israeli casualties were reported in either incident.

The spokesmen said an Israeli army patrol intercepted the guerrilla west of Kibbutz Hanita at about 11 p.m. Thursday and killed him in an ensuing skirmish. Kibbutz Hanita lies just south of the Israeli-Lebanese cease-fire line.

Accepts Sculpture

SAN CLEMENTE, (UPI) — Pat Nixon accepted a bronze bust of President Nixon at a gathering in Plaza Park yesterday and then used the occasion to praise the First Family's neighbors here.

"It really is magnificent," Mrs. Nixon said of the 250-pound sculpture, which was paid for with $8,000 in donations from school children and local businessmen.

The sculptress, Judith Bland of Corona del Mar, told Mrs. Nixon she had worked from photographs of the President but also had caught a glimpse of him once at an airport.

To Attend Opening

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Gov. Ronald Reagan will attend the opening of President Nixon's California campaign headquarters next week.

In the governor's weekly schedule announcement yesterday, Reagan's office said he will attend the affair Friday in Los Angeles.

Sources said Armienta resigned Friday night but would not make it official until later today.

Big Bank Loss

CARTERSVILLE, Ga. (UPI) — Federal officials said yesterday the First National Bank of Cartersville is missing $4.7 million in cash and securities in what apparently is the largest embezzlement scheme ever uncovered in the South.

CRA Chief Accuses, McCloskey Denies Rioting Plans For Agnew

By GEORGE SKELTON.

PALO ALTO (UPI)—Rep. Paul N. McCloskey found himself in more hot water with Republican conservatives today, this time accused of trying to incite a riot at a speech here tonight by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew.

"Holy smokes, that's unbelievable," McCloskey angrily replied in categorically denying the charge leveled Friday by the president of the conservative-oriented California Republican Assembly.

Oakland attorney Hugh S. Koford, president of the 12,500-member CRA-the state's oldest volunteer political organization—told a news conference that "McCloskey is trying to incite some junior high school kids" and "is trying to create a riot" outside the hotel where Agnew was scheduled to speak.

Palo Alto police said they expected "a thousand or more" antiwar demonstrators, incensed by renewed bombing of North Vietnam, to stage a protest in a hotel parking lot after a march up historic El Camino Real.

Security was unusually tight at the heavily-guarded Cabana Hyatt House, site of the CRA's 39th annual convention and Agnew's scheduled speech.

Koford contended McCloskey had encouraged students to demonstrate against the war at Agnew's speech and "I think he knows, just as a man who drinks too much and gets in a car know, that something can happen."

"It's typical of the CRA," said McCloskey when reached by newsmen.

"It's a falsehood and Mr. Koford knows it. It's irresponsible on Mr. Koford's part and beneath the dignity of any Republican. I think he ought to retract it."

Koford said he would not.

McCloskey last year was censured by the CRA for criticizing President Nixon's Vietnam policy. The organization invited the liberal Republican to leave the party and become a Democrat.

Gov. Ronald Reagan, Nixon's California campaign chairman, also recently urged McCloskey to quit the GOP after the congressman's presidential campaign faltered.

McCloskey now is in a tough reelection race in a newlyreapportioned congressional district which includes Palo Alto.

Powerful Bomb Rips Belfast Hotel — Twice In Three Weeks

By JOSEPH FLEMING.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI)—A powerful bomb explosion ripped through Belfast's modern Europa hotel today for the second time in less than three weeks.

Police said the hotel was evacuated before a bomb planted in a truck parked outside went off, causing heavy damage to the hotel and nearby buildings.

The bombing came as teams of men and women in a Roman Catholic district of Belfast gathered signatures on petitions for a provincial truce the militant wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) has vowed to reject.

UPI correspondent Donal O'Higgins said the Europa's ground floor, including the lobby and coffee shop, were a complete shambles following the blast. Plate glass windows were smashed, window frames embedded in walls and furniture was a tangled mass.

He said windows on many of the 11 floors above were blown in.

There were no reports of injuries.

Police said the hotel was evacuated after a truck driver ran into the lobby shouting: "Get out! Get out! There's a bomb in my lorry (truck)."

The driver said two men hijacked his vehicle, forced him to drive to the Europa, planted a gelignite time bomb in the truck and fled. The bomb went off about 30 minutes after the driver gave the alarm.

Antiwar Veteran Enters Politics

BOSTON (UPI)—John F. Kerry, a former Navy lieutenant who became a celebrity protesting the Vietnam war, says he will seek the Democratic congressional nomination from the 5th District.

Kerry, 28, said this week he decided to run because the problems he sees in this country are the same he encounterej during his duty in Southeast Asia.

The former naval officer and recipient of several medals is seeking the seat now held by Rep. F. Bradford Morse, a Republican who was recently named to a high-level position at the United Nations.

Muir Beach CSD Slapped On Hiring

The County of Marin has ordered the Muir Beach Community Services District board to take immediate "corrective action" to eliminate a conflict of interest between a staff officer and board member.

According to County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell, the agency's five-member board illegally hired the husband of one director last November as general manager.

Mitchell said yesterday a letter has been sent to the agency advising that either director Mary Mosteller resign her post or her husband, Gordon, quit his $500-per-month job.

Meanwhile, County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney said Mosteller will not be forced to repay the agency — even though his employment was invalid — since there is no indication he didn't do the work for which he was hired.

At the time Mosteller was employed — an action never reported to the Independent-Journal by district officials — the pay for the general manager's position was jumped from $100 per month to $500. Also, the mileage reimbursement was changed from a flat $12 per month to 10 cents per mile. A two-month mileage voucher recently submitted by him requested a $180 reimbursement.

The only director reached yesterday by the Independent-Journal said he saw nothing wrong with hiring the director's husband.

Director Richard C. Bain acknowledged there was discussion on the point when Mosteller was hired, and said he thought Mrs. Mosteller had abstained from voting.

However, he said that board chairman Bruce E. Harlow, who shares a home with Mosteller's daughter, voted in favor of hiring Mosteller.

Bain said the general manager vacancy had been advertised "but no one else applied."

He said the increase in pay was due to an increase in the workload of the tiny district, which handles the community's water supply.

Year 'Round School Proposal Wins Support From Parents

Plans for year 'round schools have met with favorable response from parents, the Old Adobe School District board, Petaluma, has heard.

Each of the four school principals reported at the board's Thursday meeting that parents attending information sessions on the extended school year were in favor of the plan.

If approved by the school board on April 20, the plan would go into effect July 5 and students would attend for 45-days, or nine weeks, followed by 15 class days of vacation, rather than the traditional system of long summer vacations.

Responses at individual schools included La Tercera and Miwok Valley, with 40 per cent of parents attending, 90 per cent in favor; Old Adobe School, 30 per cent attended with 75 per cent in favor, and Bernard Eldredge School, 33 per cent attended with 74 per cent in favor.

Norman Ross, LaTercera School principal, said every parent will be polled next week to get a more thorough idea of opinions on the plan. He said that persons selected at random from voter registration lists would also be polled to get opinions from nonparents.

Ross said that attendance would be staggered at La Tercera and Miwok Valley schools, if the plan is approved. The student body would be divided into four groups so that one group, or 25 per cent of the students, would be on vacation at one time. The capacity of the buildings also would be enlarged.

Ross said the staggered system probably wouldn't work well at the smaller Old Adobe and Bernard Eldredge schools. Students there either would stay on the traditional calendar or be switched to the 45-15 plan without staggering enrollment.

Ross said Mitchell Voydat, state director of elementary education and chairman of the 45-15 plan study committee, will attend the April 20 board meeting to answer legal questions about the plan.

Report Says Philosophy Varies On Drunken Drivers

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—California judges are "often reluctant to impose mandatory jail sentences and license suspensions against repeat drunken driving offenders," the Department of Motor Vehicles said yesterday.

In a report to the legislature on drinking and driving, the department declared, "There is a wide range of variation through the state in judicial attitude, philosophy and sentencing practices."

The report noted that the Highway Patrol has estimated that drunken drivers are involved in 35 per cent of fatal accidents.

But the Department said, "There is an increasing tendency in some courts to reduce drunken driving convictions to reckless driving in order to avoid the cost and time of jury trial in contested cases."

The report stated there is also an increasing incidence of court dismissals of prior drunken driving convictions, apparently to avoid having the department suspend or revoke licenses as required by law.

Citing an unpublished study on traffic enforcement, the department said, "Judges frequently do not impose mandatory jail sentences against repeat drunken drivers or pick up their license at the time of conviction, as required by the vehicle code."

The agency declared that "there is reason to question the willingness of the courts to conform to mandatory or suggested sentencing practices and treatment procedures."

It added that "resolution of the judicial discretion issue should logically precede implementation of any new drunken driving countermeasures or treatment programs."

The department recommended that a blood alcohol levels be required on drunken driving arrests and abstract convictions. It also proposed that any convicted drunken driver with a blood alcohol level of .20 per cent "be considered a provisional alcoholic and referred to a clinic for diagnosis and treatment."

Under law, a driver with a level of .10 per cent is considered to be drunk.

The Department said it currently had authority to classify drivers as alcoholics and take action against them. But it said to follow through with such an effort would require additional staffing and funds.

Destroying Of Report Is Attacked

The chairman of the Marin County Human Rights Commission lashed out yesterday at country supervisors for ordering destruction of a controversial commission survey.

The survey, aimed at determining the income, age, sex and race of those appointed by supervisors to county boards and commissions, was ordered destroyed Tuesday after a county planning commissioner protested its necessity and propriety.

"I was deeply disturbed by your decision . . ." commission chairman Stewart Boxer wrote yesterday. "Your action was taken without any attempt to ascertain the reasons for the survey . . . (and without) giving the human rights commission an opportunity to rebut some of the outrageous statements made at the meeting."

Boxer said he was referring to Planning Commissioner Jack G. Nixon's question on whether the commission was trying to become "a quasi-political group to influence appointment" and Supervisor Peter R. Arrigoni's answer that "comes closer to the truth than anything I have heard so far."

After outlining the commission's responsibilities — including a review of county agencies in relation to human rights — Boxer said he considered the survey to fall within those provisions.

Boxer's wife, Barbara, is a candidate for Arrigoni's seat on the board. She said yesterday she supports such a survey and urged the board to discuss it with the commission.

$250,000 Plus For 'Soledad Brothers' Trial

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— City officials say the four-month trial of the "Soledad Brothers" cost well over a quarter million dollars.

Defendants John Clutchette and Fleeta Drumgo were acquitted last week of charges they killed a guard at Soledad State Prison.

Assistant City Controller Frank Byrne said Thursday when the cost accounting is completed the tab will be sent to the Monterey County Board of Supervisors for approval and then to the State of California for payment.

The trial was held here after defense lawyers claimed an unbiased jury could not be found in Monterey County where Soledad is located.

Kentfield Trustees To Discuss Budget

The Kentifeld School District board will take up the $1.6 million budget proposed for next year when it meets Monday night at 8 o'clock in Wolfe Grade School.

The board also is expected to authorize Supt. Anthony G. Bacich to study possible areas of cooperation with the Ross School District.

Vaccine To Treat Badly Burned Victims Revealed

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — An experimental vaccine which significantly reduced the number of deaths caused by an infection which strikes severely burned persons was described yesterday at the American Burn Association annual meeting.

Dr. M. W. Fisher, a director of bacteriology and mycology for the Parke-Davis Pharmaceutical firm of Detroit, told the group early clinical trials showed a 78.9 per cent decrease in deaths when compared to a nonvaccinated group immediately preceding the use of the vaccine.

The vaccine, called pseudogen, was tested on severely burned patients over a four-year period at the University of Cincinnati Medical Center. The infection is caused by the pseudomonas bacteria.

Unlike other vaccines, such as used to prevent polio, tetanus and diphtheria, the vaccine must be used frequently.

Fisher said the test results showed death from pseudomonas infection occurred in only 3.1 per cent of the first 96 patients. before the development of the vaccine.

in 1901 and they had four children. Clarence, one of three sons, lives with him in the house in Sausalito, as does a daughter, Elphe Brogdon. Francis, another son, lives in San Anselmo and Edward Baptiste lives in San Francisco. He also has five grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

His wife died in an auto accident in 1927 and he never remarried.

Baptiste remembers Sausalito in its early days as a town of about 2,000, but isn't at all sorry that it has trebled in size. Growth, he said, is a good and necessary thing. San Rafael was the big town in the County then, he remembers. Mill Valley "had nothing."

He was well-known in Sausalito during his youth, not because he was involved in the city's politics ("That's one thing I never mixed with. I don't know why I didn't take to it."), but because of his building trade and the fact that he played in a brass band.

"We had the only band in the county, and we had it here in Sausalito," he remembered. "We travelled all over the bay." He played second coronet in the band, which dissolved when he was about 30. "Some of the young fellas got married, some of the others died," he said. After that, his hobby was "just plain hard work."

He knew of the Nabobs in town, but not personally. He was the man who boarded up the windows of the house where William Randolph Hearst lived after Hearst pulled out of town. He knew the brother of the man Hearst hired to build the mysterious cement wall along Bridgeway in Sausalito, but he admitted he can't shed any light about why it was built.

He knew Dennis Gorman, chief engineer on the ferryboat which ran between Sausalito and San Francisco who eventually retired and spent his days watching the bay through a telescope, an old man with a long white beard who died in 1929.

"I was pretty well known around Sausalito," he mused. "Every Tom, Dick, and Harry knew me, and I knew them all. I liked good company, and I kept good company."

"The only thing, I never made any big money. When you got a tool box on your back, you're not making any money. But I had a bunch of kids, and three meals a day, what the hell. I got a dandy family. If anybody can brag about them, I can. You bet your life."

He spends some of his time nowadays listening to Arthur Godfrey on the radio and listening to books transcribed onto records because his eyesight is weak. He listens to religious works ("Just in the past few years I've got more interested in that") and autobiographies.

He was tiring, after the effort of talking, and his visitors rose to leave. Did he have an answer to the usual question put to a centenerian — the secret of a long life, the key to happiness?

"Naw, I have nothing very important to say. I thank you fellas for coming around, though."

ABEID KARUME
Assassinated

President Of Zanzibar Assassinated

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Gunmen assassinated Zanzibar President Sheikh Abeid Karume last night, the Tanzanian government radio said today.

The broadcast said three gunmen approached Karume, 67, outside his Afro-Shirazi party headquarters and one of them fired, killing the president on the spot.

One of the gunmen was killed but two escaped, the broadcast said.

The broadcast said Sheikh Thabet Kombo, secretary general of the governing Afro-Shirazi party, had been wounded by gunfire and hospitalized.

The broadcast said a curfew had been imposed on Zanzibar and a number of civilians were arrested by armed police and taken away for questioning.

Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere presided over an emergency cabinet meeting in Dar-Es-Salaam and heard a report from Premier Rashif Kawawa, who had returned from Zanzibar early today.

Tanzanian government officials said the 300,000 residents of Zanzibar have been placed under strict curfew and communications with the offshore island 21 miles from the capital were cut following persistent reports of a coup.

For weeks reports have circulated of takeover plots on the island, culminating in last month's announcement by Karume that he was empowering policemen, soldiers an civilians to kill anyone "suspecting of plotting to overthrow the regime."

"We were all questioned in private" by the attorney general's office, she said, "and we're all going to be treated the same." She said if any subpoena were issued in the investigation it would have to come from the attorney general rather than the jury.

JUMP

727 landed safely in Salt Lake City late last night and police headed into the region to look for "T. Johnson," the name the hijacker used to buy his ticket.

"It would seem that the hijacking was well thought out, well planned and he obviously had knowledge of parachutes," said a United official. The hijacker donned a jumpsuit just before parachuting out.

It was the highest ransom ever paid in a U.S. skyjacking. The highway patrol said the money was in a black attache case and included 5, 10, 20, and 100 dollar bills.

The man, described as 30, white, medium build and wearing a wig and fake mustache, pulled off the crime without ever leaving his seat. He took over the plane and handed typewritten notes to a stewardess who carried them to the pilot.

Earlier the airline said the hijacker bailed out over Nevada, but the report proved erroneous. The company said it was an "honest mistake" because the pilot radioed when he saw a signal light flash on to indicate the rear exit was open.

The hijacker took over the plane a few minutes after it left Denver for Los Angeles. He forced it to fly to San Francisco where $500,000 and several parachutes were loaded aboard and the passengers allowed to disembark 3 1-2 hours later.

The plane then took off and flew north over the snowy Sierra Nevada, then east over Nevada and Utah where the hijacker parachuted out and disappeared into the night.

"I saw him open a bag he had and take out a hand grenade and put it in his coat pocket. My heart jumped," said Joseph Zaleski, a passenger sitting across the aisle from the hijacker.

A stewardess said the hijacker sent an envelope to the pilot containing the pin from a grenade.

The 95 passengers and crewmen aboard the plane sat inside during most of the 3 1-2 hour ordeal on the ground at San Francisco, in which the hijacker pressed crewmen and a convict into service.

"A half hour after landing the hijacker handed me a note saying, 'Go see the captain,' " said the prisoner, William R. Coggin, 21, Sacramento, Calif. He said the captain told him to bring aboard the plane two satchels containing the $500,000 ransom money.

Coggin, an escapee from Duell Vocational Institute at Tracy, was apprehended in Colorado and was being returned to California. He is being held at San Quentin Prison awaiting transfer to Chino.

The hijacker pressed a pistol to the head of Capt. Gerry D. Hearn as the jet was high over western Colorado and ordered him to land at San Francisco, where the plane was taxied to a remote runway bordering on the bay.

Mickey Luckoff, sales manager of KGO radio station in San Francisco and one of the passengers, said the hijacker had planned the incident so carefully and had crewmen so well organized that it sometimes appeared there was more than one hijacker. United also believed for a time that "two or three" hijackers were involved.

Courthouse Sale Push To Be Asked

Two Marin County supervisors have agreed to ask fellow board members Tuesday to modify their option with the City of San Rafael for sale of the old county courthouse site.

County Administrator John E. Barrows said supervisors Arnold M. Baptiste and Peter R. Arrigoni Jr. will seek to drop the county's asking price on the land from $750,000 to $650,000.

Barrows said the two agreed to make the request after meeting yesterday with San Rafael officials. The group was authorized earlier this year to find a buyer for the property.

A Sacramento construction company offered $650,000 for the site last month and proposed building a multistory office building and parking lot.

Barrows said the board will be asked to modify its option agreement with the city so that the property can be sold for $650,000, provided 40 per cent remains in open space.

The supervisors already have agreed to a plan calling for the property's Fourth Street frontage to be maintained as a park by the city.

moving into the area and were expected to curtail the bombing and strafing of antiaircraft and surface-to-air (SAM) missile sites.

With just about every possible American plane in the air, Communist fire was taking its toll. The U.S. command reported that in three widely separated incidents ground fire downed two American helicopters and another was chased off from a rescue attempt.

A UHL Huey utility chopper that had been pressed into service for rescue work in the heavy fighting around An Loc, which is 15 miles south of Loc Ninh and 60 miles north of Saigon, was unable to land and rescue three wounded Americans because of heavy fire that killed one of the crew members. The Americans later were rescued.

In the Central Highlands north of Saigon, where fighting also was under way in the Communist's multi-pronged offensive, an OH6 Loach light observation plane flying support for South Vietnamese forces was shot down east of Pleiku but its two-man crew was rescued.

Two crewmen of an AH1 Cobra were not so fortunate. Their rocketfiring gunship went down Friday morning while supporting South Vietnamese forces in the Mekong Delta 150 miles southwest of Saigon and both men were listed as missing.

Major fighting is now under way in four different areas of South Vietnam.

REACT

Here is a council which requested the investigation in the first place and, because it didn't come out as they presumably wanted it to, they began to find fault with the jury and its report. The council has gone into secret session to discuss the police situation which cried out for the councilmen to address themselves publicly to the problem."

O'CONNOR — "I live right downtown and can honestly say I have not seen any untoward police activity, but I am really concerned that so many people are complaining about our police. There must be something to some of those complaints. I applaud the council's in-house investigation, but think they should have conducted their own investigation right along with the grand jury. If both had come up with similar findings, action could have been taken to correct any wrongdoing, if it exists. I think the council should have withheld its support and endorsement of the people until after its own investigation. (I spoke out in the March 31 Independent-Journal against department policies, charging, among other things, the department falsified reports.) An immediate investigation is needed and I think the council's investigating committee should include representatives from each of Sausalito's five geographical neighborhoods."

HEYNNEMAN — "We not only have problems with our police department, but with all city departments and a very thorough analysis of the workings of each is needed. I have had one good encounter with the police department and one extremely bad one. I don't think the citizens actually know what is happening because the council has conducted all discussions of the police situation behind closed doors. I favor open meetings to discuss the jury report and the charges."

ARMSTRONG — "Sausalito police seem to have a dual standard and enforce regulations more against visitors than residents. I think the city is taking too much of the visitors' money through its law enforcement agency. The council is making a mistake launching a probe of its own because this indicates a lack of faith in the grand jury. What is needed now is for the jury and council to sit down together and communicate on this issue."

MARTIN — "The police department is bad and I blame the council and the city manager for allowing the situation to go so far. I believe the charges in the jury report because many of my customers and a lot of others have told me the police treated them badly. All these reports can't be false. The council has set itself up on a pedestal in claiming the police can do no wrong. They don't have guts enough to come out and admit they may have made a mistake in supporting the police without question."

Engineer Explains Bus Lane Experiment

A story in yesterday's Independent-Journal — reporting plans to experiment with reserving one lane of Highway 101 exclusively for buses over the Waldo Grade — may have left readers wondering why one such lane taken from opposite-bound traffic would leave only two out of four lanes open for southbound traffic during the evening hours of the experiment.

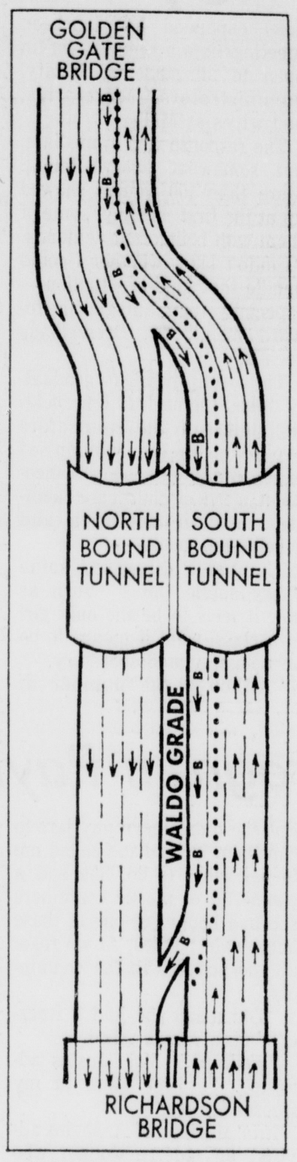
The test beginning in midsummer will use the innermost of the four southbound lanes between the Golden Gate Bridge and Richardson Bay exclusively for commute buses bound for Corte Madera and north. The lane next to it will be blocked off with pylons to avert head-on collisions.

Wallace noted that during the evening rush, southbound traffic is permitted to use only two lanes of the Golden Gate Bridge anyway, so it should do no harm to confine southbound traffic to two lanes over the Waldo.

Wallace said that although the southbound section of Highway 101 has four lanes all the way over the Waldo, the northbound side has only three in some areas. Until construction work now in progress adds the fourth lane, the bus test must be confined to the evening rush, he said.



EXPERIMENT — In a contracted version, this is how northbound buses will switch to southbound lanes during a rush-hour experiment scheduled to begin on Highway 101 in midsummer. Two southbound lanes will be set aside — one for the buses to use and another to act as a buffer against oncoming autos.

No Charges Filed Yet In Drug Case

No charges were filed yesterday in Marin Municipal Court against three persons arrested in a narcotics raid in Ross Thursday.

An analysis of what is believed to be heroin and speed confiscated in the raid is under way.

Mark Williams Goldberg and his wife, Gayle, both 23, were arrested at their home along with Robert Donald McClanahan, 30, of Sausalito. About $460 worth of suspected narcotics was seized.

They were booked into Marin County Jail for investigation of possessing narcotics for sale and possessing dangerous drugs, narcotics paraphernalia and marijuana, but were released today pending the analysis.

During the raid, narcotics agents and Ross police also seized about a dozen guns and a variety of household articles believed stolen by addicts and bartered for narcotics.

Agents said the Goldbergs had been selling $9,000 worth of heroin a month.

Development Session Monday

The Petaluma City Council will meet in special session Monday at 7:30 p.m. to introduce ordinances establishing a planned unit development district and planned community district.

The new zoning classifications would permit a variety of land uses in one area of development. The planned community district deals with developments of 40 acres or more.

The council also will study methods of enforcing an imposed limit of 500 new living units in the community each year. Under consideration is a special committee to sift through building applications and make recommendation on which should be permitted.

Good Report On Marin's Crop Values

The county's agricultural crop report for 1971, released this week by Agricultural Commissioner R. Allan Ballard, shows the gross value of the agricultural industry on the upswing.

According to the report, the gross dollar value for 1971 totaled about $18.4 million, compared to $16.8 million for 1970.

Exactly how much of the increase can be attributed to inflation and how much to improved farming methods and production could not be determined.

Ballard declined comment on the report yesterday until a full report on the status of agriculture is given to the county board of supervisors.

Some West Marin ranchers and developers, appearing before the board of supervisors and planning commission in opposition to massive rezoning plans for West Marin, have claimed that agriculture is dying.

They claim rezoning of the county's agriculture preserve to protect the industry from urbanization is not needed and that existing zoning will suffice.

A portion of the preserve already has been rezoned to 60-acre lots, with the rest still zoned for two-acre lots. The rezoning is expected to be tested in court by ranchers and developers who claim their land has been unfairly devalued.)

The report itself shows an increase in acreage devoted to crops such as hay and grain. Overall, 151,280 acres were harvested in 1971 for a dollar value of $1,199,700. In 1970, 150,800 acres were harvested at a value of $765,300.

While 90 acres were devoted both years to nuts and fruits, the dollar value increased from $15,000 in 1970 to $27,000 in 1971.

Dollar value for livestock and poultry products such as milk and eggs increased from $12,076,000 in 1970 to $12,820,300 in 1971.

During the same period, meanwhile, the number of cattle, sheep, and chickens decreased slightly while turkeys increased.

Nursery crops stayed identical in number during the two years, but the value increased from $594,000 in 1970 to $702,400 in 1971.

Burglary Case To Higher Court

Christopher J. Wooten, 18, of San Rafael, has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on charges of burglary and possessing stolen property. He was ordered to appear April 19.

Wooten, who pleaded innocent, was arrested with three others Feb. 27 outside Bahia Vista School in San Rafael. The door to the school had been forced open, setting off a silent alarm.

FERRY TO TAKE LAYOFF ON TUESDAY

The Sausalito ferry will be out of service on Tuesday, but Golden Gate Bridge District buses will handle passengers at every scheduled departure, both from the Sausalito and San Francisco ferry terminals.

The one-day layoff will be to give the vessel its routine 18-month inspection by the Coast Guard. Minor maintenance and repairs also are scheduled while drydocked for the day at the Todd Shipyards in Alameda.

Full ferry service will resume on Wednesday.

Gun Battle Policeman Is 'Alert'

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Wounded patrolman Jay A. Rogovoy, 33, has several relatives in Marin, today was listed in serious condition, though "alert and active" in the intensive care unit of San Francisco General Hospital.

Rogovoy suffered serious bullet wounds Wednesday in a gun battle with a San Mateo County Jail fugitive which ended when the excapee shot himself in the head.

The inmate, James Edward Dudley, along with eight other prisoners, escaped from the jail last month. Dudley was spotted inside a car by Rogovoy in the Mission District. A chase ensued, climaxed by a gun battle after Dudley bailed out of his car.

Doctors said Rogovoy suffered wounds of his liver, left kidney and adrenal glands.

Rogovoy's mother, Pauline Betz, lives in San Rafael Meadows, and two brothers, Daniel and David, live in San Rafael.

San Quentin Pair Denied New Counsel

A Marin Superior Court judge refused again yesterday to appoint attorneys of their choice for two of the six San Quentin convicts charged with murder in connection with the August bloodbath at the prison.

Inmate John Larry Spain, one of those involved in an escape attempt from the prison rehabilitation center asked that San Francisco lawyer Charles Garry be appointed to represent him and that his marin lawyer, Stephen Koolpe, be relieved.

Garry, who has represented Black Panthers and other liberal and radical causes, asked permission to speak but Judge Joseph G. Wilson refused his request.

He told Garry and comments to the court would have to be addressed through Koolpe.

Garry remained quiet during later proceedings, but Spain was removed to a holding cell when he continued to demand loudly that Garry be named his lawyer.

In a similar matter, the judge also refused to release San Rafael attorney Richard Tarrant, who said he gave up criminal practice six months ago. Tarrant had asked that San Francisco attorney Edwin D. Caldwell be appointed to represent convict Huge Pinnell.

The session also was marked by an incident in which San Rafael attorney Theodore Lachelt was spat at four times by his client, Willie Tate, as the lawyer bent over to talk to him.

The judge yesterday also heard arguments and took evidence in on a motion by Fleeta Drumgo's attorney, Richard H. Breiner, that Drumgo's restraints be removed in the court.

Testimony about Drumgo's behavior by a San Quentin officer was taken in a closed session after the judge decided open testimony might prejudice his case. Two lawyers who tried the Soledad Brothers case in which Drumgo was recently acquitted in San Francisco testified in open session they did not consider the inmate dangerous and that he had been well-behaved during that trial.

State Reports First Increase In Unemployment In 11 Months

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California unemployment rate returned to the level of last November with an increase from 5.8 to 6.2 per cent in March, the Reagan administration has announced.

Sigurd I. Hansen, state Department of Human Resources Development director, said Friday he was "disappointed" in the March increase—the first unemployment hike inRf11 months.

"But the trend over the year has been down and we are confident that the long-term picture will continue to improve," he said.

Hansen also pointed out that the number of job seekers declined from 603,000 in February to 579,000 in March.

The nationwide jobless rate also increased during March from 5.7 to 5.9 per cent, the Labor Department reported Friday.

The HRD said the last monthly increase in the state's unemployment rate occurred in April 1971.

Hansen said total civilian employment in California increased by 69,200 between February and March to total 8,015,400. He said gains were recorded in almost all nonagricultural industries with the largest advances in manufacturing, construction, transportation, communications and utilities.

Here is an area-by-area breakdown of unemployment rates:

Los Angeles-Long Beach, 6.1 per cent, up from 6.0 per cent in February; San Francisco-Oakland, 5.8 per cent, up from 5.1 per cent; Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove, 6.1 per cent, up from 6.0 per cent; San Diego, 6.3 per cent, up from 6.2 per cent; San Jose, 5.6 per cent, up from 5.1 per cent; Riverside-San Bernardino-Ontario, 6.4 per cent, up from 5.9 per cent; Sacramento, 5.3 per cent, up from 5.2 per cent; Fresno, 6.1 per cent, no change; Bakersfield, 5.7 per cent, down from 5.9 per cent; Oxnard-Simi Valley-Ventura, 6.1 per cent, up from 5.6 per cent; Stockton, 7.5 per cent, up from 7.2 per cent; Santa Barbara-Santa Marra-Lompoc, 5.7 per cent, up from 5.3 per cent.

Former Missionary To Speak Tomorrow

Dr. B. L. Nichols, a missionary emeritus of the First and a visiting professor at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Strawberry last year, will be the guest speaker at tomorrow's 11 a.m. service at the Sausalito First Baptist Church.

WITH ENERGY

MITS First Lady Engineer Energy Charged

By DIANE CASSELBERRY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — Dr. Mildred Dresselhaus surges through everything she does with crackling energy.

Perhaps that's only natural for a full professor of electrical engineering —the first woman to be so named at Masachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

Dr. Dresselhaus dreams up research projects for her students and plays the violin in a chamber music group with other professors and students.

She teaches graduate courses in solid state physics and has helped liberalize the undergraduate admissions policy.

Recently named associate head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, Dr. Dresselhaus is a policymaker for the largest academic department at MIT, which has the top-ranked graduate school in the country.

IMAGINATION SPARKS the professor's fast-paced conversation. Words like "wild" and "far out" bounce around her office walls like concepts in a science lab.

As a research physicist at MIT's Lincoln Laboratory, she worked on energy levels in solids, with emphasis on optical and magnetic properties of materials.

"Engineering fields will probably get around to using that stuff in about 10 years," she says. "That's the way the schedule usually works."

Dr. Dresselhaus moved from Lincoln Lab to MIT's main campus in 1967 as the Abby Rockefeller Mauze Visiting Professor.

The Mauze fellowship was left by John D. Rockefeller's daughter to bring to the university distinguished women scholars who could inspire women students professionally and personally. And in 1967 MIT needed some coeds to inspire. The school was admitting only about 50 women students a year.

Dr. Dresselhaus began studying admission applications in her free time —after putting her four children to bed at night, or during one of their music lessons.

"WE FOUND that women always had to be much better than the men who were admitted," she explains. To increase the number of women students on campus a more equal cutoff point for women was soon set up, a new dormitory was built, and male professors were invited to help with the application evaluations for women students.

"The guys were snowed by the quality of the girls who were applying," she says. "They weren't as strict as we had been, and the number of women admitted practically doubled."

Women now make up 10 per cent of the MIT student body, a "somewhat better ratio" in Dr. Dresselhaus's opinion.

During her second year at MIT, Dr. Dresselhaus was appointed professor of electrical engineering. While holding the Mauze chair, she began having lunch regularly with a small group of undergraduate and graduate women.

"We talked about nuts and bolts problems, things that were close to the heart," she says. "They asked me what it was like to lead a double life, with career and family.

"My answers —if they were answers —were very flexible," Dr. Dresselhaus continued. "Mostly I described the options, like whether to start a family while you're still in school or to wait until you're better prepared financially."

IN JANUARY Dr. Dresselhaus expanded her luncheon meetings into a women's forum open to all students, faculty, administrators, secretaries, and wives at MIT.

The response was immediate, but somewhat overwhelming. More than 100 women showed up at the first meeting, some of them with belligerent demands. "I didn't know whether I could handle that kind of situation — especially their antagonism toward men," Dr. Dresselhaus recalls.

The forum members gradually talked themselves into tackling some of the immediate problems facing women at MIT: limitations on advancement, need of child care facilities, athletic facilities and scholarship needs.

They also discussed some "very subtle things" such as how it feels to be the only girl in a class, what it means to be an unappreciated secretary.

"Although the number of women at MIT has grown," Dr. Dresselhaus explains, "conditions haven't yet adjusted to us. Most of what we're doing at the forum is bringing these things into the open."

THE FORUM meets every Monday for one hour to consider a general topic. Subgroups of secretaries, professors, counselors, and others then meet again during the week to take up details of the Monday discussion and to make written policy recommendations to the MIT administration.

"I'm strong on performance," she says, "and although I'm not a 'libber," I do think that women bring initiative and imagination to a job.

"When we start getting things done," she continues, "perhaps the guys will see that it would be nice to have a few more of us around."

Consumer Education Program Paying Off

By KATHLEEN NEUMEYER

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI)— Housewives in Southern California's Orange County have found a way to help themselves and others too.

Some 250 women have attended consumer education classes offered for the past four years by the Agricultural Extension Service of the University of California, learning how to manage money and use credit wisely, how to plan low cost meals, and how to buy food and prepare it economically.

Then, through a program called Women Who Care, graduates of the course volunteer their services to the poor, asking the welfare and probation departments to assign them a needy family to help.

"This all grew out of my feeling that our program in consumer education wasn't reaching low income people," says Mrs. Dorothy A. Wenck, the instructor.

"The poor need help in utilizing their resources, but we were reaching the middle class.

"It makes a big impression on the welfare families that these women are volunteers. They feel if the women aren't getting paid to help them, they must really be interested in them."

"AND IT also helps that we are housewives," says volunteer Vivian Picker of Garden Grove.

"We're not experts with a lot of knowledge. They feel if we can learn these things, so can they."

Mrs. Wenck says the program appeals to women who feel they can use the consumer education themselves, and who want to do something useful with their free time. It is a way of personally getting involved in charity, rather than stuffing envelopes or raising funds.

Anna Justus of Santa Ana counsels a divorcee who must support her eight children on $355 a month.

"She had been feeding the kids on $16 for two weeks," Mrs. Justus recalled. "When I started with the family all the children were in classes for the mentally retarded. One of the youngsters actually is mentally retarded, but most of them were just sluggish from poor nutrition. They were eating nothing but potatoes."

Mrs. Justus arranged for the family to get food stamps and advised the woman on budgeting and nutrition.

"Now the 12-year-old boy and one of the girls are on regular classes and doing fine," she reports.

"I also made arrangements at the market where she always shops for the manager to give her the castoff vegetables that were still good.

"Once she got a bushel of peaches that weren't bad at all. But she didn't have any jars to can them in, and she called me to ask what to do. She had a cabinetful of plastic containers she had bought at one of those home sale parties, so we froze all the peaches in the containers."

"You mean she had a freezer?" Mrs. Wenck asked.

"Well, no," Mrs. Justus admitted. "I kept them in my freezer for her."

Rita Muzikar of Anaheim advised an elderly woman who was having trouble learning to manage a smaller income.

"Her husband had owned his own business and they had always had enough," she said. "Then when they didn't have as much, she just couldn't grasp how to budget it.

"Her husband was ill and had to have special, expensive foods. I pointed out to her that just because he had to have extra lean ground beef, didn't mean she had to buy enough for both of them. It was like a light bulb flashed. She said, 'Of course, I can eat cheaper meat myself.'"

Mrs. Picket spends about 15 hours a week with her "caseload," driving them places, shopping with them, and helping them with their problems.

"But benefits accrue to my own family. I grew up in a large family, and I feel keenly for my own children not having aunts and cousins nearby. Some of my families serve that function for us. One old lady I drive places bakes for us."

IT BEATS THE DULLNESS

Sally Hearne, a physical education high school teacher, volunteered and was accepted last December as a member of Courtland's volunteer fire department. She joined because she thought "it would really be neat to be a fire fighter," and because she considers Courtland, 15 miles from Sacramento on the Sacramento River, a "downright dull town." Since joining she has fought two house fires and a railroad trestle fire. Here she is shown cooking at home and donning her fire fighting gear. (UPI Telephotos)

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

The Big Question: Is She Happy Or Just Game Playing?

DEAR RAP:

Listening to people say how much freedom kids have today makes me sick. I'v almost 16 and I really dig my mother. This isn't a complaint. I just want everyone to know not all teens are out "on the loose."

Here are some of the things I can't do:

1. Go out with my girl friends.
2. Go out with boys.
3. Go to dances, parties, etc.
4. Talk on the telephone, unless my mother answers, then asks the girl her name, where she lives and what she wants. (Absolutely no boy calls.)
5. Bring kids to the house.
6. Go shopping, unless accompanied by my mother, sister or brother. (I like all of them lots, so that's no problem.)

Some of the things I am allowed to do:

1. Go to work.
2. Go to school.
3. Go to church every Sunday, morning and evening.
4. Baby-sit for my married sister. (I have to, but I don't mind.)

My mother is from the old country and worries a lot about what people will say, and temptations and things like that. I love her. — JOANNE

DEAR JOANNE:

Evidently you're happy, so I'll keep my big typewriter shut, though it's a terrible effort! —SUE

DEAR JOANNE:

My big typewriter has to say: "Dear Mother of Joanne — Please read between her lines and let your daughter become a normal American teen-ager! She won't disappoint you. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

"Liar" asked how to cure himself of lying and exaggerating.

I had this habit of making a big deal out of everything, and it was losing me friends.

So every time I started to exaggerate, I'd write my version into a story, afterwards. Then I'd tell my friends and family the real truth, and let them read the "fabrication." Pretty soon I was just writing those imagined things and not saying them. I got me some good grades in English. — DAN THE LIAR-LICKER

DEAR RAP:

You probably won't print this, but I have to say it.

I'm getting tired of hearing over and over about the terrible things that only the Caucasian race is supposed to have done. Whites are becoming so weighted down with guilty consciences that it's hard to function normally; thus we can't really "rap" with people of other races: we're either apologetic and silly or belligerant and on the offensive.

Really, we aren't the only ones guilty of cruel and inhuman treatment. For example, practically all slaves were furnished the slave traders by stronger black tribes who captured members of weaker tribes and sold their "brothers" into bondage. Very few white traders went inland and captured their own blacks. This is historical fact.

Which doesn't make whites any less at fault —but it DOES spread the cruelty to blacks also.

Whites are blamed for decimating the Indians, but they fought each other, too. Japanese concentration camps were horrible — so is war!

Isn't it time we stopped beating ourselves over past mistakes that we can never change? I'm tired of being made to feel responsible for what my ancestors did.

This is an open letter to those of minority races: please help me feel at ease with you. I can't, so long as I'm — BLAMED UNFAIRLY

Got a problem? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel — or both, in care of the Independent-Journal, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.)

Several Solutions To Armhole Woe

DEAR EUNICE,

My "waterloo" in sewing is fitting a pattern that has a curved seam ending in the armhole. I am fairly large in the bust and this shaping always appears too high, making the bust area look too tight. Can you help with this alteration?

MRS. R. B.

DEAR MRS. R. B.,

This is one of the most difficult of all fitting adjustments. I would always suggest making a muslin before you proceed, and if you ever get it to fit correctly, keep it and use this muslin over and over for future patterns.

The section of your pattern with the shaping for the bust is the section that includes the side seam. You will notice that this is the section with the curve for shaping. The curve must be lowered and often increased in size. At the same time, you must take out a little of the curve which is too high for you. Some women find this an easier adjustment if they simply lower this section of the pattern about 1 inch when cutting, as soon as they have cut the area close to the armhole. After lowering this and cutting the bust area, you will also have to change the notcys which appear on the front section. They too, will have to be lowered.

I would suggest a simpler remedy. Try to find a pattern where this side section comes up to the shoulder instead of curving out at the armhole. This is a much easier alteration because you can also adjust your shoulder width at this point. Another type of construction is also very successful. This is fitting through darts, which usually appear below the bustline and at the underarm. These can be lowered without any complications.

Don't be discouraged. Every woman is an individual and therefore every woman has some alterations to make. The trick is to understand your own figure and to be able to choose the right patterns with the least amount of alterations. Be cautious about over-fitting. This only emphasizes parts of your body you don't want emphasized.

MRS. V. L. SAWYER, Charlotte, N.C., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestions:

When you are putting machine buttonholes into sheer fabrics, it is difficult to mark them accurately. This idea worked perfectly for me. Cut a strip of tissue paper identical to the right front of your garment. Carefully mark each buttonhole, spacing and length on the paper. Pin the tissue over the front of garment, placing pins between each buttonhole as well as the top and bottom and continue machine stitching your buttonholes. They'll look great, the paper pulls away easily and they are always accurate.

DEAR EUNICE,

Is it possible to convert the conventional type waistband to an elastic waistband in slacks? There is too much bulk in the slacks with elastic and without the darts.

MRS. L. K.

DEAR MRS. L. K.,

It all depends on the fabric you are using. If you are working with knits, the extra "give" or stretch qualities of the knit works perfectly without darts, using elastic for the waistband. However, when you are working with woven goods, you will not be able to slip the garment over your hips without the extra "give." Perhaps you could reduce the size of the darts and still use the elastic, thereby eliminating part of the extra bulk at the waistline.

You must experiment before you make your decision. Ordinarily, you must use a zipper for woven type fabrics.

DEAR EUNICE,

I'm making a dress that is very blouson in the bodice and is made of light weight fabric. I simply can't get the center back zipper to lay nice and smooth. It causes the back of the bodice to poke out and I lose the blouson effect.

MRS. R. E.

DEAR MRS. R. E.,

In this type of garment, it is better to use two separate zippers. If you can't find a light weight separating zipper for the bodice, you can apply a 24-inch light weight zipper. The extra length will simply hang down in the skirt. Then apply a 7-inch zipper to the skirt section.

Many times you will find this type of pattern will suggest using buttons at the bodice back and a short zipper for the skirt section. It is impossible to achieve a blouson bodice attached to a straight skirt by applying just one zipper.

Another tip about zippers. Did you know that machine stitching a zipper into a garment adds quite a bit more stiffness to the seam? If your fabric is very light weight and soft, and there is not much pull on the zipper, it is best to apply both sections by hand and not use the machine for any part of your application. When there is so much choice of fabric for any pattern, you must try to think some of these applications out and use the one that seems most logical to you.

ART REVIEW

Education Is Theme Of Dominican Show

By LAURA DEVENDORF

In exhibits housed on three floors of the Marin Civic Center this month, art students at Dominican College in San Rafael have arranged displays ". . . designed to increase community awareness of the quality and extent of the educational opportunities at Marin's only four-year college."

If that sounds as dry as dust and about as hard to choke down, it isn't. Even in the fourth floor library area, where the exhibit is most pointedly educational, it is still entertaining.

Accompanying the exhibit's predictable assortment of brochures is the word, "DOMINICAN," spelled out in letters three feet high in which college scenes come alive through transparent photographs silk-screened in layers of plexiglass. This unusual display was designed by Masatoyo Kishi, assistant professor of art, and executed by students in his classes.

The third floor area outside the supervisors' chambers is filled with weaving, watercolors and graphics which are significant mainly for the techniques they expose. Excitement here is limited to a few, such as Veronica Renard's wax resists on paper which can be sensuous or whimsical.

And there are several weavings which are also quite attractive. These include Pat Todd's thready, subtly colored layers and Kay Simon's nubby map-like design in rust, turquoise, grays and brown.

Lynne Pflueger's "Brown Sand," is a darkly beautiful flow of purples with hints of orange, over the crusty texture and color of natural sand. And her "Red and Purple," is stunning, with the same technique drawn in these colors over raw white canvas.

Most of Susan Shepard's work continues this pouring, vibrant color, while Cynthia Mobraaton climaxes it in "Violence," a series of angry, clotted pools of red, poured on black, green, purple and orange.

The exceptions to these styles are the two dreamy, fading figures painted by Wilma Cliff and the photo image portrait projected in acrylic on canvas by Michelle Brown.

If how all this art, which can be seen through April, explains the Dominican College scheme seems vague, there are photographs captioned with philosophical thoughts scattered throughout the exhibits which make that connection. The quotation by William James, for example, makes it with beautiful simplicity. "The greatest use of life is to spend it for something that will outlast it."

KNOW THE LAW

California Highway Patrol

Drivers Often Are Distracted

The slower driver is generally not aware of what he is doing because he has allowed himself to be distracted by his own personal problems or passengers in his vehicle. Total concentration is needed in order to keep traffic flowing smoothly.

California Vehicle Code section 21654 (A) states that "notwithstanding the prima facie (posted) speed limits, any vehicle proceeding upon a highway at a speed less than the normal speed of traffic moving in the same direction at such time shall be driven in the right-hand lane for traffic or as close as practicable to the right-hand edge or curb, except when overtaking and passing another vehicle proceeding in the same direction or when preparing for a left turn at an intersection or into a private road or driveway."

HOW TO COMPLY WITH THE LAW:

Slower traffic, keep right, reminds you to keep to the right whenever you are traveling slower than the traffic is moving in your lane, except when you are prepring to make a left turn or passing another vehicle.

REMEMBER: IF you are actually driving at the maximum speed in a 65 or 70 mile an hour zone (is your speedometer accurate?) you are not required to change lanes. But the courteous and thoughtful driver will move aside and allow the other driver to go by on the left (even though that driver iu violating the law) because it is the safe thing to do. Regardless of the number of traffic lanes the far right lane is the only authorized driving lane for the slow driver.

Assemblyman John Foran, D-San Francisco is the author of all three proposals. The reflector bill was sent to the Ways and Means Committee Thursday and the other two were sent to the full Assembly.

Highways, Waterways And People — San Rafael

From high in the sky, the most prominent features of San Rafael are its canal lined with yachts and apartment houses, the Highway 101 overpass bisecting the city in the middle background, and the San Quentin Wye where Highway 101 and Highway 17 converge (at right.) Taking up where the canal leaves off, the Miracle Mile snakes between hills in the background toward San Anselmo. The houses spill over the hills (right rear) into Terra Linda. A familiar landmark is the drive-in theater at left. The old airport between it and the canal — where seaplanes flew in the 1950s — has vanished. The canal itself is the subject of longstanding controversy between the state Lands Commission and the city, the state contending that it may own the canalside lands on which the Montecito shopping center stands just below the canal's end. The large filled area of East San Rafael in the foreground also has been wrangled over for years in disputes over proposed use and the amount of filling.

PROPER ACTION

South refused the first two rounds of clubs, quite properly, and took the third club, discarding a heart from dummy. His next step was to run the five diamonds, discarding a low heart from his own hand. Then he began to think.

West had discarded the deuce of spades and the deuce of hearts. This didn't tell South any more than he had known at the beginning of the hand.

DEEP THOUGHT

South tried all the approved methods of deep thought. He rubbed his chin, scratched his head and stared at the ceiling. He even took out a handkerchief and polished his eyeglasses.

It was a bad night for inspiration. South finally finessed with the queen of hearts for some complicated reason, but it didn't work. West took the king of hearts and the rest of the clubs, defeating the contract.

WORKS BEST

After winning the third round of clubs, South should take the ace, the king and the queen of diamonds. South then leads his last club. After West has tauen his last club, for a total of exactly four tricks, he must lead a spade or a heart. Either lead gives South a free finesse for his ninth trick. He can then take the rest of dummy's diamonds.

There's a moral to this little tale. It may be very noble to make your way alone, but you get farther if you force your opponents to help.

DAILY QUESTION

Your partner opens with two notrump, and the next player passes.

You hold:
♠ - J 10 8 7 5
♥ - J 10 9 5 3
♣ - 7 6.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid three spades.

If partner raises to four spades, you will pass. If partner bids three no-trump, you will bid four hearts.

Man Accused Of Drug Possession

A misdemeanor charge of possessing marijuana has been filed against Leonard M. Dean of Mill Valley, who was arrested March 28 on suspicion of possessing marijuana and dangerous drugs.

Dean, 26, and his wife, Helen, 25, were arrested by Larkspur police along with a campanion, Clarence H. Olson III, after the manager of the Blue Rock Inn complained they were harassing his customers.

Mrs. Dean and Olson, 20, were charged with having open liquor containers in an auto, also a misdemeanor.

Christian Science Church Goal—Greater Outreaching

By MICHAEL WIDMER

BOSTON (UPI)—At a time of economic retrenchment for most religious bodies, the Christian Science Church is engaged in the largest building campaign in its 93-year history.

On a 15-acre site at the edge of Boston's Back Bay, the church of Christ, Scientist, is giving a massive facelift to its international headquarters at a cost that will exceed $50 million before construction is completed late this year.

But this impressive testament to a thriving denomination disguises the concern — restrained though it may be—of high church officials that Christian Science be attuned to the times without sacrificing the spirit and teachings of its founder, Mary Baker Eddy.

The nature of the problems facing the Christian Science Church—not unlike those confronting all religious sects—can be gauged from three recent developments: Demands from various groups that the church increase its social action programs; a gradual decline in the number of Christian Science practitioners—professional healers who are the closest thing to a clergy in the church; and the recent large deficit of the church's internationally respected newspaper, the Christian Science Monitor.

The most dramatic manifestation of demands for increased social responsibility came at the church's annual meeting three years ago when a group of black clergymen interrupted the proceedings— attended by several thousand Christian Scientists at the large-domed Mother Church in Boston — and called on the church to use more of its resources to meet the needs of black and other minority groups.

Church officials say they had already "been working on this overall situation in various ways," but they decline to be specific about the scope of such activities. In discussing its social programs, most of the Christian Science literature points to projects geared to Christian Scientists themselves.

The church says it has contributed millions of dollars in war and disaster relief, but it will not disclose its precise contributions.

"We feel it would be self-serving to release those figures," said Douglas L. Russell, supervisor of the news division of the church's Committee on Publication.

However, the church points with pride to the $1.2 million it paid to the city of Boston for taxes in 1971, including $750,000 on tax exempt property "as a responsibility of citizenship in the community."

The nature of the Christian Science Church, with its emphasis on individual responsibility, makes it vulnerable to charges of social neglect despite the church's foundation in healing, social as well as personal.

A Christian Scientist believes that the power and goodness of God is demonstrable through healings, both moral and physical. "This requires a great deal of spiritual commitment of church members," said Allison W. Phinney, assistant manager of the Committe on Publication, "but it doesn't exclude a commitment to the community. The church encourages an individual commitment but does not take a position on most social issues."

DeWitt John, one of the church's five-member Board of Directors, wrote in "The Christian Science Way of Life." "Basically, the approach of the denomination to social needs rests on the conviction that what is most deeply needed is greater individual demonstration of Christian power."

Robert Peel, editorial counselor of the Committee on Publication, echoed that thought.

"The church doesn't want institutional activities to supersede the individual," Peel said, but within this individual context the church "should move in an outward direction. There should be, and has been to some extent, more of an outreaching to society."

Because, as DeWitt John said, the Scientist thinks of his contribution to society "as stemming ... from those peculiarly religious and spiritual activities which the church alone can carry forward," most Scientists devote their energies to the church and to church-related activities.

The commitment to the church is perhaps best evidenced by the present building program which is being paid for by individual donations. The church declines to reveal its annual budget or even its membership figures, but from all indications it is one of the wealthiest, per capita, in the world.

The church has a relatively large number of professionals in the middle to high income brackets.

"There are not so very many poor people who are Christian Scientists, but there are quite a few who used to be poor before they felt the influence of this religion in their lives," John said. "There are comparatively few poorly educated Christian Scientists, and a rather high percentage are college educated. Many young Christian Scientists have embarked upon careers in business, the arts, and the professions."

Peel offered a cautious criticism of this trend.

"We are often called a middle class church but we have no business being that," he said. "We need to deepen and broaden the scope of Christian Science."

The church employs about 2,000 persons at its international headquarters which includes the Christian Science Publishing Society, publisher of the Monitor and several other church periodicals.

There are 3,237 branch churches in 58 countries, about 75 per cent of them in the United States. Other countries with more than 10 local churches include Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Switzerland, Germany, Canada and South Africa.

The Christian Science Quarterly, which contains the lesson-sermons used in every church on a given Sunday, has a circulation of 632,924 — providing a rough estimate of the church's global membership.

While the number of branch churches has increased slightly in the past 20 years and the number of college organizations has shown almost a five-fold rise during that period, the number of Christian Science practitioners has dropped sharply. The church listed 10,753 practitioners in 1950 but the total is now down to 5,848. Peel noted that the church "had tightened up the professional requirements for practitioners," but conceded that "the same factors, economic and otherwise, which are keeping persons from entering the priesthood and ministries, are also affecting Christian Science."

But perhaps the most serious problem facing church officials is the economic squeeze felt by the Christian Science Monitor, which has been at the forefront of the Christian Science movement ever since the first issue rolled off the press Nov. 25, 1908, two years before Mrs. Eddy died.

Although the church will not disclose exact figures, the Monitor reportedly is now running close to a $5 million annual deficit.

John Hughes, 41, a dynamic Pulitzer Prize winning reporter and devout Christian Scientist, was named editor of the Monitor 18 months ago with instructions to close the fiscal gap.

Besides cutting costs where possible, Hughes has attempted to brighten up the Monitor and to enhance its appeal to younger readers.

Reflecting on his task, Hughes said, "The Monitor is the spearhead of the Christian Science movement. It is received and accepted in areas which wouldn't buy the religion itself. The church has decided it must have more outreach. It treasures its old members but must also attract younger ones. The Monitor should play a leading role in that process, at the same time meeting its obligation to be a serious lay paper."

The task may not be easy, either for the Monitor or the church.

A recent survey conducted by the paper showed that the average Monitor subscriber was 58 years old, with about two-thirds of the subscribers over 45 and 30 per cent over 65. But the survey also produced evidence of the church's economic strength — nearly 30 per cent of the subscribers had incomes of $20,000 or more, lived in homes costing upwards of $35,000 and owned two cars.

OF GOD AND MAN

New Novel Offers Profound Insight Into Christian Faith

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Religious education often is offered to people as though it were some kind of evil-tasting medicine to be swallowed down for the soul's health. But it doesn't need to be that way.

Jesus demonstrated in his parables that fundamental truths about God and man can be communicated very effectively through the entertaining medium of a good story.

A writer named John Reese has done the same thing in a novel called "Jesus on Horseback," published by Doubleday.

Simply from the standpoint of entertainment, this is the best novel about America's western frontier that has come my way since "True Grit." It is full of fascinating characters, fast-paced action, and wonderfully humorous dialogue.

The author never intended "Jesus on Horseback" to be a religious book, and in a conventional sense it isn't. It's full of earthy language and earthy people —such as a madam, Bea Cunningham, and a sheriff, Abe Whipple —that you wouldn't encounter in a Sunday School quarterly.

But it also introduces one of the most complex and delightful characters of contemporary fiction, Rev. Rolf Ledger, an ex-convict who becomes a Methodist frontier preacher, very much against his own desire, because the Lord keeps throwing obstacles in his path to keep him from going back to the wild, free life of a cowboy.

Ledger is sent to prison on a false conviction, and finally gets a pardon when the man who really did the crime confesses it on his deathbed. In prison, Rolf serves as the chaplain's assistant, mainly because it is an easier job than breaking rocks. At the chaplain's insistence that he "set an example," Rolf gets "baptized" and begins to read the Bible. A humble but stubbornly courageous man, Rolf finds in Jesus someone he can understand and accept as a trail boss.

It is Ledger's concept of Jesus —never spelled out in words, but acted out in the swiftly moving narrative —that lifts this novel to the level of religious education. I do not know of any book, outside of the Bible, where you will encounter a better depiction of the real spirit of Jesus.

Ledger is not a pious man. He has a hard time sticking to his decision to give up such cowboy habits as hard drinking, swearing and Saturday night visits to Bea Cunningham's.

Like many contemporary ministers, he is frustrated by the hypocrisy, the gossip, the preoccupation with religious trivia, the indifference to real human need that he frequently encounters in his flock. Time and again, he resolves to quit preaching and go back to punching cows. But each time, something happens to make him see that this is his job, and he must see it through. One of the most moving scenes in the book depicts Rolf, who has just buried the only other minister in the frontier community, looking up at the sky.

"He just set there listening a minute, nbody else breathed a word you just bet, and nobody else heard anything, but finely old Rolf he just nodded and said, 'Well, all right, if I have to stay, I guess I have to.'"

Rolf's pay is "twenty-four dollars a month when he can collect it, plus feed for his horse, a fresh cow to milk and garden truck in season."

For this, he works long hours and not infrequently takes terrible risks, such as riding unarmed to a ranch where an hysterical woman has shot her bully-husband, and still has five bullets in the pistol.

Once the ex-cowhand complains to his friend Sheriff Whipple:

"I never had no such miserable chores when I rode for a living."

"You're still riding for a living," Abe Whipple replies. "Figger it this way, your flock ain't sheep, so you ain't really a shepherd. Your flock is wild untamed longhorns, and you ride for a living same as usual."

Rolf's wife, Samantha, worries about him. "I tell you this," Samantha confides to a friend. "If Jesus had been a married man there wouldn't have been a crucifixion. Only men get into those messes. A wife would have kept him at home."

But Samantha can't keep Rolf from answering any call for help.

"Sometimes when I see Rolf coming home, so tired he almost has to hold onto the saddle horn from the way people have been imposing on him, do you know what my first thought is?" Samantha says. "I say to myself, 'Here he comes, Jesus on horseback.'"

You can read this novel for entertainment, for inspiration, or for a profound insight into the things that really matter in Christian faith.

Strike's Money Losses

NEW YORK (UPI) —This is the day both sides in the major league baseball strike begin to lose heavily.

Today was supposed to be the start of the NBC-TV "Game of the Week" series, but the strike has forced cancellation of the scheduled game —Boston at Detroit —and both the Players' Association and the owners stand to lose $200,000 because of it.

There were 36 games scheduled to be shown on the "Game of the Week" this season, and the total package is worth $7.2 million to major league baseball. Part of that money goes to the players' pension fund, but NBC-TV does not pay off if a game is not played because of the strike.

"We will deduct 1-36th from the amount of our contract, which amounts to $200,000, for each game not played because of the strike," says Carl Lindemann, sports director of NBC-TV.

The individual clubs are also losing money rapidly. Mike Burke, president of the New York Yankees, said his club could "lose about a quarter of a million dollars this weekend" if the strike continues.

"The Yankees can withstand the loss, but some clubs cannot," said Burke. "So instead of having 600 major league ballplayers, you may end up with 500. The players are becoming very restive and so are the owners. I think they will be coming to an agreement quite soon."

There was almost a breakthrough in the strike Friday when the Players' Association agreed to have its members start the season immediately while negotiations continued provided that after a three-week period, if no settlement had been reached, the issues be submitted to binding arbitration.

The owners were quite willing to continue their talks with the players while the season was going on, but they nixed the whole idea when the subject of binding arbitration was introduced as part of the deal by Marvin Miller, executive director of the Players' Association.

"Mr. Miller continues in his

Farris Triggers Bulldogs

Sophomore Mike Farris drove in three runs with his bat and limited Marin Catholic to three runs with his arm to lead San Rafael High School to a 9-3 Marin County Athletic League victory yesterday at Marin Catholic.

The triumph kept San Rafael tied for the MCAL lead with Drake at 2-0, and left defending champion and pre-season favorite Marin Catholic at 0-2.

San Rafael scored eight runs in the first two innings to end the game almost before it began. Farris walked with the bases loaded in the first inning, and singled home two runs in a similar situation in the second.

Dave Urquhart led off the game for San Rafael with a double, and Bruce Howard reached on a fielder's choice and Dirk Gansloser walked to load the bases. Following Farris' walk, Steve D'Ambra grounded to second to bring in a run and Gary Burns singled for another.

DE MONT SEEKS 3RD IN AAU SWIM MEET

I-J Special Report

DALLAS, Tex. — Rick DeMont, having the best meet of his life at the National Amateur Athletic Union Swim Championships, is shooting for a third-place finish in his best event tonight — the 1,650-yard freestyle.

The 15-year-old Terra Linda resident swimming unattached is the youngest of the United States' Olympic hopefuls and will compete this evening in his freestyle specialty, in which he holds the Pacific Association AAU record at 15:56.0.

In action involving other Marin County swimmers, San Rafael's Joe Hislop, 17, recorded her best time of 1:57.4 in the 200 free Thursday, bettering her old mark by 1.8 seconds in placing 30th in a field of 80. She was seeded 80th in the event.

Sue Secondo, a 17-year-old San Anselmo resident, clocked 2:33.5 in the 200 breaststroke, 1.6 seconds behind her best performance.

Cookie Arrighi, 17, of Novato, affiliated with the Petaluma Swim Club, did not place in any event. She recorded a personal best of 1:02.5 in the 100 back yesterday.

Alert Pirates Win, 6-3

Some alert defensive play by Drake High School helped choke off Terra Linda's sixth-inning rally yesterday and gave the Pirates a 6-3 victory in a Marin County Athletic League baseball game at Albert Park in San Rafael.

The trimph enabled Drake, a dark horse of the deepest hue, to remain tied for first place in the MCAL with San Rafael High at 2-0.

Drake second baseman Dan Howard made an unassisted double play on a line drive by Terra Linda's Rick Trono with the bases loaded, nobody out, and two runs already in for the Trojans, who trailed only 4-3 at that point.

Minutes later, with runners on first and third, Terra Linda attempted a double steal, but a cutoff and throw to the plate by Drake shortstop Al Curtiss nailed the lead runner.

Drake had gone ahead, 4-1, on a long ground-rule double to deepest center field by Bob Mayer in the fifth inning. The two-run blow came after John Billings doubled, Jit Singh reached first on a fielder's choice and Curtiss was intentionally walked.

Billings belted a solo homer along the left field line to lead off the third. Drake's first run came on a single by Brad Herbert in the second inning.

Terra Linda's rally started with a single by Mike Allen and a run-scoring triple by Brian

HARNEY SECOND

Nicklaus Remains Stroke Ahead Of Masters Field

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI)—The ill wind that blew Jack Nicklaus no good—in fact, blew his most important shot into the water on the fifteenth hole — sent the 36th Masters golf championship into its third round today as a mad scramble instead of a familiar Nicklaus runaway.

To be sure, Nicklaus was out in front, right where everybody expected him to be, with a 36-hole score of five-under-par 139 after a one-under-par 71 Friday.

But instead of leading by a fat five strokes or so, he was ahead of surprising Paul Harney by only one stroke and such challengers as young Bert Yancey, hot Jim Jamieson, and defending champion Charles Coody all were within range. It's a lot too close for comfort —and Nicklaus says the wind made the difference.

Nicklaus remains the solid favorite to win the Masters for the fourth time, which would tie Anold Palmer's record, and would start Jack on the road to a possible professional "grand slam" of the Masters, the U.S. and British Opens, and the PGA title. But now what could have been a no-pressure romp will be a pitched battle, at least through the third round, maybe through the fourth, and maybe no victory at all.

Harney, who bogeyed the 18th hole when he knocked his second shot into the crowd, played what he called "the best round I've ever played here." It included an eagle on the 13th, three birdies, and two bogeys.

Truth to tell, Harney hasn't been much in the limelight here or elsewhere. His first win in many a year came this spring in the San Diego Open and he doesn't compete on the tour very much because, "I've got a wonderful wife and six kids and I enjoy watching them play hockey and things like that."

Yancey, from Haverford, Pa., is a chap who has set his heart on winning the Masters someday and somehow plays better here than he does in other big tournaments. His 69 matched Harney for the best score of the second round, a figure also posted by Robert de Vicenzo of Argentina who was back in a tie at 144.

Arnold Palmer was in a three-way tie at 145, and Arnie just plain wasn't talking about a dispute he lost that obviously upset him. On the ninth hole, Arnie asked for a free lift when his ball landed in the depression made when an official's chair near the green was moved. He didn't get it, and took a bogey. He appealed—and two holes later when he learned he'd lost the appeal, he immediately took a triple bogey and a bogey.

The field was cut to the low 47 for the last two rounds and the cutoff was 151, highest on the pro tour this year.

U.S. and British Open champion Lee Trevino, appearing here for the first time in three years, just squeaked in at that figure, but among those ousted were Julius Boros, Don January, Art Wall—and even a guy who broke par in the second round, Hale Irwin, whose 71 couldn't take the curse off an opening 81.

Fosse: 'Strike Nowhere'

CLEVELAND (UPI) —Cleveland Indians player representative Ray Fosse said Saturday if Indian players were able to meet he feels they would join the Los Angeles Dodgers in calling for an end to the players strike.

"I want to get back to playing baseball and the guys I talked with feel the same way," said Fosse. "This thing is going nowhere the way it is. We'd like to play and continue to negotiate. Then, if nothing developed, we could always set a deadline for another strike."

Most of the Indians are in Cleveland but seven are still scattered around the country including pitcher Gaylord Perry who is in North Carolina.

"It is difficult to call a meeting and include everybody," he said. "I'd rather not meet and vote again, unless all our players are together. It's unfortunate that we're not all in one place."

The strike is over an increase in the players pension fund.

"There are 20 of our 25 man roster who don't even qualify for the pension," said Fosse. "It's all right for veteran players to take a strong stand but we're just beginning the game and have our careers ahead of us. It's a different kind of strike for a young team."

Foster Smashes Foe In 2nd Round

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—If the World Boxing Association still has any doubts about whether Bob Foster is the light-heavyweight champion, it can ask Venezuela's Vincente Rondon.

The skillful and composed Foster scored a devastating second round knockout Friday night over the 28-year-old Venezuelan hero who had won his last 21 fights and never lost to a light-heavyweight.

From Albuquerque, N. M., Foster, now 47-5 lifetime, came to fight for keeps and with a vengeance against the man who won a WBA elimination tournament a year ago to gain the crown stripped from Foster in December, 1970 for lack of activity. After he had sprawled Rondon into a face-down stupor for his 40th career knockout, Foster remarked:

"I didn't get a chance to beat him the way I wanted to beat him"

From the opening bell, the aggressive look on Foster's face and the aggressive lefts into Rondon's face made it a oneman show. The hundreds of Venezuelan fans who flew to Miami Beach, armed with their national flag and plenty of cheers before the fight, fell silent.

In round one there was little action but Foster's jabs and combinations had him 5-4 over Rondon on the UPI card.

But in the second round the stalking 6-foot 3-inch Foster unloaded a right to the head and a quick left which sent Rondon to the canvas for an eight count.

Although the former soldier from the Caracas suburb of San Jose de Rio Chico bounced up quickly afer the count he fell victim to a new barrage.

East Stars Triumph In Honolulu

HONOLULU (UPI) — The East All Stars held off a late rally by the Midwest Friday night to win their second straight game in the fourth annual Aloha Classic by turning back the Midwesterners 105-102.

The West took on the South in the second game.

The East, shooting a red hot 58 per cent from the floor in the first half, led by as much as 12 points and went into the dressing room with a 57-52 edge at intermission.

But the Midwest, behind the shooting of Bud Stallworth of Kansas and Jim Chones of Marquette, came back to lead five times before seeing the East finally move ahead to stay, 99-98, on a field goal by Corky Calhoun of Pennsylvania.

Two free throws by Chris Ford of Villanova gave the easterners a three-point lead which they held until the end.

The East, for the second straight night, had six men in double figures, with Hank Siemientkowski leading the way with 20, Calhoun adding 19 and Bob Morse of Pennsylvania and Ford getting 15 apiece.

Stallworth was high for Midwest and the game with 24 while Bob Lackey of Marquette added 21 and Chones 20.

San Marin Leads Prep Track Race

With an assist from the rain, San Marin High School today is resting at the top of the Marin County Athletic League track and field standings, following its 74-62 victory over host Novato High yesterday.

In other MCAL action, Drake crushed visiting Marin Catholic, 95-38. In league non-action, Redwood's meet at Terra Linda and Tamalpais' meet at San Rafael were postponed due to wet grounds.

The events left San Marin atop the league with a 3-0 record, with Redwood a shade behind at 2-0. Things will stay that way at least until Tuesday, when the Redwood-Terra Linda meet will be made up, according to Terra Linda coach Berry Amsden. The Tam-San Rafael meet will be made up on May 2, according to San Rafael coach Gaylord Quandt.

San Marin's Gary Lathrop ran the fastest MCAL 880-yard run of the year, 2:01.2, in the Mustangs' victory. San Marin had nobody win two individual events, but took the meet on the basis of balance and depth.

Drake's Jim Dibble was victorious in the 120-yard high hurdles, the 180 lows and the triple jump to lead the Pirates' victory. Don Nelson was a triple winner for Marin Catholic.

Moroski Hurls Novato's Win

By LEW CODDINGTON

Pitcher Marty Moroski held Tamalpais High School at arm's length until his Novato High teammates could peck away for four runs in the fifth inning for a 5-1 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory yesterday at Tam.

The victory gave Novato a 1-1 MCAL record and dropped Tam to 0-2.

Moroski started shakily, surrendering an infield single to Tam's leadoff batter, Dave Thomsett, who advanced to second on a throwing error. Then Clifford Hall smashed a line drive that nearly decapitated Novato first baseman Jeff Pond as it whizzed by for a single, and Tam led, 1-0.

For the next five innings, Moroski gave a good imitation of invincibility. He should have retired 17 straight batters, but four more errors, including one of his own, prevented it. His control was superb, and he didn't go to three balls on a single batter during the stretch.

Novato finally got to Tam sophomore pitcher Kevin Brink in the fifth. Pinch-batter Jim Askim walked, stole second, and came home on Dennis Stanley's single. Stanley took second on Bill Busher's one-baser and scored as Mike Lamb cracked a single.

Busher tried for third on the hit and came trotting home when Tam's second baseman threw the ball away, Lamb advancing to third. One out later, Stan Conte brought Lamb home with a single.

Novato added another tally in the sixth when Busher's single brought home Pond, who had singled, stolen second, and gone to third on an error by the catcher.

Moroski, who had missed part of the non-league season with a foot injury and had not previously pitched a complete game, tired visibly in the waning innings.

Novato Board Accepts Barrie Resignation

The Novato school board Tuesday night accepted the resignation of Thomas R. Barrie, physical education teacher and head baseball coach at Novato High School, effective at the end of the school year.

"I am leaving teaching to enter the insurance business, locally" Barrie said yesterday.

"Several applications" have been received for the soon-to-be vacant coaching position, according to Novato High athletic director Al Scott, who added that no action has been taken yet on them.

Sonoma State College lost its third straight Far Western Conference golf match yesterday, falling to Cal State Hayward, 24½-2½, at the Rohnert Park Golf Club.

Gymnastics Meet

Kris Van Oeveren won five events, including vaulting with a score of 7.3, and Bob Duste won the all-around title as Terra Linda High School defeated San Rafael yesterday, 82.70 to 72.47, in a gymnastic meet at Terra Linda.

Giants Reaffirm Strike View

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Members of the San Francisco Giants held an informal meeting Friday and backed the Players Association strike against major league club owners.

Outfielder Ken Henderson, who reaffirmed his stand in favor of the strike, thought a secret ballot among players now would have quite different results from the 663-10 strike vote taken earlier.

"But the vote still would be in favor of the strike," added Henderson.

Player representative Willie Mays explained the situation to younger members of the team. And he added he was personally anxious to return to playing "if the owners agree to continue negotiations toward a settlement."

When told that members of the Los Angeles Dodgers favored returning to the playing field, catcher Dick Dietz said, "Well, they're strange people down there..."

Manager Charlie Fox, who urged the team meeting, hurled a barb or two at Marvin Miller who is representing the Players Association.

"What Miller doesn't realize is that we are not dealing here with a commodity the public needs," said Fox. "We're dealing with a special kind of human talent that the public can take or leave alone.

"The longer the players strike, the wider the gap becomes between player and the public."

Are Players Guilty Of Contract Breach?

Gene Autry told the California Angels he would sue them for breach of contract if they walked out with 600 other major league players in baseball's first strike.

Autry is principal owner of the Angels and chairman of the board of club officials. Last week while the Giants were in Palm Springs for a Cactus League spring exhibitioner with the Angels, Autry and Bob Reynolds, president of the club, met with members of the team in their clubhouse.

It was then that Autry announced his planned breach of contract suits against individual players. As yet, Autry hasn't actually filed actions in California's superior court. But if he does, a nice legal point will be at issue.

INDEED, THERE are strong legal arguments that all baseball contracts between clubs and players have been invalidated by the walkout. Baseball players negotiate their contracts on an individual basis, not collectively as members of the Major League Players Association.

The legal question therefore becomes an individual matter of responsibility in fulfilling the contract, a responsibility that cannot be legally ignored regardless of group action by the association. At least, that's the way Autry sees it.

It's not likely that other club owners will file breach of contract suits against players but it's a possibility. Autry isn't the only club owner who has investigated the legal merits of breach of contract actions.

SOME CLUB attorneys already have advised owners that the walkout cancelled all contracts. The first clause of club-player contracts states:

"The player agrees to render skilled services as a baseball player during the year, including the club's training season, the club's exhibition games, the club's playing season and the World Series (or any other official series in which the club may participate and in any receipts of which the player may be entitled to share.)"

There is no clause in club-player contracts that makes them conditional on any collective action by the players association, such as the strike that was called March 31 over increased pension benefits for players.

ANY BREACH OF contract action by Autry would be for damages. It would be silly to seek specific performance of Angel contracts. If a skilled performer doesn't wish to perform, no court in the land can make him.

The irony of it all is that all 600 striking major league players say they want to play ball but at the same time say they must remain loyal to their association.

There also is a loyalty clause in their club-player contracts. It reads:

"The player agrees to perform his services diligently and faithfully, to keep himself in first class physical condition and to obey the club's training rules, and pledges himself to the American public and to the club to conform to high standards of personal conduct, fair play and good sportsmanship."

Ali To Box Quarry; Billie Jean Wins

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

LAS VEGAS, Nev. — A heavyweight bout between former champion Muhammad Ali and Jerry Quarry will be held June 12 at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

Plans for the fight were disclosed yesterday with the two boxers in attendance at a news conference. Dawn Valley Corp. and Bill Miller Enterprises, which are promoting the fight, also said they hoped to have Bob Foster defend his light-heavyweight title against Quarry's younger brother, Mike, on the same program.

Table Tennis

VANCOUVER, B.C. — A table tennis team from China ended its exhibition tour of Canada last night by winning five of seven matches with Canadian players.

Tennis

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Top-seeded Billie Jean King crushed Karen Krantzcke, 6-1, 6-2, yesterday to become the only seeded player to move into the semi-finals of the $18,000 Jacksonville Virginia Slims International tennis tournament.

JOHANNESBURG, Soth Africa — Australia's Evonne Goolagong overcame a lethargic start today to beat Virginia Wade of Britain, 4-6, 6-3, 6-0, to win the women's singles final in the South Africa Open tennis championships.

STRIKE

adamant stand that the difference between us is only a matter of degree," said John Gaherin, chief negotiator for the owners. "And that we should get an 'Umpire' to split the matter of disagreement between us. If this were the case we could do that ourselves and we would need no help. Instead, we insist this is a matter of principle.

"Mr. Miller continues to sidestep the real issue between us —which is whether the players are reasonably entitled to a 17 per cent increase in pension benefits, or for that matter, any increase at all."

Richard Meyer, president of Anheuser-Busch Brewery which owns the St. Louis Cardinals, said that Miller's desire for arbitration was an attempt at getting a compromise out of the owners.

"This latest offer is substantially the same thing Miller offered in Phoenix before the strike," said Meyer. "Miller keeps coming back with the same demands he has had rejected by the owners.

"Miller's problem is that he had negotiated to the point of a final offer by the owners," Meyer added. "Now he wants to arbitrate so he can split the difference. We will not submit to arbitration. We won't accept the three weeks. If he wants to put on some time limit, the players may as well sit out."

Charley Finley, owner of the Oakland Athletics, said he was in favor of the players ending their strike immediately while renewing negotiations but he, too, spoke out against a time limit.

"In no way could negotiations be continued with the possibility of another strike hanging over our heads in another two or three weeks," said Finley. "Marvin Miller has always considered the owners to be stupid, but I didn't think he believed we were that stupid."

The owners' refusal to agree to binding arbitration has prompted the Players' Association to file an unfair labor charge against baseball with the National Labor Relations Board. The charge will be filed formally next week.

"The charge will be in two categories," said Richard Moss, counsel of the Players' Association. "The first deals with the owners' refusal to bargain for months, their refusal to make any proposals to us and their refusal to negotiate in good faith. That happens to be against the law.

"The second category of charges concerns a number of individual clubs where pressure has been put on players in attempts to undermine the association, where action has been taken against certain players because of their activities on behalf of the association."

2 Cub Infielders To Expos For McGinn

MONTREAL (UPI) —The Montreal Expos announced Friday night that they have sent left hander pitcher Dan McGinn to the Chicago Cubs in exchange for infielder Hector Torres and first basemen — infielder Hal Breeden.

The National League clubs said Torres, 26, will play with the Expos this season while Breeden will be assigned to the Peninsula Whips of the International League.

Stanford Gridders Begin Practice

STANFORD (UPI) —Stanford's Rose Bowl champions began spring practice under new head coach Jack Christiansen today in the hopes of earning a third consecutive berth in the Jan. 1 Pasadena classic.

Fresno Triumphs

SAN JOSE (UPI) —Backed by four doubleplays and the seven-hit pitching of Brad Duncan, Fresno State defeated San Jose State 4-1 Friday in a Pacific Coast AA baseball game.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

The practice of curling the wrist on the backswing and then snapping it as the ball is released is out of date, but many amateur bowlers still do it. For a more accurate and more powerful ball, keep the wrist firm and your fingers behind the ball. The motion of an easy, simple follow-through will provide plenty of hook.

'Hustling' Hawks Bow To Celtics

BOSTON (UPI) —Coaches Tom Heinsohn and Richie Guerin agree on one thing: The Atlanta Hawks that are in the National Basketball Association playoffs aren't the same Atlanta Hawks that stumbled through the regular season.

Heinsohn's Boston Celtics pulled out a 124-114 win over Guerin's Hawks Friday night to take a 3-2 lead in the best-ofseven series that now returns to Atlanta for a sixth game on Sunday.

But before it was over the Hawks, trailing by as many as 17 points in the first quarter, gave Boston a good scare.

There was no other action in the NBA Friday. Los Angeles and Milwaukee already have clinched their quarter-final series in the Western Conference. Baltimore and New York, tied 2-2 in the other Eastern series, resume play Sunday on the Bullets' home court.

"They're hustling," Heinsohn said of the Hawks. "They haven't given up yet. They kept coming back tonight. They cut it down to two points a couple of times."

"Our club is a different team than it was during the season," Guerin said. "This playoff, one wy or another, should help mature this club. We've got a lot of young players who are doing the job for us."

MacArthur Wins Adult Softball Contest, 7-1

Carl Selby pitched a two-hitter, Bill Kilcone hit a home run, and Kilcone and Steven Anderson went three-for-four to lead MacArthur to a 7-1 victory over Alpine Tree Service in a San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department adult softball league game last night at Albert Park.

Bob Derosa drove in Terry Onrato with the winning run in the bottom of the seventh inning to give Bourbon Shop a 4-3 triumph over Gallager Sturiale Realtors.

Redwood Wins In Swimming

Redwood High School, in danger with star Paul Cane away in Texas, rallied behind the swimming o Spencer Eldred and Warren Lager to defeat upset-minded San Rafael yesterday, 57-38, in a Marin County Athletic League meet at San Rafael.

In other MCAL swimming action, host Terra Linda High School defeated San Marin to keep its title hopes alive.

Spencer Eldred took the 200-yard freestyle in 1:54.5 (to set a new league best this year) and the 400 sree in 4:10.) Warren Lager won the 200 individual medley in 2.12.

The Class B meet at San Rafael was the scene of some controversy as the outcome of the whole meet depended on the last race, the 400 free relay, which was questioned. The race was extremely close and the two lane judges differed in their decisions. The coaches then went to the timers whose times were also different. A decision on the meet will be made Monday, announced league commissioner George Corson.

Terra Linda, Novato Golf Teams Favored

One way or the other, it will be out with the old and in with the new in Marin County Athletic League golf this season.

The league title probably will be won by either Terra Linda High School, the old champion with new personnel, or Novato High, a new challenger with old personnel.

The season will open Monday with two matches at Meadow Club near Fairfax. Terra Linda will play Redwood on the front nine and San Marin will confront Marin Catholic on the back nine, both at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday's openers will pit Novato against San Rafael at Peacock Gap and Drake against Tamalpais at Mill Valley Municipal course.

"Last year we had four kids who played for me for four years," said Terra Linda coach Bill O'Bayley. "We lost them all. Now we have all juniors and sophomores, but we will be strong, because of our well-developed junior varsity program."

Up from the J.V. squad come Kai Bergheer, Rich Purdle and Larry Cartmill to join Greg Cudworth, the only returning varsity player. Doug Talley, a fugitive from baseball, rounds out the top five.

Terra Linda plays what is commonly regarded as the league's toughest course, Marin Country Club, and will be tough to beat down the stretch, with six of its last eight league matches at home.

Novato will have a very balanced team, "with a difference of maybe three strokes between the first and fifth men," according to coach Al Scott.

Of the top players, Pat Grogan, Bob Loback and Bob Cooper all are seniors. Sophomore Bob Leach and junior Jim Vaughn round out the top five, while junior Doug Henderson and senior Steve Johnson complete the squad. Of the group, only Leach was not a varsity player last year.

If either stumbles, Redwood will be waiting. The Giants have a new coach, Bob Sargent, who replaced 20-year veteran Dick Hart. Sargent has a good nucleus in Arnold Brooks, Jeb Harrison and Scott Huber, all of whom commonly shoot 40 or less for nine holes. Redwood tied Terra Linda in non-league play at Redwood's course.

San Marin coach Andy Frauenhofer calls his team "probably 10 strokes better than last year's," and the improvement means the Mustangs will contend for the first division. John Hayes and Stan Vaughn will pace San Marin.

San Rafael coach George Lester has a young team with a number of question marks, but league coaches expressed fear the Bulldogs would jell quickly. Dan Dixon consistently plays San Rafael's best golf, but beyond that, any of eight players could come through on a given day.

Tamalpais, which had a golf dynasty until last season, will be very inexperienced this year, with only one senior, Bob Pennell. "We might play a spoiler's role, but we won't go all the way," said coach Paul Wata.

Marin Catholic graduated 10 of the 12 men on last year's team, and of the remaining two, one transferred to Drake. This leaves Colin Smith, a non-letterman last year, as coach John Bechtold's star.

Drake, coached by Vern Lull, will not be a championship contender, either, although the Pirates have a good golfer in Paul Arms.

BOWLING

Tynes' 712 Series Leads Way

A Terra Linda High School Physical Education Department equipment manager proved his versatility this week at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael.

Elmer Tynes, the 1967 and 1968 Marin County Masters champion, rolled a 712 series to gain Marin County top bowler kudos.

DRAMA REVIEW

Smooth Production Of 'Andersonville Trial'

By JAMES E. WILLIAMS

While the year is 1865, "The Andersonville Trial," a courtroom drama pitting obedience against morality, appears as fresh as some of today's headlines.

As the major spring offering of the College of Marin Department of Theater Arts, the play opened last night at the San Francisco Theological Seminary Theater on Kensington Road in San Anselmo.

The setting could not have been more perfect for the play, which recreates the war crimes trial of Capt. Henry Wirz, commander of the prisoner of war camp in Andersonville, Ga., in which 14,000 Union soldiers died of starvation and disease.

The production while rather low-keyed at the beginning, becomes a stirring emotional experience as the all-male case, deftly directed by James Dunn, warms to Saul Levitt's crisp dialogue.

The reconverted barn that was once the home of Marin's top theatrical troupe — the Festival Theater — is just the right size for this type of drama. Its rugged beams and aged woods help to take the playgoer into another era in which the Union was split by the Great War.

Heading Dunn's large cast are the experienced Marin actor Abe Kalish as Wirz; J. W. Harper as Gen. Lew Wallace, president of the court; John McDill as Otis H. Baker, counsel for Wirz, and Laurence Braude as Lt. Col. N. P. Chipman, the judge advocate.

All four grasp their indentities very well. Kalish makes a pathetic figure as he undergoes merciless questioning by the judge advocate. Harper keeps a firm control over the proceedings. McDill is quite proper as the defense counsel but lacks a real emotional level. It is Braude, starting off very conservatively, whose role swells as the evening progresses. He is most effective when he builds the argument of obedience vs. morality in the atrocities at Andersonville.

The emotional impact of the play is handled admirably by several of the witnesses called to testify against Wirz. William C. Walsh as the 19-year-old James H. Davidson, a former prisoner at the camp, touchingly recreates conditions at the camp, and James Digby as Jasper Culver, another former POW from the West Virginia hills, is most effective, too. The coldness of another witness, Sgt. James. W. Gray, is fashioned well by Reynold Acevedo.

Authenticity is the keynote of Dunn's stage setting. The court's furniture is right out of the Civic War era and the costumes are perfect in every detail. The long hair and beards — the fashion of today — add a correctness, too.

The ambitious production has 13 more performances with another at 8 p.m. today. Productions also are scheduled next Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, plus others on April 20, 21, 22, 26, 27, 28 and 29.

For any Civil War history buff, the college's production is an absorbing one — a good evening of local theater.

"THE ANDERSONVILLE TRIAL" — A two-act play by Saul Levitt. Presented by the College of Marin Department of Theater Arts. Directed by James Dunn. The cast: Gen. Lew Wallace, J. W. Harper; Captain Williams, Robert J. Jones; Otis H. Baker, John McDill; Lt. Col. N. P. Chipman, Laurence Braude; Henry Wirz, Abe Kalish; Mayor D. Ford, Robin Williams; court clerk, Steve Jennings; court reporter, Mark Schwarz; Ronald Scott Colburn, Murr y Anixt, Charles Conein, William D. Agricultural Preserve Airing Set

The third section of Marin's 210,000-acre agricultural preserve will be considered for rezoning Monday by the Marin County Planning Commission.

The area, composed of about 20,000 acres and located northwest and adjacent to Novato, includes assessor's parcel books 125, 141, 146, 150 and 157.

As with the first two sections considered, the county planning department has recommended that the bulk of the area be rezoned to 60-acre lots (meaning one homesite per 60 acres.)

Areas within Hicks Valley, however, have been recommended for 10-acre lots to provide for small-farm subdivisions.

The rezoning is required under the state's Williamson Act — which established the agricultural preserve — and is proposed as a means of protecting the agricultural industry from the encroachment of urban growth.

A 60,000-acre area along Tomales Bay already has been approved for the 60-acre zoning by the board of supervisors.

A second, smaller section south of Tomales Bay still is being considered by the planning commission.

Some ranchers and developers have threatened to take the rezoning action to court, charging unfair devaluation of property.

In another matter, the commission is expected to consider a proposal from 12 families for a "housing cooperative" in Homestead Valley. The proposal calls for 12 separate homes which would include a lodge for recreational and educational functions, a tennis court and swimming pool.

The commission will meet at 9 a.m. at the Civic Center.

Registration Taken For Rec Classes

ART REVIEW

Potters Offer Approach To Sculptural Designs

By ADA GARFINKEL

Anima Mundi Gallery in Mill Valley is a haven for craftsmen and artists of the new culture, and for anyone with an open and lively interest in today's world.

Currently, the ceramic exhibit by four local potters is sculptural more than functional, with the exception of Carol Holtzman's jars and boxes which are both. Each artist is represented by several works so that basic trends become apparent.

Funny, funky, satirical, and wildly imaginative describe Robert Richards' ceramic jars of "instant" products, such as "Instant Thanksgiving," "Instant Christmas" and "Instant Land," which come inscribed with directions for freeze-dried happiness, real-estate, and a winning football team.

Richards recently received a purchase award from the United States Information Service in its "New American Sculpture" traveling exhibit for his ceramic replica of a penny-arcade machine titled "Kissometer." He continues his exploration of the mores and morals of early Americana in his current exhibit, in "Cupid's Wheel" and "Ma Bell," However, in "Instant Uncle Sam Patriotic Buds," his focus is on events of right now.

Highway congestion and hazards, traffic snarls and accidents are the subjects of three dioramas by Everett Snowden. Although miniature in scale, the components are fully detailed, including the shattered remnants of a huge truck and a transfer print of the newspaper account of the accident. Snowden uses a variety of luster overglazes effectively and mounts the plaques on black plexiglass.

Carol Holtzman's jars and boxes are augmented by single figures mounted either on the lid or adhering to the front. Each of the characters seems to be isolated from society — perhaps by his own uniqueness. Nevertheless, they are engaging — particularly the Hasidic rabbi.

The quartet of ceramic sculptors is rounded out by Jean Stein, who builds clay frames for mirrors. Some are pressed flat and are scalloped; others are in modeled reliefs. Mrs. Stein's architectural leaning is further expressed in a hanging clay candelabra.

Gravestone rubbings from Mendocino County and England hanging on the wall are by Ross artist Kent Diehl, who has been commissioned to record all remaining Mendocino gravesites to preserve their historical legend.

English history becomes instantaneous in the following legend on one of the rubbings: "Sir Walter Raleigh, Westminster . . . the day he was beheaded: Oct. 29, 1618. READER: Should you reflect on his errors remember his many wives and that he was a mortal."

Anima Mundi Gallery, at 352 Miller Avenue, is open weekdays from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays. The exhibit will close April 29.

Symphony's Finale To Feature Actress

Actress-dancer Vera Zorina will be the special guest star with the Marin Symphony Orchestra in the third and final concert of its season Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. at the Marin Veterans Memorial Building.

She will perform the leading role in Honegger's dramatic oratorio "Joan of Arc at the Stake" under the direction of Sandor Salgo.

Prima ballerina, stage and film star, Miss Zorina was invited to create the role of Joan in the New York Philharmonic's American premiere of the Hnegger masterpiece in 1950 and has since been acclaimed as its leading interpreter. Her recording of the work with the London Philharmonic, Seiji Ozawa conducting, was released in 1968.

Appearing with Miss Zorina as Brother Dominic will be Scott Beach and vocal solosits Margot Power, Marie Gibson, Margery Tede and Daniel Parkerson. Terry McGovern and Al Newman will be narrators, and John Brebner is stage director.

The lavish production will also feature a combined chorus of 200 voices composed of the Contra Costa Community College Choir, Philip Eaton, director; the Carmel Bach Festival Chorus, Kenneth Ahrens, director; and a special children's chorus from Marin Country Day School and San Francisco's St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Barry Mineah, director.

SERVING ALL OF MARIN COUNTY

32 SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, APRIL 8, 1972 EDITORIAL PAGE

The Editor's Notebook

Double Anniversary Brings Back Memories

TOMORROW'S OBSERVANCE of two anniversaries at Hamilton Air Force Base brings back old memories.

The great depression of the 1930s was inflicting grave economic wounds in our country when the idea of an Army air field for Marin County first drew serious attention.

Marin had a scant 40,000 population. It was suffering its share of economic woes. A big construction project that would dump a million or more dollars into the local economy and thereafter be followed by a steady additional payroll was indeed attractive.

Marin community leaders of te day rolled up their sleeves and went to work. The San Francisco Bay Area would need air protection in the event of a future war. An airfield should be close to the coastline to meet any threat readily, but it should be protected by hills from off-shore gunfire.

A place called Marin Meadows, near Ignacio, filled the bill.

Marin Meadows was in fact tidal marsh, but a system of dikes was erected to keep bay tidal waters out.

The Army sent a young captain named Howard Nurse out to plan and supervise construction. Captain Nurse proved a wise choice.

As Frank Lloyd Wright was to do a generation later, Nurse visited the site, was impressed by the rolling, oak-studded hills, and determined to design something to take advantage of the natural beauty.

He decided that California-Spanish architecture would fit best on the terrain and he went to work. The runway and the hangars were located down on the flats, on filled ground. The rest of the original structures were fitted among the oaks and among the rolling hills. The architecture was uniformly California-Spanish. Landscaping included palms and banana trees. It became the Army Air Corps' preferred base.

DEDICATION DAY arrived in 1935. California Gov. Frank F. Merriam was there to present the field to the Air Corps. Brig. Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold (later to command American air forces in World War II) was present to accept the field on behalf of the Air Corps. The official ceremonies opened with the playing of the Star Spangled Banner by San Anselmo Post 179 American Legion Band.

The field was named for Lloyd Andrews Hamilton, the first American officer to fly with the British Royal Flying Corps in World War I. While leading an attack on a German aerodrome in Belgium, he was shot down. He was only 24 when he was killed.

Hamilton Field became home for the 7th Bombardment Group. In 1938, an early B-17 "Flying Fortress" made headlines by being the first bomber to fly coast to coast non-stop, from Hamilton to Mitchell Field, N.Y.

When Japanese carrier plans made their sneak attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941, that assault coincided with the arrival of a flight of B-17s dispatched to shore up American defenses in the Pacific. Those B-17s had taken off earlier from Hamilton Field; they belonged to the 7th Bomber Group.

During the most critical period of the "cold war" which followed World War II, Hamilton was the base for fighter planes which maintained round-the-clock readiness to repel any attempted attack on San Francisco Bay Area.

TOMORROW's FESTIVITIES will mark the 42nd anniversary of the founding of Hamilton and the 25th anniversary of the establishment of the Air Force as a separate military service standing shoulder to shoulder with Army and Navy.

The public is invited to an open house from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

On display will be many of the Air Force's newest and finest craft, along with vintage craft from earlier times, including some World War II models.

An Air Force Band from McChord AFB will play, radio controlled model planes will perform, air rescue operations will be demonstrated.

There will even be a fashion show of Women's Air Force uniforms.

Highlight of the day's activities will be the appearance of the Air Force's official demonstration team, the Thunderbirds, performing their precision aerobatics.

Nearly 40 years ago, one of this newspaper's antecedents said editorially to the personnel at Hamilton: "We are happy that you are here and we trust you will find your stay in our Marvelous Marin one of happiness for today and pleasant memories for tomorrow . . . Greetings and a cordial welcome to Marin."

It would be hard to add anything significant to that wish today. The welcome mat is still out for the people of Hamilton Air Force Base.

Bouquets And Brickbat

BOUQUET to the League of Women Voters for its effort to register as many as possible to vote before registration for the June primary closes next Thursday.

BRICKBAT to the San Rafael Board of Education for approving adding a high school course in "History of Revolution" while ignoring the very real need to restructure the high school curriculum to more thoroughly prepare young people to assume the duties of adult citizenship at age 18.

BOUQUET to Dominican College on its re-accreditation by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges for an indefinite period, and for the accreditation team's compliment on its high quality of instruction.

BOUQUET to the San Anselmo School District's "supercommittee" of citizens for giving the school board some specific proposals on cost-cutting. While they may be extreme, they provide welcome relief from committees who so often say the only answer is more taxes.

TODAY'S WORLD

"I've just about had it giving you intensive care Saturday and Sunday mornings."

"To the battlements! We're under siege by supermarket carts."

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Letters for "What Our Readers Say" are welcomed. To be published, they must bear the writer's signature and address (only the city will be printed, but street or post office box address must be included.) Try to limit letters to 200 words. The editors reserve the right to cut long letters, or to reject any that may be libelous or in bad taste.

18-Year-Old Vote Forum Scheduled

Your editorial of March 27, entitled "Schools Responsibility Toward New Voters" is very apropos.

The 18-year-old vote puts even greater responsibilities for citizenship preparation on school trustees, administrators and teachers. "Young voters must be given an opportunity to discover why the political process represents a viable and exciting way for them to become involved in the affairs of this country," as you aptly quoted.

However, just what is the school's responsibility to the new voters and voters-to-be? How far should teachers go in teaching political philosophy? Is one semester of American government enough to prepare a student to vote intelligently? Should a political party be allowed on campus for any reason?

These and other vitally important, but controversial, questions will be discussed at a PTA sponsored forum at San Rafael High School on Thursday, April 13, at 8 p.m. in the auditorium.

We hope these discussions will help give direction to those teachers, administrators and trustees who are charged with preparing our youth to become responsible citizens. The public is invited and encouraged to participate.

Tainted Blood Danger Not Present Here

We are writing to assure the people of Marin County that the article by Joseph C. Harsh entitled "Tainted Blood from Paid Donors Causes Many Deaths", published on your editorial page, April 3, does not apply to the blood program in San Francisco and Marin.

The 56 hospitals in San Francisco, Marin and six other Northern California counties receive all of their blood for transfusion from Irwin Memorial Blood Bank of the San Francisco Medical Society which depends totally on volunteer blood donors.

The achievement of 100 per cent volunteer donors is no easy task for a blood bank. It is difficult diffucult record to maintain because the demand for blood increases each year, while the number of people who donate remains relatively small. In our service area, only 5 per cent of persons eligible to donate blood actually do; and yet we need 100,000 blood donations a year. We have been able to sustain an all-volunteer donor program thanks to those dedicated persons who give up to five times a year.

Whether our communities continue to receive all volunteer blood depends on the willingness of more people to become blood donors. They are urged to give blood at our Marin Blood Center, 506 Fourth St., San Rafael.

There Just Isn't Anybody To Help Poor Old Plotkin

WASHINGTON — My friend Plotkin, who has a candy store in Hollis, N.Y., called me excitedly the other day and said, "The government just hit me for $1,230 in back taxes, as well as a $240 penalty. This is outrageous because they told me at the time I could deduct several business expenses that they have now disallowed."

"Now don't get upset, Plotkin. I'm sure we can work something out. Why don't you fly down on your private plane and . . ."

"Private plane? What the hell are you talking about?"

"If you have a private plane, it makes it a lot easier to get senators and congressmen to listen to your story."

"You know I don't have a private plane, wise guy."

"ALL RIGHT, all right. I'll tell you what you do. Have your lobbyist get in touch with some of the boys at the Justice Department."

"What lobbyist? I haven't got a lobbyist. What kind of candy store do you think I've got?"

"It's pretty hard to get much done down here without a lobbyist. Let me think. Wait a minute. I've got an idea. Call Peter Flanigan at the White House. He can probably fix things for you."

"Who is Peter Flanigan?"

"He's in charge of helping businessmen who get into difficulty with the government."

"Why would he help me?"

"Because of your contribution to the Republican National Committee."

"I DIDN'T MAKE any contribution to the Republican National Committee."

"Well then, how do you expect to get any help from the White House?"

"Who said I expected help from the White House?"

"Of course, it's not too late to make a contribution to the Republican National Committee," I said.

"How much would I have to give?" Plotkin asked.

"It doesn't make any difference. What about $400,000?"

"Come on, will you knock it off! Fifteen hundred dollars ia a lot of money to me, and I called you because I thought you could help me."

"I'M TRYING to help, Plotkin, but there are certain ways of doing things down here, and no one likes to deviate from them. Have you thought of seeing acting Attorney General Kleindienst?"

"Why? Could he help me?"

"He could, but he wouldn't because that would be a conflict of interest,"

"You know I'm not going to get to see Kleindienst," Plotkin said.

"Probably not. Say, why don't you go down to the Kentucky Derby and talk it over with John Mitchell?"

"I've got a candy store to run. I can't go to the Kentucky Derby."

"Where would Dita Beard be today if she thought the way you did?" I asked.

"Please be serious. What can I do?"

"YOU MIGHT sell your stock before the public finds out what a mess you're in."

"I don't have any stock. I own the candy store by myself."

"That's a pity. Most corporation executives usually make a buck on their mistakes by selling their stock before the word gets out."

"Then you're not going to help me?"

"I would if I could, Plotkin. But no one down here is going to talk to anyone who hasn't made a political contribution, doesn't have a private plane or a lobbyist or can't find time to go to the Kentucky Derby."

Mood Of Disillusionment Dominates U.S. Political Scene

SAN FRANCISCO — As you travel across the country, one topic comes up without fail: high prices. While taxes run a close second, it is what the housewife pays at the check-out counter in the supermarket as the total climbs from week to week that dominates every conversation.

Unless the upward climb can be checked, the effect on the election is entirely predictable. It will be a vote against forces that seem to be out of hand, with indignation fanned by the facade of wage and price control. The bland assurances out of Washington will be worse than useless unless the promise to bring food prices down brings results, and quickly.

It is an issue that jumps all ideological hurdles to touch the individual where it hurts.

A SIMILAR widely voiced complaint is about the mails and the failure of the business approach to bring any improvement over the political system that left at least some control in Congress. The feeling that the mails can no longer be relied on contributes to the confidence gap between that remote entity, government, and the citizen.

The mood is one of disillusion and disbelief. I talked in Kansas City with the executive of a large grain cooperative who is close to farmers and small-town businessmen in a half-dozen midwestern states. He reported that at their annual convention attended by 2,000 co-op directors, the feeling was one he had never encountered before. For the most part they were simply turned off from the national scene, whether they were Republicans or Democrats.

None of the Democratic candidates has caught on at this stage. They do not present the stature of a president. As they move through the marathon primaries they are diminished by talk of local issues as though they were running for sheriff, promising to clean up the lake front and get more money for training law-enforcement officers. The number of candidates adds to the confusion and uncertainty.

ALL THIS MAY BE resolved when the last of the primaries here in California in early June rolls around. But California's winner-take-all primary could further confuse the picture. If seven or eight men, plus Shirley Chisholm, are still in the race, a candidate with no real chance of nomination can emerge with a small winning margin.

Whether Richard Nixon is the solid alternative to the scramble of the Democrats is questionable. The Nixon problem in past elections is still very much with him. It is simply that his personal appeal is so low-voltage. There he is, the respected President of the United States, making one pronouncement after another on television. But as to personal appeal — the appeal of a Franklin Roosevelt, a Wendell Willkie, a Jack Kennedy — it is not there. This should be unimportant. China, which has receded into the background, and of far greater significance Russia, and the agreements the President hopes to sign there, should dwarf all considerations of personality.

Yet, that is not the way it works. Lacking is the element of trust. For all the President's hyperbole, the credibility gap — with conflicting statements on prices, I.T.T., inflation, the plight of the dollar in world markets — cannot be laughed off. That earnest face on television is not reassuring.

REPUBLICANS are loyal. The challenge to the President from within his own party is minor. As it is cranked up in September — with the hoopla of the bands, the Nixonettes, the staged applause, the contrived television panels — the campaign is meant to brush away the doubts and turn out the voters. It may succeed by the sheer weight of the fact that Mr. Nixon is in the office.

Why bother to change? Will a change make any difference? That is part of the mood of disillusion and cynicism.

STROUT IN WASHINGTON

Busing Dispute May Bring Definition Of Courts' Powers

By RICHARD L. STROUT
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Though President Nixon doesn't say so, his proposal for a moratorium on school busing for the purpose of integration is a challenge to the federal courts. Busing is a big problem. Curtailing the power of the courts, if that is what develops, is even bigger.

Courts were curbed after the Civil War. During a period of turbulence the Army set up military tribunals in Indiana. The Supreme Court under Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase threw them out.

In the famous case, Ex Parte Milligan, the high court dismissed the argument of military necessity: "No doctrine involving more pernicious consequences was ever invented by the wit of man than that any of (the government's) provisions can be suspended during any of the great exigencies of government. Such a doctrine leads directly to anarchy and despotism."

But Congress flagrantly violated this ruling; it established military tribunals throughout the conquered South. When these were challenged in the McCardle case, Congress rammed through a law depriving the high court of jurisdiction. As modern historians noted, "The Supreme Court sat supinely by and submitted to the outrage."

General Grant said of this type of legislation that "much of it, no doubt, was unconstitutional"; but it was hoped that the laws enacted would serve their purpose before the question of their constitutionality could be submitted.

LET US CHANGE the scene. On March 13, 1972, a member of the House cited the McCardle case of 1968 as a precedent for removing the jurisdiction of federal courts over busing. Article III, Section 2, of the Constitution, he noted, outlines the jurisdiction of the courts but adds "with such exceptions and under such regulation as the Congress shall make."

The congressman added: "This constitutional authority vested in Congress was confirmed by the Supreme Court itself in the landmark case, never since challenged or overturned, of ex parte McCardle — 1868."

The three branches of the United States government have been chary about provoking confrontations over their rather ambiguous boundaries. It is doubtful if the present Supreme Court would support McCardle now; historians note that the tribunal was at its low ebb right after the Civil War.

THE ADMINISTRATION shown some indecision. The White House originally said Mr. Nixon would not go on TV on busing, because the issue was too complex and emotional, but after Gov. George Wallace's victory in the Florida primary Mr. Nixon went ahead.

The TV statement failed to reveal how sweeping his actual legislative proposals were. The White House flew in Prof. Charles Wright of Texas and Robert Bork of Yale to brief reporters on constitutional aspects, but when the press asked that the conference be on the record, HEW Secy. Elliot Richardson took on the explanation and the professors were not heard.

Congress has authority to limit or otherwise prescribe the jurisdiction of lower courts in certain matters. One estimate by the Library of Congress is that Congress has exercised this authority over 77 statutes. Often cited is the Norris- La Guardia Act (1932). This barred courts from issuing anti-strike injunctions in certain cases.

LED BY THE UNANIMOUS Supreme Court under Chief Justice Burger, lower courts have agreed that busing is "one" tool to end segregation.

Mr. Nixon argues that lower courts have gone beyond the Supreme Court. He does not want to wait till the issue is settled by normal procedure. He wants "an immediate stop to new busing in the short run." Busing, he argues, "has become a symbol of social engineering on the basis of abstractions." He says that "this is not a time for the courts to plunge ahead at full speed."

Before the debate is over we shall probably learn more about busing, and also about the role of courts in a tripartite government.

Satellite Uhuru X-Rays The Cosmos For Earth-Shackled Astronomers

By ROBERT C. COWEN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON — For astronomers who study the invisible universe, a satellite named Uhuru has literally been a liberation.

Its Swahili name means "freedom." For more than a year, its X-ray eyes have enabled earth-shackled scientists freely to survey a cosmos from which our atmosphere perpetually shields them. They didn't even suspect its existence until a decade ago.

As revealed by its emissions, that X-ray cosmos is as majestic, as scientifically challenging, as the universe of light which has fascinated mankind for ages.

HERE ARE objects whose X-ray brilliance outshines their optical and radio power. Here is an apparently universal bath of radiation which hints of the universe's origin and destiny. And here too are outpourings of power which raise basic questions as to how galaxies of stars are born.

The discovery has taken astronomers very much off their guard.

With instruments carried high aloft by balloons they can detect the more energetic and penetrating of cosmic X-rays. Detectors carried above the atmosphere by rockets can gain clear, even if short, glimpses of the entire X-ray spectrum.

Although astronomers knew of this observing potential, they had no faith that cosmic bodies other than the sun could produce X-rays detectable at earth. So they didn't bother to look for them when balloons and rockets first became available.

WHAT A SURPRISE it was in June, 1962, when Riccardo Giacconi and coworkers at American Science & Engineering Company (ASE) picked up a strong signal from the direction of our galaxy's center! This is still the most powerful known X-ray source within our Milky Way Galaxy. Lying in the constellation Scorpius, it is known in astronomer's shorthand as Sco X-1.

Even the ASE team doubted what it had observed. By the following April, however, Herbert Friedman and associates at the United States Naval Research Laboratory had also picked up Sco X-1 plus a second source in the Crab Nebula.

By late 1970, the hazy observations from balloons and fleeting glimpses from rockets had picked out several dozen sources. They had also detected the general X-ray flux that comes at earth uniformly from all directions.

Then, on Dec. 12, 1970, from an Italian floating platform off the coast of Kenya, American rocketeers launched Uhuru. They named it in honor of the anniversay of Kenya's liberation. It equally represented the astronomers' liberation from the frustratingly spotty data to which they had been confined up to then.

SPINNING AROUND once every 10 minutes, the satellite scans a five-degree-wide band of sky. It can pick out features as small as half a degree by five degrees in size. Instead of tantalizingly brief views of an interesting feature, astronomers now can study it in some detail for several hours or more at a time. Then the satellite's sensors can be shifted to map out a new band of sky.

At this writing, Uhuru was still sending in data, although it had exceeded its expected lifetime. In a quick look at its observations, ASE Space Research Division director Herbert Gursky reported the few dozen known X-ray sources had jumped to 116. He expects many more eventually to be found.

About 75 of these lie within our own galaxy. Some are in its great spiral arms. Others, which seem to form a distinctive class, lie toward its center.

The remaining sources seem to be well outside our Milky Way system. A few have already been identified with unusual galaxies.

THE MORE scientists study these various X-ray emissions, the more they are faced with fundamental questions about our universe and its stars and galaxies.

Do galaxies, for example, condense from cosmic dust and gas, as astronomers have long believed? Or are some of them created violently? Are they flung out of parent galaxies as some astronomers now speculate?

Certainly the giant galaxy M-87, the largest known, seems to be creating daughter galaxies when you look at its pictures. There's a jet coming out of it that's some 4,000 light years long with bright knots along its length. Farther away, still in the direction of the jet, galaxy M-82 looks very much as though it too has been cast off by M-87.

With 30 times the mass of our Milky Way system, M-87 has plenty of matter for creating new galaxies. It also shows signs of massive energy releases in its core which could be throwing out the material.

Radio observations indicate a source in there only a couple of light-months in diameter. That's a very small volume to generate the tremendous energies radiating from it. This, in itself, implies something unusual going on. X-ray emissions suggest it must be dramatic indeed.

IN 1965, Dr. Friedmans' group found that M-87 "shines" more brightly at X-ray wave lengths than in the radio or visible light range. Since then, he and others have measured changes of up to 10 times in the X-ray power over periods as short as a few months. Enormous energy outbursts must be involved.

Then there are the Seyfert galaxies, a class with unusually bright and compact cores. These galaxies put out in orders of magnitude more power as infrared (heat) rays than they do as light. Now, X-ray astronomers find they are even more powerful at X-ray wavelengths.

These are truly "invisible galaxiies," Dr. Friedman observes. Neither he nor any other astrophysicist understands them now. But he feels certain that studies of the X-ray emmissions of the Seyferts and galaxies like M-86 will do much to help unravel the mystery. X-rays seem to be their "preferred" mode of radiation.

The general X-ray background raises equally intriguing questions. Astronomers do not yet know whether it comes from a multitude of individual sources or whether it just arises diffusely throughout the universe.

ASTRONOMERS WHO believe the universe has evolved from the explosion of a primordial mass, link these X-rays to a universal bath of radio waves they have detected. They think the radio waves are left over from the era of the original explosion. Perhaps the X-rays also reflect conditions of that far away time.

On the other hand, Dr. Friedman points out that the X-rays may also tell something about the future. If the universe is expanding outward from a primordial explosion, no one yet knows whether it will go on expanding forever or whether it has enough internal gravitational force gradually to slow its expansion until it begins to collapse upon itself.

Visible stars and galaxies account for only about 3 per cent of the mass needed to provide the gravity to halt expansion. The "missing" mass may be in the form of gas diffused throughout space. This gas, if it exists, would be in such a state that we probably could observe it only through X-ray emissions.

If the X-raybackground does indeed come from this gas, Dr. Friedman estimates that the X-ray data indicate there is enough of the gas to halt the universe's expansion. But he warns the X-rays could just as likely be coming from within clusters of galaxies rather than from all of space.

In that case, recent observations he has made of the Coma and Virgo galaxy clusters suggest that much of the "missing mass" may still be "missing."

GAS WITHIN the clusters generates X-rays at a much higher rate per unit mass than would gas spread throughout all space. This means that clusters could generate all the X-rays needed to account for the observations without having enough mass to stop the expansion of our universe.

For cosmologists interested in the future of that universe, X-rays thus may tell a crucial story.

Meanwhile, back at our own Milky Way galaxy, X-ray stars tantalize astronomers with visions of superdense stars. At least one of them may be that ultimate cosmic trap, a black hole. This is an object so massive and so highly compacted that nothing which penetrates its gravitational field beyond a certain point can ever escape. Not even light can get away.

According to Einstein's general relativity theory, astronomers expect eventually to find three classes of what they call collapsars.

Gravity tends to collapse all stars to a radius at which the pressure from its internal nuclear "fires" counters the contraction. As the nuclear furnace "burns" low, contraction resumes.

STARS WITH masses up to about 1.4 times that of our sun squeeze down into what's known as a white dwarf. This has a diameter about the size of the earth.

Somewhat more massive stars can collapse violently, throwing off some mass in a supernova explosion. The residue contracts until all electrons are squeezed into the protons of their atoms leaving nothing but neutrons inside them.

The next stage beyond a neutron star, the stage a star with several times our sun's mass should reach, is that of the black hole.

Astronomers know plenty of white dwarfs. They think they have identified a number of neutron stars as what they call pulsars. These are objects that emit radio and sometimes light pulses at highly regular intervals. However, astronomers have yet to locate a blackhole. Now they think some of their X-ray observations may lead them to one or more of these strange objects.

A source in the constellation Cygnus, Cyg X-1, shows the kind of X-ray emission theorists would expect from a black hole. It suggests that the object may be one member of a binary star pair. Material flowing from the companion star onto the black hole could generate the X-rays.

Cen X-3, a source in the constellation Centaurus, which also seems to be a binary star, may be a neutron star or white dwarf.

WITH DATA pouring in from Uhuru, X-ray astronomers expect to sharpen their perception of such intriguing objects quickly.

Their view now is being enhanced by detectors on board Europe's recently launched TD-IA satellite, which scan the spectra of some cosmic X-ray sources.

Meanwhile, Britain is preparing to follow up with a second X-ray observing satellite, UK-5. This, in turn, will be followed into orbit in 1975 by the first of several American High Energy Astronomical Observatories. A massive spacecraft, the HEAO satellite will carry 12,500 pounds of scientific equipment.

Uhuru has opened an era in which the X-ray detector should become as powerful a tool for exploring the cosmos as the radio telescope.

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The South Vietnamese general stood knee-deep in the Dong Ha River. Stragglers slogged across the river past him, fleeing the Communists.

Brig. Gen. Vu Van Giai had been ordered to hold at the river. In anger and frustration, Giai took off his helmet and hit one soldier on the head, demanding to know why he was retreating.

The Communist offensive had already driven the South Vietnamese back 10 miles below the Demilitarized Zone (DMZ).

By week's end the offensive had become a multi-pronged attack and posed a threat to Saigon itself.

South Vietnamese troops abandoned the city of Loc Ninh 75 miles north of Saigon after heavy rocket attacks. And a fresh Communist offensive was reported in the Mekong Delta south of Saigon.

As the weather cleared, U.S. airpower went into action. About 500 planes from land bases and from four carriers in the Gulf of Tonkin were available.

At least 10 U.S. planes had been shot down since the offensive began. Some of the pilots were believed to be hiding in the jungles.

Search planes and helicopters were out, swooping low over the trees in attempts to spot them before the North Vietnamese did.

Around The World, Around The Clock

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Sen. George S. McGovern now says there is a 50-50 chance he'll wind up with enough delegates to become the Democratic presidential nominee. Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace says he has as "good a chance" as anyone. The South Dakota senator was a solid winner in the Wisconsin primary. Wallace nosed out Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota for second. Maine Sen. Edmund S. Muskie was fourth. New York Mayor John V. Lindsay finished sixth and dropped out.

NEW YORK — Tough talk from both sides in the Major League baseball players strike. The club owners took the position they wouldn't pay "another damn cent" for pensions, and a players' representative accused them of talking "as though the players are a bunch of stupid jerks." The pbulic, according to a New York ad agency survey, was siding with the owners.

HARRISBURG, Pa. — The Harrisburg Seven consider the outcome a victory. The jury deadlocked at a 10-to-2 vote for acquittal on the government's main charge that the antiwar activists conspired to disrupt the government. However, the Rev. Philip F. Berrigan was convicted of smuggling a letter out of prison. In addition, he and Sister Elizabeth McAlister were found guilty of attempting to smuggle other letters in and out of prison.

MIAMI — As Adam Clayton Powell wished, his body will be cremated and the ashes scattered over his Bahamas island retreat of Bimini. The man who became the most influential black congressman in U.S. history died Tuesday of cancer.

NEW YORK — The silver-haired comedian, now 82, stood in his spotlighted theater box waving and blowing kisses as the audience in Philharmonic Hall gave him a standing ovation. After 20 years in exile, Charlie Chaplin was back in the United States. The years of bitterness over, his rejection by the federal government in 1952 after troubles over women, politics and income taxes were over. "I am born again," Chaplin said.

WASHINGTON — "The venereal diseases have reached epidemic proportions throughout the United States," the said. It came from the National Commission on Venereal Disease and recommended that coeducational courses on the dangers of VD be offered in all schools starting in the seventh grade.

A CULTURAL GULF

A Low-Keyed Expert On China

By GEOFFREY GODSELL
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

His office is not in the Harvard Yen Ching Institute, wihh its two stone Chinese lions outside, where you would expect him to be. Instead he is tucked away in a rather ugly building behind the biology laboratory — a building that was once the home of the university's Reserve Officer Training Corps, and looks it. There he has a large roomy office filled with second-hand furniture and papers and books all over the place.

And when you finally confront him — a lanky, low key, but very earnest Australian — he manages to make you feel at home and is willing to talk about China and the Chinese just as long as you can put questions to him.

The afternoon I was there, he had a huge pile of letters on the table by the sofa where we sat. They were letters that had poured in since his memorable hour-long confrontation with columnist William F. Buckley on the latter's weekly "Firing Line" television program.

Buckley had been among the 87 newsmen who accompanied President Nixon to Peking, and his clear intent was to savage Terrill about his two long Atlantic Monthly articles on China, now developed into a book. But Terrill refused to be a victim.

As many of the people who have since written to Terrill say, Buckley found himself more stood up to than usual. Others say they have never seen the usually commanding and articulate Buckley get so ragged.

Almost all the letters, Terrill said, have been very kind. (Those that were not took the line that Buckley had the measure of the Communists and stood up to them and that Terrill had no business rocking the boat.)

Some of the friendly letters were from Americans telling Terrill that they were embarrassed a non-American should have been treated as Buckley treated him. Others were from Chinese who thought Buckley had demeaned China and its leaders.

Terrill had wide exposure on American television during the Nixon visit to China. He was a member of a CBS anchor team in New York that intelligently filled in the gaps when the TV men accompanying the President were left with nothing to say. Terrill himself has made two trips to China: one in 1964 and the other last summer, on which "800,000,000: The Real China" is based.) He knows more than most of us about China, yet he emphasizes that China is still a mystery.

He says he knows more about the way government operates in France or Australia than government does in the vast land on which he is a specialist.

The reason for this, he explains, is the cultural gulf between China and the Western world, particularly the United States. In the expansion of Western culture, China remained a holdout. Christianity never made much headway there. And because China so stubbornly resisted the West, it got shattered.

But when China sought from the 1930's onward to pick itself up from this experience, it found itself replacing traditional Chinese Confucianism, which had been alien to the West, with Chinese communism, which was hostile to it.

(If you ask Terrill about the cultural gulf between the Japanese and the West, he says the gulf is not as great because the Japanese compromised. They found a way to put the new, which came from the West, into old vessels and so managed to preserve much of the old in their society, from the Emperor downward.)

Yet, Terrill concedes, Chinese communism does preserve some features of traditional Confucianism, particularly its preoccupation with social relationships and social morality. Unlike Marx or Stalin, he says, the Chinese Communists have not made a god of industry. (Chinese cities, he points out, are shrinking in size.) And Chinese communism is as "this worldly" as is Chinese Confucianism.

Terrill thinks much of the coverage of the Nixon Peking visit by the accompanying American newsmen had "a bit of a starry-eyed quality about it." It was a pity, he says, that the press team did not include a few linguists. And he suggests that many of the dispatches reflected the tendency of Americans to want intimacies quickly.

When detente comes, he suggests further, Americans are quick to draw conclusions about the quality of the society involved. He himself is more skeptical, largely because of the cultural gulf that is still there. Another point he makes is that the Chinese are far less interested in Americans than the Americans are in the Chinese.

Though he does not think the end of the Vietnam War has been brought any nearer by Nixon's Peking visit, he does expect the proposed exchanges between the United States and China to go ahead — provided the Americans continue to move toward withdrawal from Taiwan. He believes Washington and Peking are in earnest in working for detente because of their mutual apprehension of Russian power in the world.

Terrill says that when he was in China last year, he found the Chinese having no deep emotions about Americans. Neither did he find deep emotions about the Japanese. There were, and still are, extravagant attacks on present Japanese policy. But he sees these as steps to ensure that China does not eventually have to face a Japan entrenched in Taiwan or South Korea.

When it came to the Russians, however, he found conversation in China often spiraled down into mudslinging. The Chinese feel themselves still living with humiliation at Russian hands.

"Didn't Khrushchev once say, "a Chinese companion asked him rhetorically last summer, "that five Chinese share one pair of trousers?"

I asked Terrill if he would have done anything differently had he been President Nixon in China. "I admire his step," he replied. Then there was a long pause, ended by his adding cautiously: "If anything, we may look back and think he was too cautious on Taiwan. With so many bigger things at stake, we may regret allowing Taiwan to continue to be as big an obstacle as it is to complete normalization of relations.

"I regret there was apparently no serious discussion on arms control and disarmament. What is the detente for? Surely it should be to allow resources to be diverted from military to economic and social spending. That is what the underdeveloped world still needs more than anything else."

Some of those phrases are all too often empty jargon coming from the lips of politicians. But not from Terrill, who leaves you feeling he really does care about people.

Ranchers File Claims For Loss Of Sheep

Three Tomales Bay sheep ranchers have filed claims with the county over the loss last month of 97 sheep, apparently slaughtered by a single dog.

County Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell said the claims, totaling $2,910, were filed under a provisions of the state Agricultural Code which requires reimbursement from county dog license revenues.

Mitchell said, however, that he is recommending only $2,424 be paid, based on $25 per head.

The sheep ranchers have requested $30 per head, based on current market value.

He added that dog license revenues total $160,000 per year in Marin, but that the amount only partially covers operation of the humane society pound. As a result, he said, the reimbursement of sheep and cattle killed by dogs falls on the county's general fund, which is supported by property taxes.

Ranchers submitting bills to the county are Walton Burbank, for 60 lambs totaling $1,800; Gwyn Burbank, for 26 lambs totaling $780, and Irvin Jensen, for 11 lambs totaling $330.

The claims will be considered Tuesday by the board of supervisors, which last month approved a similar claim submitted by Arthur L. Poganski of Kentfield. That claim totaled $250 for the loss of 10 sheep.

Meat Firm To Pay Consumer Fraud Penalty

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —A major California meat wholesaler has agreed to pay $3,500 in civil penalties to settle a consumer fraud suit charging the firm with adulterating so-called "100 per cent beef patties" with pork spleens and soy flour.

Under the stipulated judgment, Haro's Meat Packing Co. of Los Angeles and its president, Harry Ditlove, must correct advertising claims on its "100 per cent beef patties." It also must establish a quality control program to insure compliance.

The suit was filed in October by the state Bureau of Food and Drug and Sacramento County Distrct Attorney John M. Price.

County investigators confiscated 6,000 pounds of the firm's beef patties. They reported finding substantial percentages of pork spleens, soy flour and excess fat in the patties.

Joint Meeting

The regular meeting of the Marin County Redevelopment Agency scheduled for Tuesday, will not be held. The group instead will meet jointly with the marin county housing authority at 8 p.m. April 20 in the Marin Civic Center planning chambers to discuss the proposed Marin City master plan.

Commission Backs Reed

The chairman of the San Anselmo Planning Commission yesterday supported City Councilman James F. Reed's denials that city officials harbored secret plans to widen Center Boulevard at a cost of $9 million.

Richard A. Raznikov, candidate for city council, made the charge Monday at a gathring of senior citizens. Incumbent Reed denied the claim yesterday.

Duane C. Ragan, commission chairman, said, "I've never had any knowledge" of such plans, which he added "would have a tremendous impact on the city ... and certainly" would have to be made public through hearings before the commission and the council before any action.

Ragan added that he and "other citizens were quite upset" by Raznikov's claim, and said the candidate should be asked to furnish documentary proof to back his charge.

Air Force Unit Has Vacancies

The 452nd Air Force Reserve group has immediate openings for men and women with prior service, according to the group information office.

College graduates under twenty-six-and-a-half years of age also can qualify for flight training, fly on weekends at the base and be paid while training, the office reported.

Anyone interested in further details can call the group office at the base Mondays through Fridays 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Tree Ordinance Hearing Monday

The Novato Planning Commission will have a public hearing on a proposed heritage tree ordinance at 8 p.m. Monday at the Novato Community House.

Under the proposed ordinance a property owner would be required to obtain a use permit before altering or removing a tree having a trunk with a cricumference of at least 48 inches at least 24 inches above the ground.

The Cities Choose Their Councilmen

See Page M2

A Lively City Election Campaign

By DON KEOWN

One of the liveliest and most interesting municipal election campaigns in recent Marin County history comes to a close Tuesday when voters in 10 of Marin's 11 incorporated cities and towns go to the polls to choose their councilmen and other elective officials.

Only San Rafael, a charter city which holds its municipal elections in odd-numbered years, will not be voting on Tuesday.

And in all 10 Marin County cities where municipal elections will be held Tuesday, there are contests for council seats, some of these having drawn huge fields.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

IN SOUTHERN Sonoma County, too, it will be election day, with residents of Rohnert Park and Cotati voting for council members, and each with contests on their ballots. Petalumans, like San Rafael residents, will wait until 1973 for their next city election.

The crowded entry lists, the pressing issues, the influx of new faces upon the election scene, and the continued presence of some of the county's most familiar and most colorful local political personalities have all contributed to a higher degree of interest in this year's city elections than is normal.

Candidates' nights have been better attended than generally in the past, both by candidates and the public. The aspirants for council seats have taken full advantage of newspaper and radio forums to express their views. Campaign literature has been freely circulated. And the issues have been debated and explored on a more down-to-earth basis than is usual for municipal elections.

IN MARIN, with 70 candidates in all vying for 26 council seats in the 10 cities and towns, Novato and Sausalito have drawn the longest lists of contenders with 11 each. In Sonoma County, Rohnert Park has 10 aspirants.

Two Marin County cities — Fairfax and San Anselmo — even have races Tuesday for the seldom contested city treasurer's post.

The issues that have been most frequently and heatedly discussed in Marin by the candidates have been matters pertaining to the environment and to zoning as a tool for controlling future growth of the various municipalities. Police personnel, dog control, council-community relations, park acquisitions, recreation, city services, council salaries, traffic problems, annexations have been just some of the other topics explored and debated.

Rising taxes have been a matter of concern in most of the contests. Even the Vietnam War has figured as an issue with some candidates.

BUT THE MOST frequently heard phrase of the 1972 campaign has been "open land" with council aspirants often differing as to how their city should go about insuring some undeveloped, breathing space within its environs for future generations.

In two Marin County cities there will be votes Tuesday on controversial issues.

A citizen petition drive caused the Fairfax City Council to place on Tuesday's ballot a proposal to assure continued recreational use of the Marin Town and Country Club property by a rezoning that would head off a proposed residential development on the 23½ acre resort. Approval of the proposal would likely send the dispute into the courts.

In Sausalito, the voters will make known their views upon the controversial William E. Spangle plan — the Park Plaza Plan — that would convert the heart of downtown Sausalito into a series of pedestrian malls, walkways and open-space park.

ALSO SCHEDULED for Tuesday is a special bond election in Marin County Service Area No. 13 — the Lucas Valley — that would authorize a $315,000 bond issue for the acquisition of approximately 285 acres of land on the Thomas A. Nunes ranch overlooking the Lucas Valley for park and recreational purposes and to protect its present status as open space. Otherwise, proponents of the bond issue say, population pressures will result in continued uphill development that can only be contested project by project on a piecemeal basis before the planning commission.

"The success of this bond election and acquisition of this land establishes a precedent for preserving the remaining hills of Lucas Valley as open space through planning controls," state bond issue proponents say in their ballot argument.

In Mill Valley, residents will be voting on a $275,000 bond issue to build a new fire station in East Mill Valley. A $240,000 bond issue failed to obtain the required two-thirds vote for approval in June, 1971.

Generally, municipal elections in Marin County have attracted about a 40 per cent turnout of the registered voters, as high as 50 per cent in the case of especially vigorous contests.

IT SEEMS likely that several of Marin's cities next Tuesday will surpass the 50 per cent turnout figure, producing some unusually heavy ballotings for their municipal elections.

THE CITY HALL or town hall is where the government that most directly affects the average citizen functions. And 10 of Marin County's 11 municipalities — all but San Rafael — will be selecting city council members on Tuesday who will meet in those halls to set city policies. In Southern Sonoma County, Cotati and Rohnert Park residents will vote, too. To help voters make their decisions in a year in which issues are especially complex and heated, most of today's edition of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is devoted to the election — to the candidates, their backgrounds, and their platforms. President Richard M. Nixon's wage-price freeze last fall spared Larkspur citizens from having to decide at least one issue on their municipal election ballot Tuesday.

The city council last year decided to let Larkspur voters determine whether their councilmen should be paid — up to $150 a month.

After "Phase Two" froze pay increases to 5.5 per cent a year, City Atty. Robert W. Elliott advised the council that going from zero pay to any sum at all would obviously exceed the 5.5 per cent. The council tacitly dropped the issue, and the city staff left the pay referendum off the ballot.

However, Larkspur's 5,129 voters still face the task of selecting three councilmen from a field of seven candidates with widely divergent views about the city's future.

Incumbents William G. Fleckles, Earl J. O'Grady and Benton A. Sifford Jr. are challenged by one man, Robert H. Lee, and three women, Jane Epidendio, Elizabeth Johnson and Joan Sestak.

Campaign rhetoric has revolved almost entirely on environment and planning issues. Keeping North Ridge as undeveloped open space has been supported by all the candidates — but with differences as to the means. The future of Little King Mountian, Corte Madera Creek and other potential open spaces has also been discussed.

WILLIAM G. FLECKLES, 42, is an attorney with offices in San Francisco. He is just completing his freshman term on the city council.

He led a field of five candidates in 1968, coming onto the council after service on the Larkspur Planning Commission from 1965 to 1968. He was commission chairman in 1965. He also was a candiaate for one of two council seats open in 1966, but ran third in a field of six.

A Marin County resident since 1960, he lives at 331 Bretano Way with his wife Jacqueline and three children. His was born in Chicago and attended University of San Francisco.

Fleckles has said he is opposed to moratoriums designed to "keep people out" of Larkspur, but has voted for them to give the city time to review its controls over development and environmental quality, particularly on Little King Mountain and the North Ridge.

He has called for a new police headquarters to replace what he branded a "broom closet," favors annexation studies for the entire San Quentin Peninsula, and a moratorium on development of the former Southern Pacific right-of-way to give the city a chance to fit it into the traffic or open space patterns.

EARL J. O'GRADY, the current mayor, is seeking his third term on the council. O'Grady, 52, is a Pacific Telephone Co. executive and lives at 370 North Almenar Drive with his wife, Marilyn.

O'Grady also was a Larkspur Planning Commission chairman — in 1964. A native of San Francisco, O'Grady was graduated from the engineering school of the University of California at Berkeley and was an engineer for the California Division of Highways. He was a flying officer in the Army Field Artillery during World War II and Korea conflict, receiving a number of decorations.

O'Grady said he is campaigning to "keep the lid on our city taxes while we continue to provide necessary and vital services, and second, to maintain our lovely Larkspur environment." He warned that if taxes are not controlled, "we won't be able to afford to live in Larkspur, no matter how pleasant it is."

He called for "rigid control of our open areas," with immediate review of the city grading and zoning laws.

BENTON A. SIFFORD JR., 58, incumbent councilman, is seeking his second term. He was mayor last year. An insurance firm assistant vice president, he lives at 14 College Court with his wife, Gail. They have three grown children.

Born in Portland, Ore., Sifford was educated in Oakland schools and graduated from the University of California at Berkeley. He was an infantry captain in World War II.

Sifford noted that he has voted several times for building moratoriums because, although Larkspur has grown, "it has not had all the quality I would like to have seen." He called for more commercial development to broaden the tax base and increase sales tax revenue to the city.

He has urged that the city planning commission be expanded and given more power formally as "the planning agency" for Larkspur, responsible for meeting state requirements to update the city's long-range plans.

ROBERT H. LEE, 46, is a seven-year member and current chairman of the Larkspur Planning Commission. He is running for public office for the first time. He owns Robert H. Lee and Associates, industrial designers, in San Francisco.

Lee and his wife Elizabeth, live at 41 Madrone Avenue. They have four children, two of them grown. A native of Los Angeles, Lee attended Tamalpais School, the University of California at Berkeley and the United States Naval Academy.

"Explosive growth" of Larkspur is Lee's major concern. He warned that the city is now the second fastest growing city in Marin County and faces even more growth in a year or two with completion of the ferry terminal. He called for creation of a separate, adequately staffed planning department.

He has called for limits on new apartment building, putting the North Ridge into a study zone, guaranteed public access to Corte Madera Creek, and an end to "the belief that landowners have an innate right to develop their properties regardless of consequences."

JANE WESLEY EPIDENDIO, 56, is making her third run for a council seat, after trying before in 1960 and 1966.

She and her husband, Ernest, have operated a market on Magnolia Avenue for more than 35 years. They have two grown sons. Mrs. Epidendio was born and reared in San Francisco. Her father was John Rice (George) Peak, a long-time Marin resident and San Francisco auto agency owner.

Mrs. Epidendio lives at 73 Via La Brisa, but pointed out that she and her husband have built five homes during their years in Larkspur.

She said the city needs a councilwoman who not only lives but works in Larkspur and who will "seek the aid of federal and state agencies to improve our community rather than further burdening the taxpayers and the property owner."

She has said that if and when any city moratorium blocks property owners' development of their holdings, there should be a property tax moratorium as well.

ELIZABETH JOHNSON, 29, lives on the Larkspur Boardwalk with her film-maker husband, Marlin, and their 11-year-old daughter. Mrs. Johnson is a third-year law student at the Lincoln University School of Law in San Francisco.

An ardent conservationist, Mrs. Johnson has strongly criticized apartment developments along side Corte Madera Creek as "a Chinese Wall without the antiquity." She called herself "essentially a political innocent, involved . . . because . . . everyone must take responsibility for the quality of life in his or her community."

She has spoken in favor of protecting small local business firms from harmful new "chain" stores, of preserving the North Ridge, Corte Madera Creek marshlands and other open sapce, and for more "workshops" and "gripe session" for closer ties between the public and the city council.

JOAN SESTAK, 37, lives at 359 Wilson Way with her architect husband Arthur and their two children. She was a founder and past chairman of the Larkspur Town Meeting and has been active with Friends of the Larkspur Library, the League of Women Voters, homeowner groups and school organizations.

Mrs. Sestak has said that in Larkspur "too much is changing too fast" and that there should be more coordination between citizen groups and city officials. She cited an 87.8 per cent increase in Larkspur population between 1960 and 1970, and the increasing number of apartment dwellers.

She has urged "sensible planning" to determine "highest use" of Larkspur property, and strong efforts to preserve open spaces. She said zoning and planning ordinances need updating, and studies are needed of traffic, city government efficiency and ways to preserve "Larkspur's small-town character."

Mrs. Sestak declared she would be a full-time councilman if elected.

A Big Council Field In Novato

Growth And Environment Spark A Lively Campaign

By FRANK FARRARA

Environment and growth are the key issues in a wide open race for the Novato City Council with 11 candidates vying for three seats.

The field for Tuesday's election includes an 18-year high school student, a woman attorney and an incumbent, and the campaign has been a busy one with scores of coffee sessions and a heavy schedule of candidates' night meetings.

Some residents, 10,423 of whom are registered and eligible to vote, view the next four years of city government as crucial and believe the outcome of the election will determine the community's direction for many years.

THE NOVATO Area General Plan is under revision, the city's downtown plan is to be implemented and the Highway 101 bypass is to be completed. All are major factors in the city's future.

Novato residents have indicated, through neighborhood committees and a community congress, that they want growth controlled and the city to retain its character as a semi-rural, suburban community.

Sentiment to preserve the environment has been strong and any extensive commercial aviation at Hamilton Air Force Base has been strongly opposed.

Candidates have differed as to how tight the lid should be placed on growth, and as to how restrictive the city can be in preserving the environment before a property owner's rights are trampled.

HOUSING, WHAT kind and how much, has become an issue with some apprehension that a flood of townhouses would change the character of the city and that a policy to encouraging low and moderate income dwellings would result in attracting "outsiders" and in creating "ghettos."

Proponents of low and moderate income housing say the need already exists and that such housing would serve local residents and local employees who now can't afford to live in Novato.

With Mayor Joseph D. Gargiulo and Councilman Wayne Womack retiring from office and David Price Jones, an apointee, running for the first time, three seats, representing a majority vote on the council, are open.

Two years ago, two councilmen generally oriented toward business were ousted, and two planning commissioners elected, a result cited by many as indicating that residents wanted a change in outlook.

Whether that trend will continue will be decided Tuesday by the voters.

The candidates are:

GEOFFREY J. BYWATER JR., an 18-year-old Novato High School student who is a member of the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and president of the student body. He is also a member of the Novato Youth Advisory Committee and the Marin County Youth Commission. A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., he has been a resident of Novato since 1968 and works part-time at the Marin Country Club. He lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Geoffrey Bywater, and four sisters at 11 Brassie Court.

Environment is a prime concern, Bywater said. "We must protect and conserve the natural beauty of Novato's environment by keeping down the number of townhouse units and their overall density.

"I am also concerned about stopping the rising wave of apathy among the young people and within the community."

He gave priority to "bridging the gap between the young and adult voters," and said he could serve as "an outlet and inlet for young voters' thoughts and concerns." He sais a youth center is needed where youth "can channel their energies towards constructive activities."

DANIEL P. DONOVAN, a 39-year-old attorney and pharmacist, who is a graduate of the University of California College of Pharmacy and the Lincoln University Law School in San Francisco. He is an owner or partner in five pharmacies in the Bay Area and served in the Air Force as a first lieutenant in Korea.

Donovan, his wife, Angela, and four children live at 435 Fairway Drive. He is a native of San Francisco and has lived in Novato for nine years.

Donovan said the "number one priority for Novato is completion of the Novato General Plan which should establish a reasonable density for Novato in future development." He advocated a density of 2.5 units per acre.

He has commended the Novato Police Department and recommended that the department be expanded to bring the 27-member force up to "adequate strength."

Donovan has backed development of neighborhood parks rather than using available park funds to acquire a single major city-wide park. "Put the parks where the people are," he said. He also has advocated encouraging a centralized community shopping center to keep sales tax dollars within the city.

ANTHONY M. GULLOTTA, 55, a native of Mount Kisco, N.Y., and assistant elections officer in Marin County. He is the Grand Knight of Our Lady of Loretto Council, Knights of Columbus, past district deputy and past state program adviser. He attended New York University for two years, has studied in schools of real estate and public management, and formerly was a real estate representative for American Machine and Foundry Co. He and his wife, Sylvia, reside at 209 Grande Vista, and have four children. They have lived in Novato 11 years.

Gullotta said, "Light manufacturing and other allied industries should be encouraged to settle in Novato ... firms such as electronics, pharmaceutical offices, receiving and distribution, etc.

"Municipal government should look to reorganize its departments, and search for more efficient operations within departments in order to meet current budgets instead of looking for new areas of taxation to meet current budgets. We have enough federal, state and county taxes as it is. Let us try to lower our city tax if possible."

Gullotta also said that the city should take a "hard look" before granting building permits for any more townhouse units.

DAVID PRICE JONES, 37-year-old attorney, a member of the firm of Carrow, Jones and Applen, who was appointed to the council last April to fill the unexpired term of Douglas M. Merrill. He is a past president of the Novato Civic Foundation, former director of the Marin County March of Dimes and former director of the Marin County Bar Assn. A native of Berkeley, he has been a resident of Novato for nine years. Jones, his wife, Patricia, and sons, Gared and Erin, live at 2 Jackson Court.

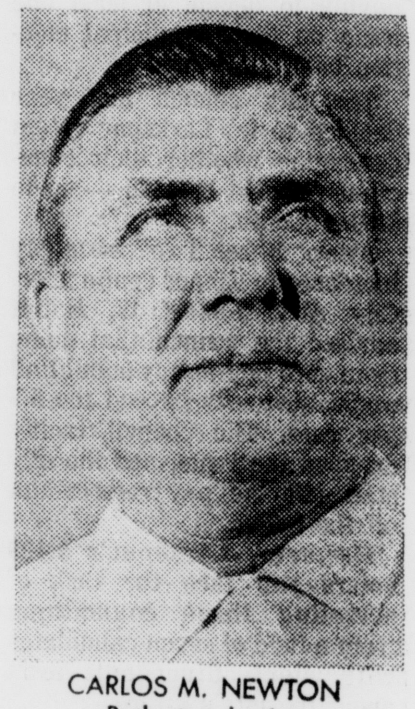
Jones has called for revision of the city general plan and ordinances "in order to preserve the features of Novato that make it a desirable place in which to live, such as its wooded hills and open space."

He also has advocated a comprehensive street repair program financed by a bond issue, and implementation of the downtown plan. "The formation of a public-private assessment district to give financial assistance to the developer of a regional shopping center should be pursued," he said.

Jones said the city will need at least one major park and that land should be acquired now before it is developed. He said he favored the O'Hair property at Sutro Avenue and Novato Boulevard.

JOHN N. MORRISON, a 31-year-old investment firm partner and a graduate of Arizona State University at Tempe. He served three years in construction finance with the Army Corps of Engineers in Europe and formerly taught at the University of Maryland Overseas Division. He, his wife, Eileen and two children, live at 1 Palmo Court. He has been a resident of Novato for five years.

"Novato city government is faced with the necessity of devising realistic and equitable means of preserving open space, establishing downtown identity while retaining a rural atmosphere, broadening the tax base while limiting growth, and other vital issues requiring a careful balance of economic with environmental considerations," he said.



CARLOS M. NEWTON
Budget reduction

"Currently these issues are overshadowed by dissension among local, single-interest factions that leaves many voices unheard, prevents real communication and satisfies very few residents.

"If a workable balance is to be achieved, the city council must establish means whereby all residents will be fully informed on important issues and alternatives and will be able to express their views directly to the council."

Without improved communication "no proposed solutions (however effective in theory) will have enough community support to be successful," Morrison said.

CARLOS M. NEWTON, 52, a construction firm partner and consultant to mortgage lenders and bonding companies. He has been a resident of Novato for six years. He, his wife, Penny, and daughter, Patricia, live at 167 San Andreas Drive. He is a former director of the San Marin Improvement Assn.

Newton said his "number one priority" would be to reduce the budget.

"The present structure of Novato city government is geared to a projected growth of 150,000 people; at present there are approximately 30,000 people in Novato. In this area alone, there could be a reduction of personnel without reducing services, cutting costs up to $200,000," he claimed.

The department of public works and the parks and recreation department have "parallel or overlapping functions" that could be combined at a substantial reduction of the city budget, Newton said.

He listed other priorities as: "Better in-depth planning, adoption of a general plan, preservation of our hills and trees and any natural beauty, and better harmony with county government on problems that join at present or will in the future."

DONALD RICHARDS, 40, classified personnel director for the South San Francisco Unified School District who was a personnel administrator in the Air Force from 1947 until 1968. He is a graduate of Golden Gate College with a Masters Degree in public administration, a former member of the Air Force judo team, and former employment supervisor for California Blue Sheild. He is a native of Salt Lake City. He, his wife, Ann, and two children, live at 371 San Luis Way.

Richards said he is in the race because of a desire "to equate city programs and activities with the problems and desires of the people of Novato for whom these services are intended."

He gave priority to "limiting tax collection to those available from present sources at the present rate."

Richards said it is the responsibility of the city council "to keep a fully-informed public capable of understanding community issues and making decisions within a democratic framework," and to solve local problems with "appropriate leadership from other than local, state and federal officials."

FRED F. RUEGG, 60, retired Columbia Broadcasting System executive and a graduate of Columbia University's Graduate School of Business. He is a native of Gresham, Ore., and has been a resident of Novato for four years. Ruegg and his wife, Constance, lived at 337 San Luis Way and have two adult children. He worked for CBS for 29 years, including eight as vice president in the radio division, before he retired in New York City in 1967.

Ruegg said growth must be carefully directed and controlled, and "this will require realistic long-range planning based on objective, factual information rather than emotion."

He said Novato can create a better balanced community, create more jobs and "help halt the spiral of rising taxes" by encouraging "land use by retail outlets, business and clean, light industry rather than residential only."

Ruegg said: "we all want to preserve as much of our environment as possible. But it has become popular to say that the environment should not be disturbed at all."

The fact is people do disturb the environment, and "since we have increasing numbers of people, so we must learn how to accommodate them with as little disturbance to the environment as possible," he said.

EDWARD T. RYKEN, 33, executive director of the Marin County Senior Coordinating Council. He is a graduate of California State College at Hayward, a member of the Governor's Advisory Committee on the Aging and its transportation subcommittee, and served as vice chairman of the National Transportation Committee at the White House Conference on Aging.

Ryken, his wife, Diane, and four children have lived at 11 Viejo Way for five years.

Ryken has advocated a planning policy "that will enable Novato to accommodate reasonable growth while preserving hillsides, ridges, creeks, trees, clean air, etc., for all Novatans."

At candidates' night meetings, Ryken said as a Councilman he would hold office hours regularly to meet with residents and he has urged that five neighborhood committees formed to assist in revising the general plan be retained. He sees these as steps to increase the responsiveness of the council to the interests of the residents.

He also has called for coordination among the city, water district, school district, fire district and sanitary district, and fulfillment of the city's downtown plan.

JOHN C. SCHOONOVER, 44, Western Area accounting executive, Cyclone Fence Division, U.S. Steel, and chairman of the Novato Planning Commission. He is a graduate of California State College at Long Beach, a native of Seattle, and a Novato resident for five years. He assisted in the organization of the North Marin Federation of Homeowners, a group of homeowner associations, and is a member of the City-County Planning Council of Marin. Schoonover, his wife, Jeanne, and three children live at 1160 Rosalia Drive.

Proper direction for Novato will not "just happen," Schoonover said. "It must be planned and properly executed."

He said he would give top priority to "a comprehensive environmental analysis of our community. This must be done as a basis for intelligent decision-making. It will provide a framework for revision of the Novato General plan, the consideration of proposed dual use of Hamilton Base, and the formation of an open space policy."

Schoonover said the city should acquire land now to ensure parks and open space in the future, and he has opposed joint civilian-military use of HAFB until further study is made.

DOROTHY P. YOUNG, 46, an attorney and a graduate of Lincoln Law School, who has been a resident of Novato for four years. She is past president of Domingo Canyon Homeowners Assn. and membership chairman of the Novato Chamber of Commerce. A former professional ice skater, she toured with the Sonja Henie Ice Revue for three years before starting law school. She is an elder and trustee of the Presbyterian Church of Novato.

Mrs. Young, her husband, Raymond, and a daughter, live at 260 Marin Oaks Drive. She is a native of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Young has advocated a "planned, balanced, complete community," by encouraging retail business, offices and light "non-polluting" industry to locate in Novato.

With a variety of stores, Novato residents would shop locally rather than go out of town and sales tax revenues would increase, she said. With the additional revenue, the city could achieve needed improvements such as road work, sidewalks near schools, acquisition of park land and preservation of environment, she added.

Mrs. Young said she would "set aside time" to meet with residents as a step toward developing better understanding between residents and city government.

Incumbent, Two New Names On The Tiburon Ballot

Moderate-income housing, vanishing open space and the need for recreation programs are the three key issues debated by candidates for council positions.

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Issues in Tiburon's city council election, with three candidates competing Tuesday for two seats, center on preserving its vanishing open space, providing recreation programs and accommodating moderate-income housing.

The candidates are incumbent Anne L. Ellinwood, Albert Aramburu and Allan N. Littman. Mayor Denis T. Rice is not seeking a second four-year term. The city has 3,080 registered voters.

The open-space issue was posed in January, when the council clamped a 90-day moratorium on development over much of the remaining open space as a prelude to a bond issue or rezoning to keep it undeveloped. Miss Ellinwood joined in the unanimous vote for the emergency ordinance which Aramburu also supported, but Littman opposed it. He objected, stating that the council "shouldn't take people's property without paying for it," and arguing that there was no justification for an emergency ordinance.

The housing issue stems from a fight over the council's recent approval of 112 moderate-income apartments at Hilarita. Miss Ellinwood long favored the project, while Littman opposed it. He argued that 112 apartments and a community center on 10.8 acres was too high a population density.

ANNE L. ELLINWOOD, 53, a native of San Francisco, has a Master's Degree in economics from the University of California at Berkeley. A Tiburon resident for the past 17 years, she lives at 1810 Mountain View Drive.

Miss Ellinwood served on Tiburon's first city council from 1964 to 1966, and was elected to her present term in 1968. She is chairman of the City-County Planning Council, a director of the Marin Comprehensive Health Planning Council and the Canon Kip Community Center in San Francisco, and a charter member of the Belvedere-Tiburon Landmarks Society.

ALBERT ARAMBURU
Parks commissioner

The key plank in her campaign, she said, is "preservation of the diversity that makes us a real community rather than a string of subdivisions strung together along Tiburon Highway." To achieve this goal, she called for creating a city recreation department, preserving open space and controlling development "in such a way that homes can be provided for more than a limited segment of the population."

She also proposed an annual town meeting, involving youth in local government, a "low-profile" community-oriented police department, overhaul of the "totally inadequate zoning ordinance," architectural controls on every structure built in the city, closer ties with Belvedere to work out common problems, and further annexations to consolidate the peninsula under the city's jurisdiction.

ALBERT ARAMBURU, 38, a native of Los Angeles, has a Bachelor's Degree in economics from San Fernando Valley State College. He is the traffic mechanization supervisor for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in San Francisco. A Tiburon resident for almost three years, he lives at 10 Tara View Road. He and his wife, Marianne, have two children, age 6 and 8.

ANNE L. ELLINWOOD
Seeks third term

Aramburu is chairman of the Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment, a member of the Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission, one of the founders of the recycling center in Tiburon, and a member of the Sierra Club. Making his first bid for elective office, he has based his campaign on environmental issues. About three-quarters of the items that come before the council relate to the environment, he said.

Aramburu praised the council's moratorium on development of open areas, terming it "a courageous first move by the current city council to take control of the city's rate of growth."

But it will be up to the next council "to convert a philosophical position into a practical reality," he said. "The taxpayer must be shown that this is an investment program that will increase values but not be a heavy tax burden. I am firmly convinced that we can develop a responsible program that will be acceptable to the voters."

He also called for exploring "every alternative" to widening Tiburon Boulevard to four lanes, including bicycles and shuttle buses. The first priority should be to make the current two lanes safe for pedestrians and motorists, he said.

ALLAN N. LITTMAN
Ex-planning chairman

ALLAN N. LITTMAN, 43, a native of London and a 1952 graduate of Harvard Law School, is a partner in a San Francisco law firm. He has lived in Marin since 1954, the past nine years in Tiburon. He and his wife, Caroline, live at 100 Rolling Hills Road. They have four children.

Littman served on the Tiburon Planning Commission from 1967 through 1971, and was its chairman in 1970 and 1971.

Also making his first bid for elective office, Littman declared his wish "to preserve and enhance the semi-rural environment of Tiburon despite mounting pressures for urbanization, more apartments, increased density, crowded roads and less open lands."

"I am in favor of moderate-income housing and I think that it can be accomplished without massive projects," he said.

Criticizing the city's government, Littman said it should be "streamlined and invigorated so that it will be both efficient and accountable to the people in the administration of the law and policy of the city, and in meetings of the council and all commissions."

Littman said he will oppose any attempt to increase the city's property tax rate, which he said should be reduced "bearing in mind that although we need increased services, we mustn't drive out people by taxing them, particularly as they grow older."

He opposed the proposed construction of 360 dwelling units on 44 acres of the former railroad yards as contrary to the downtown plan, which called for about 185 units. The plan was approved during his chairmanship of the planning commission. The proposed construction is being redrafted, he said.

The Ross Flood Control Controversy

In Ross, the Corte Madera Creek Flood Control Project may be the route to election Tuesday when two challengers seek to unseat three appointed councilmen.

Tracy Van Voorhees and Peter B. Valentine, co-chairmen of Save Our Creek, are making their first council race in opposition to the flood control project.

However, the incumbents — John H. Chase, Jewell I. Osterloh and Alan P. Maginis — joined in a unanimous vote March 9 to block the concrete channel until the county flood control district promises to do $350,000 in local flood control work.

But, while the creek controversy is the most publicized issue, Ross voters will also be concerned about preserving the small town, single-family character of the community.

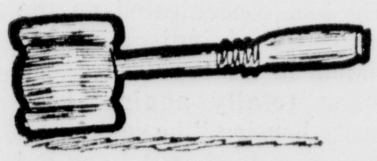
The 1,494 registered voters will also be called on to elect Town Clerk Virginia Stott and Town Treasurer Elsa M. Innes. Both are unopposed.

The five council candidates seeking the backing of 1,494 registered townspeople are:

JOHN H. CHASE, 37, a native of New York City, graduate of Middlebury College, who has lived in Ross 13 years. He is a vice president of Transamerica Corp. He is married and the father of four children. He, his wife, Barbara, and the children live at 111 Upper Road. He is a member of the Public Relations Society of America, Public Relations Roundtable, San Francisco Advertising Club, the Marin Republican Council, the University Club, the Inverness Yacht Club, and the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo, a trustee of the Katherine Branson School, a director of the Lagunitas Country Club and former president of the Ross Property Owners Assn.

Chase pointed to the creek project, holding down taxes and forming a park and recreation commission as major concerns.

He said he wants to see what the alternatives are before taking a stand in the creek flap, but added, "I oppose anything but a total flood control solution for Ross."



JEWELL I. OSTERLOH, 53, a native of Tacoma, Wash., who attended the universities of Puget Sound and Washington, has lived in Ross 15 years. A housewife, she formerly worked as an economic analyst. She is married and the mother of four children. She lives with her husband, Dr. Erwin H. Osterloh, and the children at 22 Southwood Avenue. She is a member of the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

She said, "Preserving Ross' distinctive rural, residential character and keeping taxes down are our principle problems."

ALAN P. MAGINIS, 48, a native of San Francisco, graduate of the University of California and a Marine veteran of World War II and Korea, who has lived in Ross since boyhood. He is a real estate executive for Milton Meyer and Co. He is married and the father of two stepchildren. He, his wife, Sue, and the children live at 3 Crest Road. He is a member of the Commonwealth Club and Building Owners and Managers Assn. and a parishioner of St. Anselm's Catholic Church in San Anselmo.

Maginis said he is equally concerned with maintaining "the uniqueness, charm and natural beauty of Ross," holding down taxes and finding a solution to the creek problem.

He called for blocking the creek project until the county "honors its commitment to alleviate the flooding conditions on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard", then finding an alternative to the concrete channel concept.

TRACY E. VAN VOORHEES, 48, a native of Billings, Mont., graduate of the University of California and an Army veteran of World War II, who has lived in Ross seven years. He is a manufacturer's representative. He is married and the father of three children. He, his wife, Mary, and the children live at 1 Upper Road. He is a member of St. John's Church, co-chairman of Save Our Creek, and has been active in the League to Save Lake Tahoe.

Van Voorhees said the major issue is the creek project of the Army Corps of Engineers. "We are getting a trench and no benefits for the town itself," he said.

He said that, if elected, he will press the army engineers to devise a more compatible project, and will also work with adjacent communities and townspeople to solve common problems "like the creek and congestion on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard."

He said the present town council has failed to fully inform and involve the public.

PETER B. VALENTINE, 32, a native of Pasadena, who attended the University of California and has lived in Ross six years. He is an investor. He is married and the father of four children. He, his wife, Judith, and the children live on Sylvan Lane. He is co-chairman of Save Our Creek, a sponsor of Ducks Unlimited, and a member of the Planning and Conservation League and California Tomorrow.

Valentine, whose court suit threw the future of the creek project into doubt, says the main issue is the creek and Ross' right to determine its future.

He said, "I consider the current devastation plan for the creek a disaster," but he does want some flood control. He said he will push for a reasonable balance between flood control and conservation.

Five Candidates In Corte Madera Argue Planning, Housing Issues

By LARRY MOWELL

In Corte Madera, housing and planning have passed up fire protection as the campaign's major issues in the 1972 municipal election.

Fire protection was the horse Herber C. Leney and Robert J. Flahive hoped to ride to victory against incumbents Robert P. Simmons and Byron D. White until the council lamed it by voting to hire six new firemen.

Housing has been the main concern of I. Thomas Zaragoza all along. He has argued against dense housing on remaining developed land, but has not opposed the proposed Meadowsweet Station townhouse development.

With some citizens threatening a referendum on the 539-unit Meadowsweet project, the plan looms as an issue. No candidate, however, has taken a public stand on the merits of the referendum.

Both Simmons and Flahive have made upgrading the town's six-year-old general plan a major plank while White has zeroed in on holding the tax rate down.

Leney has also favored holding the line on taxes, but Flahive and Zaragoza have said they would raise taxes if necessary.

All candidates have favored keeping the North Ridge area above the town undeveloped. All have also backed business growth provided it does no harm to the character of the town.

Two municipal election candidates have taken no campaign stand at all; namely, because they are running unopposed. They are Town Clerk Betty S. Behel and Town Treasurer Frank L. Bigley.

Their positions pay $2 a year; councilmen receive $150 a month.

Following are brief sketches of the five council candidates vying for the support of 4,335 registered voters at the polls Tuesday.:

ROBERT J. FLAHIVE, 32, a native of Malden, Mass., who attended Suffolk and Purdue universities and served two years in the Army, has lived in Corte Madera for three years. He is a publisher's representative. He is married and the father of two sons, ages 6 and 3. He, his wife, Diana, and the children live at 18 Endeavor Drive. He is a director of the East Corte Madera Hilldwellers Association, past president of the Grindelwald Ski Club International, a participant in the YMCA Indian Guide program, and chairman of the Citizens Subcommittee on Fire Protection.

He entered the race when he saw the fire difficulties because he felt the council "hadn't come to grips with the future growth problems and concerns of the residents of our town."

"My big points have been what they haven't done: such as not updating the master plan, letting it get to be six years old so it doesn't reflect the needs for open space. I am going strong against high density development," he said. "I just feel that they have lost touch with the people."

He said he would push for immediate updating of the master plan and back a moratorium on growth during the review.

HERBER C. LENEY, 64, a native of Union City, Okla., graduate of Oklahoma State University, the University of Oklahoma law school, the George Washington University law school and an Army veteran of World War II, has lived in Corte Madera for 10 years. He is a retired attorney. He is married and the father of four children. He, his wife, Virginia, and youngest son, live at 318 Golden Hind Passage. He is a member of the citizens subcommittee on fire protection, the Church of All Faiths, the Corte Madera Chamber of Commerce, the Redwood Scholarship Foundation, the Marin County Park and Recreation Commission, past president of the Redwood High School Parent-Teacher Assn., chairman of the Corte Madera Sanitary Commission and president of the Mariner Cove Improvement Assn.

Leney has said that fire protection will remain his concern until 24-hour fire coverage is a fact, but has said he won't vote for expansion of any other town programs until the proposed shopping center is completed in 1974 or 1975.

"I'm not in favor of raising taxes any more than is absolutely necessary. I think the main thing is to try to get additional income through sales tax revenue," he said.

He also favored modernizing the general plan.

ROBERT P. SIMMONS, 37, a native of Ann Arbor, Mich., graduate of Golden Gate College and an army veteran, has lived in Corte Madera for seven years. He is a certified public accountant. He is married and the father of two children. He, his wife, Gaille, and the children reside at 1 Balclutha Drive. He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the California Society of Certified Public Accountants, a former member of the Corte Madera Christmas Tree Hill Dwellers' Assn., and chairman of the Marin County Council of Mayors and Councilmen and the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council.

Simmons has made updating of the general plan his primary goal "so that when the rest of the town develops, we can do it with forethought."

He has criticized deletion of $20,000 to hire planning help from this year's budget and said he will push for funding for next year.

BYRON D. WHITE, 68, a native of Kentucky who attended the University of Southern California, has lived in Corte Madera 13 years. He is a retired puchasing executive. He is married and the father of a grown son. He and his wife, Thelma, live at 24 Staghound Passage. He is a member of Branch 22 of the Sons in Retirement, a Masons and was a Boy Scout leader and district committeeman. He is a former town planning commissioner and member of the board of adjustments. He was a charter member of the Mariner Cove Improvement Assn.

White has campaigned as the taxpayer's friend and has called for "the soundest, most economical government."

He has voted against funds for planning, claiming all work can be done by town staff personnel, and voted against this year's budget.

I. THOMAS ZARAGOZA, 63, a native of San Francisco, who attended Heald Engineering College, has lived in Corte Madera for five years. He is a San Francisco police captain and head of the city's traffic bureau. He is married and the father of a grown daughter. He lives with his wife, Nora, at 42 Chickasaw Court. He is a member of the Native Sons of the Golden West and St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Larkspur.

He has concentrated on the possibility of indiscriminate building in the town.

"I'm totally against high density housing," he said, arguing against further R-3 and R-4 multiple residence development

Belvedere Has No Burning Issues

By JAY GOODWIN

Voters in the city of Belvedere Tuesday will face a ballot with five candidates vying for three vacancies on the city council.

There are 1,522 registered voters in Belvedere.

With the city council's recent passage of a strict dog control ordinance the election campaign apparently lost its biggest issue. When asked to comment on remaining issues in Belvedere, City Manager William L. Cavelli admitted, "Quite frankly, I don't think there are any issues here."

One topic, however, has drawn a bit of discussion on the campaign circuit. The recently completed Livingston and Blayney Report, prepared by Livingston and Blayney, planning consultants, of San Francisco, recommends a tightening of the city's zoning ordinances to curtail further growth in Belvedere.

All five candidates favor the recommendations of the report.

Candidates for the three vacant council seats are incumbent Mayor Thomas S. Price, incumbent Councilman Merritt K. Ruddock, Dr. Stuart C. Cullen, Girvin B. Wait and David E. Bordon.

THOMAS S. PRICE, 45, a native of Lakewood, Ohio, graduate of Principia College and a U.S. Naval Reserves veteran of World War II, has served on Belvedere City Council for eight years, three of those years as mayor.

He is general manager of Price Building Specialities Incorporated and owner of United Building Products Inc., both of San Francisco. He is married and the father of two children. He and his wife Jeanne reside at 7 West Shore Road.

He recently completed a five-year term on the Reed School District Board of Trustees.

"We don't have any issues to speak of," said Mayor Price. "But I am pledged to keep growth from ruining Belvedere."

He suggested that a concern of Belvedere residents was the growth of neighboring Tiburon. "If Tiburon annexes the land it is considering, it may become quite a large area. I am concerned that we may lose our compatibility," said Price.

MERRITT K. RUDDOCK, 58, born in the U.S. Embassy in Berlin, Germany, graduate of Harvard University and an Army veteran of World War II, has served on the Belvedere City Council for eight years, two of those years as mayor. He has lived in Belvedere since 1958.

He is a general partner in Almar Exploration Ltd., a San Francisco firm involved in exploration and development of natural resources. He lives with his wife Margaret at 131 Golden Gate Avenue. Prior to his election to the city council, he was secretary on the Belvedere Planning Commission from 1960 to 1964.

Councilman Ruddock seeks reelection, "to continue the work that we on the city council have been doing for the last eight years." He cited the development of the city's master plan, improvement of relations with Tiburon, drainage systems and waste disposal projects as top priority items for the city council.

STUART C. CULLEN, M.D., a native of Milton Junction, Wis. earned his medical degree from University of Wisconsin and has lived in Belvedere since 1958. Formerly dean of the School of Medicine, University of California Medical Center, San Francisco, he is currently professor of anesthesia at U.C. Medical Center. He is a past professor of anesthesia and department chairman at University of Iowa for 20 years.

He is married and the father of two grown children. He lives with his wife Carolyn at 73 West Shore Road. He is the author of more than 120 articles on anesthesiology.

Dr. Cullen agreed with his opponents that "there are no burning issues in Belvedere this year."

"If we possibly can, I want Belvedere to maintain its own police and fire departments," he said. "I've been dealing with the control of funds and the management of people all my professional life. Now that I have the time, I have an interest in holding public office."

GIRVIN B. WAIT, 69, a native of Hawaii, attended University of California, Berkeley, and is Naval Reserve veteran of World War I and World War II who has lived in Belvedere for three years. He is a retired sea captain of cargo and passenger ships. He worked, at one time, for Pacific Far East Lines in San Francisco.

Married and the father of a grown son, he lives with his wife Constance at 508 San Rafael Avenue. He was a member of a Belvedere citizens committee on dgg control.

Like his opponents, Wait wants Belvedere to "stay the way it is." He said he has the time and interest and would like to do something for the community.

"Issues, that aren't vital now, will be coming up in the future," he said. "These will get my undivided attention."

DAVID E. BORDON
Newsletter proposed

DAVID E. BORDON, 28, a native of Los Angeles, graduate of University of California, Berkeley, and Boalt Law School, and an Army Reserves veteran, has lived in Belvedere for three years. He is a practicing attorney in San Francisco.

He lives with his wife Jean, also an attorney, at 19 Belvedere Avenue. He served on the Belvedere Parks and Recreation Commission and the Belvedere-Tiburon Committee for the Environment. He is past chairman of the Tiburon Peninsula Advisory Committee.

While admitting the absence of any major issue in the campaign, Bordon stressed the need for greater communication between the city council and the public.

"I think a newsletter from the council to each citizen would increase community awareness and allow the public to know what's going on at meetings," said Bordon.

"In addition, I am personally concerned with the growth in vehicle traffic in Belvedere and the possible closing of the Belvedere School. What the election comes down to is who the voters can trust to best make the decisions coming up during the next four years."

The issues are wide-ranging in San Anselmo as two city councilmen face the challenge of six other candidates in Tuesday's election.

In addition to taxes and the environment, housing, flood control and council responsiveness have emerged as topics of debate during the campaign.

The candidates, ranging from a 26-year-old research scientist-teacher who has spiced the campaign with impromptu remarks on pollution and growth to a budget-conscious businesswoman who has lived in the city for 49 years, differ on the city's priorities.

Although a citizen committee's recommendation to legalize second-dwelling units on some single-family lots was expected to emerge as the main issue of the campaign, the candidates have spent substantial time on matters such as flood control on Corte Madera Creek and city finances.

THE CANDIDATES are Mayor Kenneth L. Anderson and fellow incumbent James F. Reed, and challengers Martin G. Blinder, Jack Burr II, Judy Emis, Sarah Nome, Richard A. Raznikov and Pieter Toal.

In addition to the council race, City Treasurer William P. Franchini is being challenged by Patrick E. McHatton. Helen J. Ragan is unopposed for city clerk.

KENNETH L. ANDERSON, 48, born in Massachusetts, has lived in San Anselmo for more than 14 years and is an insurance broker in San Francisco. He is a member of the San Anselmo Homes Assn., Marin Conservation League, Tamalpais Conservation Club, and was an organizer of the city's Congress for Community Progress. He served in the Coast Guard during World War II, and is a graduate of Tufts University in Massachusetts.

Anderson is completing his first four-year council term. He was named mayor last year. Prior to his election to the council, Anderson was on the city planning commission for two years.

He lives at 468 Laurel Avenue with his wife, Irene, and two sons.

Anderson has pledged, if reelected, to concentrate upon formulation of "a comprehensive, carefully thought-out general plan. . . that will give citizens control over development and a voice in determining their environment." He has endorsed the hiring of a staff planner. He has taken a cautious stand on the second-dwelling issue, expressing confidence it will be resolved "without forever jeopardizing the character and environment of our town."

He praises the achievements of the past four years, saying "we stopped the freeway and the concrete ditch, purchased Robson-Harrington Park, passed a sign ordinance, originated unlimited garbage and trash pickup as an ecology measure, and appointed citizens committees on ecology and zoning-and-housing."

MARTIN G. BLINDER, 35, of 50 Idalia Road, is a physician and holds the post of medical director at the Family Therapy Institute in San Rafael. He also serves as assistant clinical professor in psychiatry at the University of California Medical Center and Langley Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute, and as assistant professor at the Hastings College of Law, all in San Francisco.

He was chairman of the San Anselmo Town Meeting in 1970 and 1971 and is a member of the city's human rights miniboard, Chamber of Commerce, San Anselmo Homes Assn. and Sierra Club. He has lived in San Anselmo four years.

Blinder, a native of New York City and a graduate of Cornell University and Chicago Medical School, has a wife, Dorothy, and a daughter.

The candidate, defeated for a council seat two years ago, has attacked the present council for unresponsiveness to citizens. "The council often gets paralyzed with legalisms," he has remarked.

Blinder is an advocate of low-cost housing and strict density standards. He also has renewed a 1970 campaign proposal for a municipal composting service. On flood control, the candidate has proposed alternate means to a concrete ditch, including widening and straightening out the channel at critical points.

JACK BURR II, 26, of 100 Sycamore Avenue, is a research scientist-teacher, having specialized in both short-term education programs and in biomedical electronics and pollution control. He is a graduate of Illinois Institute of Technology and has lived in San Anselmo about two years.

Burr belongs to MENSA, an international honor society for persons with high I.Q., worked on last year's town meeting and is a member of the San Anselmo School District's citizen study group on educational organization. He also served on a citizen comittee which drafted an ordinance controlling large animals in the community.

A campaign maverick, Burr cites a "fine repertoire of jazz" among his qualifications for the council post, and says that when he recently lost a position dependent on federal funds, he took to "odd jobs and sleeping on friends' couches."

City priorities, he says, are encouraging development of low-cost housing and business and low-pollution industry to meet housing and employment needs. He decries a lack of participation of youth and the aged in city government.

"We must cut taxes," he says, by requiring a "10 per cent yearly reduction in San Anselmo's share of property tax over the next four years."

He adds, "Let tax-conscious citizens sweep their own streets, help fight fires and cut park lawns."

JUDY EMIS, 30, is secretary of the Irate Taxpayers of Marin, lives at 27 Olive Avenue and is a native Marinite. She formerly worked on the staff of the Wall Street Journal, and now writes for a statewide taxpayers publication. She served on a tax seminar committee for the 1971 town meeting.

Mrs. Emis also works as a secretary for a San Rafael trucking firm. She attended local schools, including College of Marin.

She has emphasized city economy during the campaign. "We can hold the line against unnecessary spending on frills, visionary planning schemes and overstaffing." She also has praised second-dwelling units for the role they serve in keeping deserved persons with modest means in the city, but is opposed to further major road construction, including widening of Sir Francis Drake or Center boulevards.

Mrs. Emis considers flood control necessary, but wants an alternative to a concrete ditch proposed by the Army Corps of Engineers.

SARAH NOME, 49, of 77 Alder Avenue, also returns for a second try at a council seat, having lost in 1970. She also ran unsuccessfully for the San Anselmo School District board in 1969. She is a lifelong city resident, attended College of Marin and is employed as registrar for the San Francisco Maritime Museum.

President of the Irate Taxpayers of Marin, Mrs. Nome often is in the audience during budget and regular sessions of the council. She complains that the city budget has doubled in five years, with much of the expense going toward "costly studies, nonessential municipal equipment and nonessential staff positions."

She is opposed to plans to widen the Center Boulevard bridge near the Hub, as well as an east-west highway through the city. Mrs. Nome also is wary of the growth of regional government and opposes consolidation of San Anselmo and other Ross Valley cities.

She is a member of the Sierra Club and Commonwealth Club, and has served on three committees for recent town meetings. She is a member of the San Anselmo Homes Association.

RICHARD A RAZNIKOV, 25, is making his second try for public office, having been defeated bq Paul C. Bettini in the 1971 mayoral race in San Rafael. Raznikov, who has since moved to San Anselmo, now lives at 51 Ross Avenue.

He is a law student and also identifies himself as a community political worker and a poet. Raznikov, former student body president at San Rafael High School, was a delegate to the 1968 Democratic National Convention. He is a 1968 graduate of the University of California at Berkeley.

Raznikov, believing San Anselmo is at a "turning point," advocates a moratorium on apartment development and defends second-dwelling units. He also has proposed a drug and alcohol abuse project for the town.

He urges expansion of the town meeting format.

JAMES F. REED, 36, seeks his second term on the council, and is former mayor. He is chairman of the tax equity committee of the Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen, and a member of the advisory board of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District and the general assembly of the Association of Bay Area Governments. He is former chairman of the town meeting.

He is in the investment business. Civic groups to which he belongs include the Marin Conservation League, San Anselmo Chamber of Commerce, San Anselmo Homes Assn. and Planned Parenthood of Marin. He is the county board of supervisors' representative to the Comprehensive Health Planning Council of Marin.

Reed is a native Californian and lives at 100 Spring eGrove Avenue with his wife, Sally, and four children. He attended college in Canada and at the University of California at Davis.

"Long-range planning is still the critical issue," Reed says. Before second-dwelling units are permitted, he says, "the solution to our housing problem must be found in the orderly planning process." He suggests a bypass system to meet flood control needs.

PIETER TOAL, 50, is engineer-administrator with a consulting firm to the Bay Area Rapid Transit District. Born in the Netherlands, he has lived in the U.S. since 1956, now residing at 48 Hawthorne Avenue with his wife, Hilde, and four children. Toal was a member of the San Anselmo School District board from 1965-1969.

He also was a member of the citizen committee for zoning and housicg which recommended, but failed to get, council endorsement of second-dwelling units under certain circumstances. Toal has stressed the issue in his campaign.

He also has called for study of an intracity minibus system, urged formation of neighborhood groups and a permanent town forum and proposed a committee whose study would form the basis of a new community general plan.

IN THE TREASURER'S contest Tuesday:

William F. Franchini, 58, is a former mayor and councilman who recently retired as operator of tha meat department of a San Anselmo market. Franchini, who served on the council from 1958-1966, was named treasurer in 1969.

He is a native Marinite and belongs to the San Anselmo Rotary Club, Chamber of Commerce and the San Rafael Elks lodge. He lives at 2 Agatha Court with his wife, Catherine. The couple has three grown children.

Patrick E. McHatton, 49, is a certified public accountant in San Francisco, and has lived in San Anselmo since 1964. McHatton resides with his wife, Phyllis, at 51 Alder Avenue. The couple has three children.

McHatton is a graduate of Western Illinois University and flew 35 missions over Germany as a bombardier during World War II. He is a native of Mt. Sterling, Ill.

Mrs. Helen J. Ragan, unopposed for city clerk, will replace the retired Anita Gannon. Her husband, Duane C. Ragan, is chairman of the city planning commission and formerly was a member of the city council as well as mayor.

One Incumbent In Mill Valley Field

By MARC NURRE

Six candidates for three seats, who have touched on issues such as keeping Mill Valley's rural character, the quality of life in the community and city finances, will vie in Tuesday's city council election.

Only one of the six candidates, Jerome C. Hauke, is an incumbent. Two others, Dolph F. Jaeger and Robert E. Burton, have run unsuccessfully in the past, Jaeger in 1970 and Burton in 1968.

Besides Hauke's seat, those of Mayor Geroge E. Wickham and Robert H. Andresen will be filled Tuesday. Wickham and Andresen are not running.

Among the issues outlined by the candidates are: coping with development to keep the city rural, cutting the city tax rate and getting better value for dollars spent.

Specific issues raised include possible expansion of the police department, acquiring open space — especially on the ridges in the city — and encouraging more low-cost housing.

The city has 7,001 registered voters.

The candidates:

THOMAS N. BELSKY, 33, an artist, teaches mathematics and philosophy at the Marin City Learning Center. At a candidate's night, he said that ending the Vietnam War through pressure at the municipal government level was his major concern.

Other concerns, he said, include having the city drop its contract with the county for dog control and then tackle the problem on its own. The current situation is "nonsensical," he charged.

Any area with "something to offer" and which wishes annexation, should be allowed to annex to the city, he said.

In a statement issued when he announced his candidacy, he said, "The people have to be represented on the city council and they're not being represented now. I entered this race to throw the other candidates into perspective."

Part of his campaign, he said, would include a display of some of his paintings "to show the voters what I believe in and value."

He is single, was a Peace Corps volunteer for 28 months in northeastern Brazil, and has lived in Mill Valley for two years. He failed to submit a photo to the Independent-Journal.

ROBERT E. BURTON, 41, an executive with a life insurance company, is currently chairman of the Mill Valley Planning Commission and has been a member of the commission for more than four years.

He has called for a greater diversity of people by culture, politics, age and race, and has advocated a push for lower cost housing in the city as one method of achieving a greater diversity.

"We're too middle class," he said.

He said if elected he would begin a search for carefully controlled commercial development in the city in order to broaden the city's tax base.

The city should have stronger planning controls, and must also have a complete general plan, according to Burton. The city gained design review of two commercial developments — Kentucky Fried Chicken and Howard Johnson's — because he urged it, he claimed.

He has stressed his experience in city planning and the advantages this would mean for Mill Valley if he were elected to the council. He also called for the city to acquire for open space in North Ridge.

Burton is a graduate of Yale University and the Columbia University School of Law and is a member of the California Bar Assn. He lives at 114 Hazel Avenue with his wife and two children.

ROBERT E. CAPRON, 33, a San Francisco attorney, is chairman of the Property Development Advisory Committee of the Mill Valley School District.

"In my view, our council's method of reaching decisions is of primary importance in this election," he said. "Mill Valley needs a council which has broader support for more of its decisions. Our council must do a better job of anticipating and dealing with problems before they reach crisis proportions."

He called for council members to make more use of the skills and experience of Mill Valley residents, and said that if elected he will promote the wide distribution of council agendas and preliminary budgets in order to get more citizen participation in government.

He cited as his concerns the preliminary county-wide plan, good employee relations, preservation of open space, the updating and implementation of the master plan, and the expansion of zoning to provide more municipal control over land use.

He is a graduate of Stanford University and Stanford Law School, and lives at 10 Stetson Road with his wife and three children.

JEROME E. HAUKE, 36, an enginner with the State Division of Bay Toll Crossings, has been a councilman since 1968.

He has stressed fiscal responsibility, and likened running a city to running a large family. "A councilman should recognize that the city was limited resources and should be able to say 'no' when it is necessary," he said.

He defended the city's tax rate, and pointed out that Mill Valley is the only city in the county that provides "all" municipal services to its residents.

He defined the major issue of Mill Valley as "survival," and said his four years on the council provide him with the knowledge of how to give the city direction.

He said he would try to "humanize" government and temper strict planning with humanity. "You can only do it by talking and listening," he said. "And I underline the listening part."

He is married, has six children and lives at 53 Millay Place.

Hauke was born in Detroit, reared in Wisconsin, and earned a degree in civil engi-

Issues Many And Varied In Mill Valley

Retaining Rural Character And Cutting Tax Rate Are Among The Prime Interests Of Candidates

neering from the University of Wisconsin. He has resided in Mill Valley for 14 years.

GERALD J. HOOD, 33, is executive director of the Marin County Human Rights Commission.

The city's tax rate is his major concern, he said, and he proposed a review of all city programs with an eye towards cutting back on what is unnecessary, and looking for outside methods of financing some city services.

He called for a freeze in hiring until the city can solve some of its financial problems. "In the last six years, the taxes on my home have doubled," he said. "Mill Valley can become a fool's paradise if it fails to realize how easy it is to destroy what it has."

He is a graduate of San Francisco State College, has attended the Golden Gate College School of Law and has done postgraduate work at San Francisco State.

He called for a "commonsense" approach to government, and urged that salaries for councilmen be discontinued and the money spent on hiring another policeman.

"People are awfully reluctant to walk the streets in this city at night; it's a terrible thing to say," he said.

He said Mill Valley had 1.3 police per 1,000 residents and said the ratio should be two to 1,000.

If elected, he said, he would try to "keep Mill Valley the way it is" esthetically.

Proposed developments, he said, should be reviewed as they come up, each on its own merits.

He is a graduate of the University of Toledo and holds a degree in engineering. He lives a 1 Manor Terrace. He is married and has one daughter.

MILL VALLEY voters Tuesday will also approve or disapprove of a $275,000 bond issue to finance construction of a new fire station in East Mill Valley.

The firehouse bonds failed to attain the required two-thirds vote of approval when submitted last June, going down to defeat as part of four different bond packages all of which failed to attain passage.

The proposed site is east of Camino Alt near Enchanted Knolls on land already owned by the city. Volunteer firemen have urged approval of the bonds.

By PAT ANGLE

Sausalito voters will choose three city councilmen from an unprecedented field of 11 candidates Tuesday after a campaign on a wide range of issues, most of which are tied to future development of the city.

Preservation of open space, ferry terminal locations, a moratorium of subdivisions, two large proposed developments (Whiskey Springs and Wolfback Ridge) and the controversial Park Plaza Plan have been foremost among the concerns of residents and candidates alike.

Contenders have also addressed themselves to problems in the Sausalito police department, traffic congestion, parking and the condition of the city's downtown area.

PERHAPS THE two most emotionally-charged issues have been William E. Spangle's plan to convert the downtown to a park plaza, complete with parks, walkways and malls, and a proposed 204-unit single family subdivision on 160 acres of Wolfback Ridge.

Late last year approximately 700 voters signed an initiative petition to place on Tuesday's ballot an advisory measure stating that before the city implements the Spangle plan, it will first be submitted to voters, along with cost information and data on any loss of revenue which might result.

The action was taken after the council, which adopted the disputed plan last August, declined to put the matter to the electorate. The council reversed its decision in light of the successful initiative.

The Wolfback development, for which developer Edward R. Fitzsimmons has been trying to gain city approval for nearly two years, became a heated issue only recently when conservationists decided the two million dollar property should be preserved as open space.

THE PLANNING commission and council turned down Fitzsimmons' latest plan for the land and asked him to resubmit the project with some changes.

Persons favoring a greenbelt area on the ridge have been attempting to find ways for the city to purchase the property, but to date have been unsuccessful.

Robin Sweeny, running for a second council term, is the only incumbent seeking reelection, since councilman Wyman Hicks and Mayor Alexander R. Imlay have declined to run again.

Other challengers are Helen K. Armstrong, Robert D. Bauerle, Peter D. Bowen, Howard Chadd, Evert H. Heynneman, Robert C. Martin, W. Daniel O'Connor, Leonard F. Rappa, Sally Stanford and Serge Trubach.

A biography of each contestant, together with a summary of his views follows:

HELEN K. ARMSTRONG, 36, is a native of Georgia who has lived in Sausalito three years and is a corporate manager for Pacific Telephone in Mill Valley. She is a member of the Fairfax Chapter of the Eastern Star and attended Santa Rosa Junior College and San Francisco City College.

The candidate, her husband, Stanley, and their five children reside at 215 Main Street.

Mrs. Armstrong said that, as a successful businesswoman, she has acquired a strong management background and experience in decisive action which she feels will be valuable to the council.

"This would benefit the council which needs representation from all the people who will be affected by the many issues which must be dealt with in our future plans for growth and development," she said.

She supports the idea that residents should be allowed to vote on the Park Plaza plan and any other issues which have far-reaching effects on the community, and also favors Central School as a site for a new city hall, although she would like to see a new library closer to downtown for better citizen access.

"I favor enforcement of building and zoning regulations as long as the laws are detailed enough to avoid misinterpretations which lead to zoning violations," Mrs. Armstrong said. "I believe the council must insure that all citizens will be benefited by decisions made."

ROBERT D. BAUERLE, coowner, vice president and secretary of Brotman's gift shop in Sausalito, is president-elect of the Sausalito Rotary Club, and founder and president of the Sausalito Businessmen's Assn. His other affiliations include director of the Sausalito Chamber of Commerce and membership in Sausalito Citizens Council and the Starr of the Sea Catholic Church's Men's Club.

A native of Nebraska, the 50-year-old candidate has lived in Sausalito eight years, residing at 78 George Lane. He holds a degree in business administration from Wichita State University and served during World War II as an Army captain in the South Pacific.

He is divorced and the father of two sons.

An active proponent of the Park Plaza initiative, Bauerle thinks Sausalito citizens "want an effective voice in the future of their community and I want to serve these concerned citizens."

He sees the city's "top priority issues" as "traffic and pedestrian control, an urgently needed library and city hall facilities, and convenient ferry terminals that will not disrupt the downtown area."

Bauerle said some of the city's current plans to install pedestrian control signals, one-way streets and widen sidewalks in the central area are practical, but others are "too expensive for test purposes. We must be sure city funds are no longer wasted, and to avoid such costly tests, I feel further study is needed before any action is taken."

The candidate also favors acquisition of Central School as a permanent city hall and two ferry terminals for the city, with the major terminal in the north.

PETER D. BOWEN, owner of the Scrimshaw in Sausalito, is a native of Massachusetts, and a five-year Sausalito resident. He resides in Berth 91 of the Sausalito Yacht Harbor.

The candidate listed his political affiliation as the No Name Bar, "a center of local political opinions." He is a graduate of Occidental College and worked for the No Name seven years.

If elected, the 28-year-old businessman said one of his chief goals will be to supplant most downtown parking with a northern parking facility. "I believe this will give us a much more attractive downtown for the resident and the tourist and will be totally beneficial to downtown businesses," Bowen said.

He would like to see careful study and planning for a way to preserve "the city's unique waterfront." He favors seeking ways to turn part of the downtown into an urban plaza or park and said he will work for enactment of strong sign, litter and noise control ordinances for Sausalito.

Bowen said he would also work for tasteful development of the Marinship area for residential and business use and for an imaginative shuttle system between the north end of town and the downtown.

(After material for this article had been completed and in type, candidate Bowen announced he was withdrawing from the contest, and supporting candidates O'Connor, Heynneman and Rappa.)

HOWARD CHADD, a 26-year resident of the town, is a native of Indiana and resides at 77 Central Avenue. He is a retired independent insurance adjuster and a member of Marin Lodge No. 191, Free and Accepted Masons, and the Sausalito Presbyterian Church.

The 62-year-old contender holds a Bachelor's Degree from Butler University in Indiana and attended Indiana Law School. During World War II he served as a Navy lieutenant in the South Pacific.

Chadd believes fiscal policy is the most important problem facing the new council.

"City expenditures have more than doubled in five years," the contender said, pointing out that the city budget for 1966-67 totaled $846,864, while the 1971-72 spending program is 1.7 million dollars.

Increased city expenditures have easily consumed increases in the city's assessed valuation, according to Chadd, "and have run pell mell after the tourist and parking for the balance, taking a bite of $6 per residential unit on its way (a new city sewer tax).

He believes that "the tourist goose which has produced the golden egg for past prodigality is about to expire. Unless a council with judgment, experience and courage is elected, the next 'goose' is going to be the property owner."

"If we can't keep within our means here, then heaven help us at the county, state and national levels," Chadd said.

Chadd is the only candidate who does not favor city acquisition of Central School for a city hall, believing instead that the facility, along with a library, should be built on the Northwestern Pacific Railroad property across from the school.

He is married and the father of a grown son.

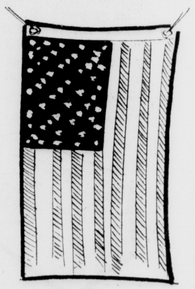
EVERT H. HEYNNEMAN, a 39-year-old principal planner for the San Francisco Housing Authority, has been a member of the Sausalito Planning Commission since 1970.

A native of Holland, Heynneman has lived in Sausalito nine years and resides, with his wife, Titia, at 543 Sausalito Blvd. The couple have one grown son.

The candidate is a graduate of the Royal Academy of Fine Arts and Architecture in the Hague, Holland, and holds a Master's Degree in the history of art from the University of California at Berkeley.

Since 1955 Heynneman has been involved in "total environmental planning" for many urban and community developments in the Netherlands and this country.

He is a member of the American Institute of Planners, American Society of Planning Officials, American Institute of Architects, National Assn. of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, Metropolitan Assn. of Urban Designers and Environmental Planners, San Francisco Planning and Urban Renewal Assn. and the Commonwealth Club of California.



Heynneman says he is running because, as a planning commissioner he has observed "Sausalito city government from within and I have become increasingly concerned with its ineffectiveness, lack of initiative and direction, which resuls in the slow, but sure destruction of this unique town."

If elected, he says, he will work to retain and strengthen the residential character of Sausalito, "preserve our natural and historical amenities and architecture" and stop the strangulation and contamination of life and business in the central business district.

He hopes to strive for a more efficient and effective city government that is responsive to the needs of residents rather than to tourist-related activities and to initiate and pursue, with strong citizen input, "programs aimed at alleviating and solving our urban problems."

ROBERT C. MARTIN, 54-year-old owner of the Lighthouse Restaurant, is a native Iowan and has lived in Sausalito seven years, residing at 5 Sausalito Boulevard.

Married and the father of two grown children, the candidate is a member of the Sausalito Lions Club and has been a Cub Scout leader, a Little League sponsor and a worker in cerebral palsy fund campaigns.

This is his second try for the council, his first bid having been made in 1968.

Martin said his qualifications for the council include "years of dealing with the public and listening to the grievances of the citizens and taxpayers of Sausalito.

"This leads me to believe I can in part give them the kind of city government they want," he added.

Martin believes that "this town has become honky-tonk in the last few years. The city needs better management. We should eliminate the high turnover in our police and fire departments and provide tax relief for our senior citizens."

He favors purchase of Central School for a city hall and does not believe the city can currently afford to go ahead with the Park Plaza Plan "in any way, shape or form." Martin would like to see two ferry terminals, a major facility in northern Sausalito and a "whistlestop" downtown.

W. DANIEL O'CONNOR, a 37-year-old married engineering executive for Esco Corp. in San Francisco, is a graduate of the University of Arizona and a member of the Sausalito Foundation, Sausalito Artists and Merchants and the Young Republicans, and a past director of the Sausalito Art Festival.

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., he resides at 30 El Portal and has lived in the city for eight years. He was one of the prime movers in the establishment of the new community park on the city's recently-purchased waterfront property near Litho Street.

He believes he has something to contribute to the council — "a willingness to work hard to help the city arrive at satisfactory solutions to the extremely difficult problems the city faces, solutions that would be beneficial to all of the community, not just one faction or another.

O'Connor is convinced the city cannot implement the Park Plaza Plan until it finds a way to recoup the approximately $132,000 which the city would lose annually in revenues by removing Municipal Park Lot No. 1, as called fgr in the plan.

LEONARD F. RAPPA, a 30-year-old attorney, has lived in Sausalito since 1968 and resides at 614 Spring Street. He holds a Bachelor's Degree in sociology and a law degree from Rutgers University.

The candidate has been active with environmental groups throughout the Bay Area and has represented several, including Save the Shoreline Committee, Citizens for a Quality East Bay Environment and Committee for a Green Foothills.

He and his wife, Margaret, are expecting their first child.

Rappa believes he is qualified for the council because his work has made him familiar with the workings of city, county and state governments and "I recognize they do not always function in the best interests of the people they represent."

"As an attorney for environmental groups, I have become intimately involved in solving environmental problems," he said. "My work in this area has made me recognize that many of our environmental problems result from the failure of local city governments to take positive preventive action.

"As a Sausalito city councilman, I will fight to preserve and protect the city's unique natural environment," he added.

Rappa is proposing an ordinance by which developers would be required to guarantee that the property tax revenues deriving from their projects would more than offset the cost of providing city services to the new residents in the developments.

SALLY STANFORD, after five misses, is making her sixth bid for a council seat, the first under the name Stanford, which she legally adopted last year. (Her previous campaigns were as Marsha Owen, her then-legal name).

Miss Stanford, a 23-year Sausalito resident, is proprietor of the Valhalla Inn. She is a director of the Sausalito and San Francisco chambers of commerce and a member of the Sausalito Businessmen's Assn. and the Sausalito Foundation.

The 68-year-old candidate said that, if elected, she would work for a community "where residents can be happy and find peace of mind."

"We need a council that will give fair and equal treatment to all residents and I have seen this council in many actions I consider unfair," she said.

Miss Stanford said Sausalito has depended too much on hired planners to shape the future of the community. "I'm tired of plans and planners. The city can't even lock the safe in city hall because of all the money that's been thrown away by Sausalito on unused plans when it could have been better spent to tangible advantages, like improving things or maybe providing better youth and senior citizen programs."

She favors Central School as a new civic center, but does not feel the city can afford to implement the Park Plaza Plan.

Miss Stanford advocates a program of careful spending by the city and charges the city has wasted much money in past years. "I know how to spend money with caution, since I have always had to earn my money," she said.

The candidate believes the city should "preserve as much open space as we can afford to pay for, but we can't just reach out and grab somebody else's property.

ROBIN SWEENY, the only incumbent in the race, is a 19-year resident of the city and lives with her husband, John, and two daughters at 173 San Carlos Ave.

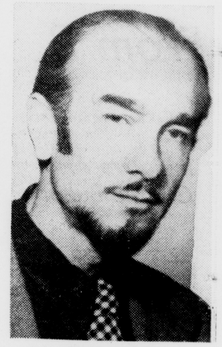
A native of New York City, she holds a registered nursing degree from Monmouth Medical Center in New Jersey, a post-graduate certificate in operating room nursing from Cornell University and a Bachelor's Degree from San Francisco State College. Mrs. Sweeny is currently employed as an operating room nurse at Ross General Hospital.

She was elected to the council in 1968 and has been vice mayor since 1970. She is a member of the Sausalito Women's Club and the Sausalito Yacht Club's Women's Auxiliary.

The candidate said that as a councilman she has "shown my concern for the resident and taxpayer, as well as the business community, and this will continue to be my ongoing concern in the next four years."

She believes the city's top priorities include a new city hall and library (and favors purchase of Central School for the city hall), improved city services, preservation of the waterfront and the residential areas."

"To take our city back to the quality of life of 20 years ago is impossible, but we should not allow what we have now to deteriorate," she said.



SERGE TRUBACH
Citizens divided

SERGE TRUBACH, a 60-year-old artist, is making his seventh try for the council and has lived 20 years in Sausalito, residing at 631 Bridgeway.

He was educated at the Academic Colorissi in Paris and National Academy and Cooper Union Institute in New York.

He is a member of artists and art associations, including the Atists' Cooperative of San Francisco, Artists' Equity of Northern California and New England and the Sausalito Art Fair.

Trubach, who is listed in Who's Who in American Art, has served on the art exhibits jury of the California State Fair.

A widower, he has one daughter.

"For the 20 years I have been a resident in Sausalito, the major problems are still unresolved," Trubach said. "Our citizens are still divided, due to the oppressing factions and a small group of self-satisfying buck chasers."

His aim, if elected, he said, is to "serve the total community and work to preserve our economy and the natural beauty of our community."

Among the city's chief problems are, he believes, the litter and dogs in the downtown area, and the city's declining architecture.

EDWIN S. LONG, public accountant, is the unopposed candidate for Sausalito city treasurer. Long formerly held the office from 1952 until 1969 when he resigned.

It could be the last time Sausalito voters will elect their city treasurer. A proposal on Tuesday's ballot would make the office an appointive position in the future.

Fairfax voters will have a full ballot to consider Tuesday with eight candidates running for two seats on the city council, three running for city treasurer, and an initiative measure which may determine the fate of the Marin Town and Country Club property.

In addition to the contested races, City Clerk Eileen L. Foster, appointed to the post in January, 1971, is running unopposed for election to the position.

Nine names will appear on the ballot for the city council race, but one, Edward T. Duncan, has withdrawn. Still in the running are Randall L. Garrison, Albert E. Gately, Harold S. Lezzeni, Joseph E. Martinez, Glenn B. Meagher, Urban M. Nielsen, E. Ross Parkerson and Adelaide P. Wilson.

Seeking the treasurer's post are Benjamin F. Courtz, Priscilla C. Gray and incumbent Harold H. Taft.

THE TOWN and country club measure asks the city's 3,715 registered voters to rezone the property to a new zoning classification that would limit use of the property to pruposes similar to its present resort and recreation function.

The city council refused the request by some citizens that it immediately rezone the property to the new classification.

The citizens, organized into a group called a Committee to Preserve Land and Nature, then presented 714 valid signatures on a petition to place the question on Tuesday's ballot.

Max Friedman, owner of Marin Town and Country Club, has fought the rezoning proposal and contends it would be illegal.

Fairfax City Atty. Wallace S. Myers has agreed with Friedman, saying he doubts whether the rezoning — if approved by the voters — would withstand a court test.

In the race for city council, candidates are vying for the seats of Mayor Cornelis van Vliet and Councilman Francis J. O'Connell, who did not seek reelection.

The election results could shift the majority view on the council on many issues.

Recent months have seen a series of 3 to 2 votes by the council, including the firing of Police Chief James R. Orr and proceeding with the second phase of the city offices reconstruction project.

O'Connell has usually found himself allied with Frank J. Egger on the losing end of the votes, with Van Vliet, Robert R. Souza and Lee Nelder forming the majority.

Here's a rundown on the candidates:

RANDALL L. GARRISON, 31, is a native of Butte, Mont., who has lived in Fairfax since 1962. He attended high school in San Francisco and received a bachelors degree in economics from the University of San Francisco.

He is northern California manager for E. H. Edwards Co., South San Francisco, and a member of the Commonwealth Club of California, the California Parent-Teachers Assn. and the Binicle Club of San Francisco.

Garrison and his wife, Sharon, and their two sons live at 35 Canyon Road.

Garrison has been a strong supporter of fired Fairfax Police Chief James R. Orr and helped organize a fund-raising dinner to support Orr's legal battle to be reinstated.

He advocates elimination of the city administrator's post and replacing it with a "city coordinator." He said Fairfax cannot afford an administrator, and that the only qualification for coordinator should be that he be from Fairfax.

He has proposed dropping the $150 a month salaries paid to councilmen and using the funds for youth programs, and he is a supporter of the ballot initiative seeking to rezone Marin Town and Country Club to prevent its development for residential use.

Garrison said he hoped Fairfax development would follow the lines of the general plan drafted in 1968, maintaining low population density and a good business climate.

"Homes have to be adapted to the environment, not vice-versa," he said.

ALBERT E. GATELY, 51, is a native of San Francisco. He has lived in Fairfax 12 years and in Marin County 18 years. He received an associate of arts degree from Sacramento City College and a law degree from Hastings College of Law in San Francisco.

He served with the Navy in the Pacific during World War II and was recalled to active duty during the Korean War.

He is a referee with the Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board in San Francisco. He served on the Fairfax Planning Commission for four years and is a former chairman of the Marin County Democratic Central Committee and former exalted ruler of the San Rafael Elks Lodge.

He and his wife, Shirley, have four children and live at 69 Bothin Road.

Gately appeared to have won election to the Fairfax City Council in 1970, but lost to incumbent Robert R. Souza by seven votes in a recount nine days after the election.

Gately has supported the PLAN initiative to rezone Marin Town and Country Club.

He is running for the council, he said, to work toward better city services in connection with street improvements, correction of drainage problems and improvements in city facilities.

He said Fairfax has to end "government by turmoil" and he has called the handling of the firing of Police Chief James R. Orr "barbaric."

"Citizens must regain confidence in our city government so we no longer will be the laughing stock of Marin," he said.

Gately said he did not support cutting or eliminating councilmen's salaries, saying the $150 a month barely reimburses councilmen for expenses required in connection with their council service.

HAROLD S. LEZZENI, 47, of 65 Spring Lane, is a native of Fairfax. He is a graduate of Fairfax grammar school and Tamalpais High School, and he studied with the University of California extension, majoring in marine engineering and naval architecture.

He served with the Army in the South Pacific during World War II.

Lezzeni is a building designer with offices in San Rafael and he is a member of the Marin Builders Exchange.

He has served on the Fairfax Planning Commission since 1967.

Lezzeni opposed the PLAN initiative to rezone the Marin Town and Country Club property. He said "the owner of the property should have the right to sell his property and develop it," adding that the city's design review board and planning commission could ensure that development was "correct."

If the people of Fairfax believe the property should be a park, he said, they should purchase it.

Lezzeni said he does not think $150 a month salary for councilmen is too much, although he said of the present council "we're not getting anything for what we're paying."

He said the council "must act together — not as a divided self-interest group."

Lezzeni called for realignment of the planning commission to work with a professional planner and he urged hiring a part-time planner for Fairfax.

The city's design review board should be restructured, he said, to include two nonresidents of Fairfax who are in the fields of architecture or design.

JOSEPH E. MARTINEZ, 36, is a native of Colorado. He has lived in Fairfax six years. He is an iron worker.

He is an Army veteran of the Korean War and a member of the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission, the city's housing element committee and a director of Fairfax Little League Baseball and Pop Warner Football.

He and wife, Diana, and two children live at 33 Merwin Avenue.

Martinez declined to state a position on the question of rezoning Marin Town and Country Club, saying the future use of the property "will be submitted to the people to decide and may possibly end up in the courts. I feel the decision of the people and the courts should be binding."

He has endorsed elimination of councilmen's salaries, urging that the money be used to hire a full-time recreation director.

Martinez has suggested a quarterly newsletter be published to keep citizens better informed on Fairfax issues.

He urged "better enforcement, additional legislation and community support" to solve problems of stray and unlicensed dogs and dogs running loose in downtown Fairfax.

He said he supports the city council's action in moving ahead with renovation and construction of city facilities at the present location.

GLENN B. MEAGER, 61, of 7 Crest Road, is a native of Iowa. He has lived in Fairfax for about a year, coming to California after serving with the Peace Corps for two years in Chili.

He received a bachelors degree from the University of Chicago, worked for several years as a newspaper reporter and later spent 20 years in advertising and public relations with Montgomery Ward Co. in Chicago.

He is a member of the Sierra Club.

Meagher has two grown children. His wife died in 1945.

Meagher has campaigned on the theme that Fairfax "fits into the total picture" and cannot be separated from the problems of the state, nation and world.

And "Spaceship Earth is in trouble," he said, "and in everything we do in Fairfax we should keep that in mind."

He criticized the current government of Fairfax as "turmoil without resolution," and he said he would "bring issues to a resolution."

He has argued against residential development of Marin Town and Country Club, saying "if we do not prevent the high density development of Marin Town and Country Club, we might as well forget Fairfax as we've know it. That would be the beginning of the end."

Council salaries, he said, were not a great issue in the campaign.

Meagher has called for the immediate resignation of Fairfax Mayor Cornelis van Vliet, who is not seeking reelection to the council.

Van Vliet has announced he intends to move from Fairfax and Meagher said that, "as a matter of simple ethics and justice," the mayor should resign now or at least refrain from voting on matters that will affect the future of Fairfax.

URBAN M. NIELSEN, 32, is a native of Bismarck, N.D. He and his wife, Doris, and two children live at 15 Cascade Drive.

He attended Concordia College at Moorehad, Minn., majoring in economics.

Nielsen is in management with Holly Stores, a subsidiary of S. S. Kresge Company. He previously worked seven years for Montgomery Ward Co.

He spent six years with the Army reserve, and he is a committee chairman of Cub Scout Pack 49 in Fairfax.

Nielsen has advocated the "logical approach to many of our problems."

"They should be taken to the people before being voted on by council," he said.

He criticized the last several city councils, saying that members had procrastinated on several issues, including, he said, the city offices remodeling. "It could have been developed by now," he said, "but instead we've taken crash measures because the building has been condemned."

E. ROSS PARKERSON, 40, is a native of Tulsa, Okla. He received a Bachelors Degree in environmental design from Southern Illinois University.

Parkerson is an urban planner and has worked for the Marin County Planning Department since 1965 and its chairman since April 1970.

He and his wife, Rose, and their three children live at 70 Manor Road.

Parkerson served in the Army from 1953 to 1955. He is a member of the American Institute of Planners and of the bishop's committee at St. Augustine Episcopal Church in Fairfax.

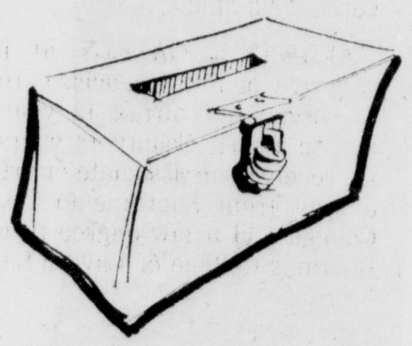
Parkerson supports the Marin Town and Country Club rezoning initiative.

He said that councilmen's salaries should be reduced from $150 a month to $25 a meeting.

Council priorities, he said, should be: to amend the general plan to reduce allowed population and adopt zoning laws to control population growth; implement a housing policy to provide housing for all; develop a master plan for Fairfax creeks.

He said the people of Fairfax were not informed of staff problems in the police department prior to the firing of Chief James R. Orr and he believes that public discussion of problems would have helped the department.

Board of review hearings into the firing of Orr, Parkerson said, "have cost us a considerable amount in civic pride" as well as in "public funds from an already overtaxed citizenry."



ADELAIDE P. WILSON is a native of Seattle, Wash., and a graduate of Principia College in Elsah, Ill. She has lived in Fairfax since 1961.

She and her husband, Russell Wilson, operate Christiansen's Bakery in Fairfax and live at 189 Cascade Drive with their three children.

Mrs. Wilson was elected to the Fairfax City Council in 1966, but lost a bid for reelection in 1970.

She is vice chairman of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council board, chairman of the housing subcommittee of the City-County Planning Council of Marin, and a member of the board of the Marin Council for Civic Affairs. She is also a member of the Louis A. Boyd Marin Museum of Science Guild and the League of Women Voters of Central Marin.

Mrs. Wilson is secretary of PLAN, the group pushing the rezoning of Marin Town and Country Club.

She criticized the present city council for "making major decisions on the future of Fairfax without any citizen involvement."

At the same time, she attacked the council's inaction in other areas, saying "we cannot sit with our heads in the sand forever and expect all problems to resolve themselves."

In a remark she said was a reference to the firing of Police Chief James R. Orr and subsequent lengthy board of review hearing, she said, "We need councilmen with a foresight to anticipate problems and deal with them before we end up with the kind of mess we have right now."

IN THE RACE for Fairfax City Treasurer, Benjamin F. Courtz, 55, is a native of Petaluma, but was reared in Marin County, attending San Anselmo schools and Tamalpais High School. A Navy veteran of World War II, Courtz is office coordinator with the chief engineer for Southern Pacific Railroad in San Francisco.

He and his wife, Emmie, have two sons and live at 20 Manor Road.

Courtz said he entered the treasurer's race to "become active in town affairs." He is seeking the post, he said, because he wants "to start at the bottom," to see how the town runs and perhaps seek a position on the city council in the future.

PRISCILLA C. GRAY, 45, a native of Oakland, is a graduate of Stanford University and received a masters degree in education from San Francisco State College.

She is a teacher in San Francisco. She served on The Fairfax School District board from 1967 to 1970. She was public relations director for four years for the now defunct Fairfax Festival and she is active with the Manor Hill Homeowners Assn., Marin Conservation League and Marin County Humane Society.

Mrs. Gray is chairman of a committee to Preserve Land and Nature (PLAN) seeking to prevent residential development of Marin Town and Country Club.

She and her husband, Buhl E. Gray have a son at Stanford and live at 126 Ridge Road.

If elected treasurer, Mrs. Gray said she would refuse to accept the $65 a month salary. Most duties of treasurer are duplicated by other city employees, she said, and "I would welcome the chance to prove that the taxpayers need not continue to support an outdated, bureaucratic practice any longer."

INCUMBENT FAIRFAX City Treasurer Harold H. Taft, 71, is a native of San Francisco. He was Pacific coast manager for 13 Dutch shipping lines for 18 years, and operated Taft Travel Agency in San Rafael for five years before retiring in 1967.

Taft, who has lived in Fairfax since 1941, and his wife, Willetta, live at 104 Crest Road.

He was appointed city treasurer in 1969 and is making his first bid for election to the office.

Taft said he considered it "impossible to voice campaign promises and pledges since the position of treasurer is a legal one and must adhere to legal rules and regulations. He noted that since he is retired, he is "available each day and especially during banking hours."

Cotati Council Race Is A Lively One

By THERON NEWELL

In Cotati, six candidates, including three incumbents, are running for three positions on the city council in Tuesday's election.

The 1,027 voters will be faced with a choice of a team of three candidates trying to unseat the three incumbents to take control of the city government.

The incumbents are Lester H. Peterson, Alfred Faletti and Ben Oretsky. Trying to unseat them are Geoffrey Dunham, Stephen Laughlin and Annette Lombardi, running as a team.

The main issues in the campaign are preservation of the rural atmosphere in the city, improvement of the water system and streets, parks and open space, and recreation.

ALFRED FALETTI, 57, was born in San Francisco, but has lived for the past 48 years in Cotati area. He is an Army veteran of World War II. He has worked as a mechanic for the Petaluma Cooperative Creamery since 1946. He and his wife, Jennie, live on West Sierra Avenue.

Faletti was one of the original members of the city council when Cotati incorporated eight years ago. He has been elected to the council twice before and resigned twice, serving more than six years. Prior to that, he was president of the Cotati Public Utility District for a total of more than 19 years public service to the area.

"I would like to see the area remain rural, but I believe that is impossible," he said.

When he served on the Public Utility District, the area was supplied with water from a well. Faletti said he would like to see the well reactivated because the water from the aqueduct is so expensive.

BEN ORETSKY, a retired building contractor, has served on the city council since being appointed to it Dec. 16 of last year.

He has lived in Cotati since 1929. He is a graduate of Petaluma Senior High School. He is retired president of Wright-Oretsky Building contractors which specializes in building schools in Northern California.

He spent four years in the Air Force during World War II and was discharged as a staff sergeant. He worked as a carpenter until receiving his contractor's license in 1949. He formed a partnership with Paul Wright in 1957 for school construction contracting.

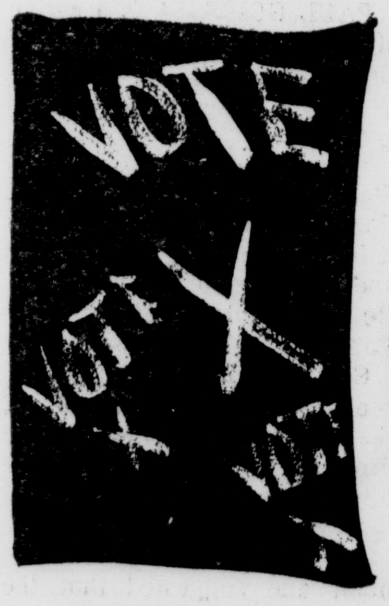
LESTER H. PETERSEN, 54, of 405 Sierra Avenue, Cotati, was born in Petaluma, and has lived in Cotati since 1930. He owns a drilling and pump company.

He was a president of the Cotati School District Board of Trustees for 12 years until he was appointed to the Cotati City Council last July 16.

He and his wife, Harriet, have four grown children.

He is a member of the Cotati Lions Club and the Petaluma Elks Club, the Cotati Chamber of Commerce and the Sonoma County School District Organizational Committee.

Petersen said that the main issues in the election is the proposal that Cotati get its own adequate water system instead of buying water from the aqueduct system; better streets; and seeing that "the city administration gets its job done with the greatest efficiency possible." He said that the city's sewer system is in good condition.



ANNETTE LOMBARDI, Stephen Laughlin and Geofrey Dunham are running as a team on the same platform.

They belive that city services should be improved, and say this includes better streets and storm drains. They also want pedestrian walkways or sidewalks.

They claim the water system is badly deteriorated and say they would seek federal funds to help improve it.

The plaza is the center of Cotati. They would route cars around it to "make it a place where people could walk, relax or picnic."

The Citizens Planning Advisory Committee drew up a general plan for the city. Laughlin was on that committee and the trio support it. The plan calls for keeping a rural atmosphere in Cotati. It also calls for all elements of Cotati's population to be able to find housing in the city. They believe the city council should pass an ordinance allowing the Housing Authority to operate within the city limits.

They want certain specified areas, with turnoffs, set aside for hitch-hikers.

The three of them believe that communications between the citizens and the city council should be improved.

Miss Lombardi, 44, of 55 Charles Street, was born in Petaluma. She graduated from Petaluma High School and Sonoma State College. She is a partner in the Eeyore Book Store in Cotati. She has lived in Cotati for the past four years. She is single and this is her first time attempt at public office.

GEOFREY DUNHAM, 29, a native of Hollywood, is a graduate of College of Marin and Sonoma State College. He was a part-time sports writer for the Independent-Journal when he attended the College of Marin. At Sonoma State College he was editor of the college paper, The Cossack Steppes, for two years. He is a former rock musician, playing the guitar. At the present time he is owner of an antique shop at Porta Bello West — Cotati Company No. 3. He is single, and lives at 8916 Cypress Avenue.

STEPHEN I. LAUGHLIN, 24, a native of Norfolk, Va., is an English tutor at the Santa Rosa Junior College. He has lived in Cotati for the past 10 years. He attended Foothill College in Palo Alto, and took his Master's Degree in political science from Sonoma State College. He is single.

Rohnert Park voters will have a choice of 10 candidates for city council when theygo to the polls Tuesday.

Potential growth and the need for strict controls on development have been stressed throughout the campaign. All candidates have called for cooperation between the city council and schools so that growth can be coordinated with school construction.

Three positions on the council are open including that of Councilman Jack Buchanan, who is not seeking reelection. The council jobs pay $150 per month. A total of 2,631 Rohnert Park residents will be eligible to cast ballots.

The candidates are:

LOUIS G. BEARY, 31, a native of Philadelphia, graduate of Sonoma State College, who has lived in Rohnert Park for six years. He is self-employed as a plastering contractor. He and his wife, Sherlyn, have two children and reside at 810 Bernice Avenue. He is president of the citizens advisory committee to the Cotati School District Board, president of the Sonoma State College Alumni Assn., member of the Rohnert Park Lions Club and a Babe Ruth League baseball coach.

Beary has stressed the need for controlled growth and said he would demand concessions from developers for the general good of the city. He said he would work to bring greater efficiency to city government, and he has opposed formation of non-profit corporations by the city council to sell bonds without voter approval.

JOHN T. GIERTZ, 42, is a native of Chicago, who is employed as general foreman for American Contracting Inc., San Francisco, and has lived in Rohnert Park for 11 years. He and his wife, Doris, have two children and live at 455 Alta Avenue. He is a member of Local No. 551 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and of the Joint Apprentice Training Committee.

In the campaign, Giertz has supported growth for the city, but said it must be carefully designed. He said the building pace could then continue while the beauty of the city is maintained. He has supported the encouragement of "smog-free" industry.

PAUL GOLIS, 54, is a native of Scranton, Pa., graduate of Duke University Law School and works as an attorney, developer, writer and poet. He served in the Army in World War II and has lived in Rohnert Park for 12 years. He and his wife, Gloria, have five children and live at 215 Allan Avenue. He is a member of the Rohnert Park Cultural Arts Corp.

Golis has criticized the current city councilmen, saying that inefficiency has caused the property tax rate to rise. He has opposed construction of the temporary city hall as wasteful, opposed salaries for councilman, and suggested that the mayor, city clerk and treasurer be elected rather than appointed.

ARTHUR F. HOLLINGSWORTH, 34, is a native of San Francisco, and attended Santa Rosa Junior College and San Francisco City College. He is employed as an insurance agent and has lived in Rohnert Park for 11 years. He and his wife, Sandra, have eight children and live at 442 Alta Avenue. He is a member of the Rohnert Park Men's Club and Rohnert Park Hospital Foundation.

Hollingsworth has called for a greater variety of lot sizes and housing styles. He said he believes Rohnert Park needs more light industry and small businesses to improve the tax base and employment picture.

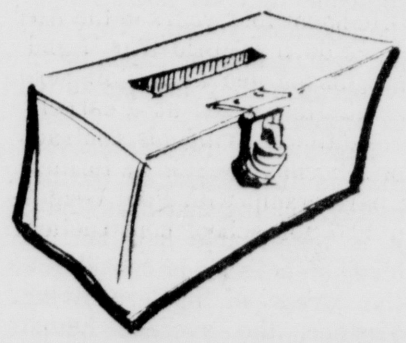
WARREN K. HOPKINS, 34, a native of Albany, is a graduate of Sonoma State College, a Navy veteran, and an incumbent councilman seeking a second term. He is employed as a mathematics teacher at Rohnert Park Junior High School. He and his wife, Joan, have two children and live at 256 Allan Avenue. He is a member of the Boy Scouts of America, Cross and Crown Lutheran Church, Rohnert Park Homeowners Assn. and a baseball coach.

Hopkins said the city council should strive to achieve a well-planned community. He said he has voted against many spending plans approved by his council colleagues in an effort to keep the tax rate down. He has listed new access road and an expanded sewer plant as recent achievements of the council.

BART C. MITCHELL, 58, is a native of Vail, Iowa, attended University of California, and has lived in Rohnert Park for 12 years. He is a general contractor and real estate broker. He and his wife, Amy, have a grown daughter, and live at 89 Alma Avenue. He is past president of the Cotati School District Board, and active in the Optimist Club, Lions Club, Elks Club, Chamber of Commerce and Boy Scouts of America.

Mitchell has said Rohnert Park faces a period of accelerated growth which will be good, if controlled. He said a business-like approach must be used to run city government.

WILLIAM D. RUSSELL, 34, is a native of Redwood City and has lived in Rohnert Park for two years. He is employed as a newspaper dealer. He and his wife, Shirley, have two daughters and live at 7898 Santa Barbara Drive. He is a member of the citizens advisory committee to the Cotati School District Board, of the Northern Area Advisory Committee to the Petaluma Board of Education and Steering Committee for Year 'Round schools.



Russell said his chief concern is the possibility of a crowded environment. He proposed that the number of homes be controlled and that larger lots and custom homes be encouraged to provide greater variety.

MARGARET SHEEHAN, 19, is a native of Portland, a biology major at Sonoma State College and has lived in Rohnert Park for eight years. She is single and lives at 7523 Blair Avenue. She is a member of the Sonoma State College Orchestra, College Concert Jazz Ensemble and Youth Coalition of 1972, and has been active in voter registration drives.

Miss Sheehan has called for carefully planned and controlled growth so that all types of people can find a home in Rohnert Park. She has spoken in favor of urban shopping centers and industry to improve the tax base and has called for closer ties between the city and the college.

VERNON P. SMITH, 39, a native of Cotton Plant, Miss., is a graduate of San Francisco State College, served in the Navy during the Korean War and has lived in Rohnert Park for 11 years. He is employed as product manager for the Del Monte Corp. He and his wife, Valentina, have three children and live at 495 Arlen Drive. He has served on the city council for 10 years, is a member of the Sonoma County Mayors' and Councilmens' Association and Sonoma County Local Agency Formation Commission.

Smith has said the reinstatement of the planning commission will help the city plan and control its growth. He said that commercial development now in the planning stages will help the tax base. He said the city has received $782,000 in federal grants recently due to the efforts of the council.

ROSE M. WILLINGHAM, 36, a native of Hawthorne, Los Angeles County, has lived in Rohnert Park for five years. She is a housewife. She and her husband, William, have three children and live at 7422 Belita Avenue.

Mrs. Willingham shares the same platform with Paul Golis. She had opposed the spending of $200,000 for a temporary city hall, saying residents should have had the chance to vote on it. She has also called for an investigation into the operation of the city golf course and proposed the elimination of salaries for councilmen.

ROHNERT PARK voters on Tuesday will also cast their ballots on a proposed $195,000 bond issue for park improvement purposes. The measure will require a two-thirds vote of approval for passage.

Problem Of The Media

PRESSURES OF THE PRESS by Hillier Krieghbaum; Crowell, 238 pages. $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Broadcasting officials and newspaper editors have been fulminating of late about "censorship attempts" by the Nixon administration. At the same time, polls have shown that newspapers, radio and television are regarded with somewhat less than complete belief by the public.

Hillier Krieghbaum, journalism educator and former United Press reporter, tries in "Pressures on the Press" to assess where the faults lie. They are widely distributed.

Krieghbaum's book is a fair, largely objective study of the various pressures to which the media are subject. The reader will learn from it many of the reasons why what he reads in the newspaper, hears on the radio or sees on the video tube does not always tell the full story. And he may lose some of his preconceptions about what incluences the dissemination of news.

When it comes to what can be done to improve the media's credibility, Krieghbaum opts for local press councils modeled somewhat on the British plan. The case he makes for them, however, is not too slrong, and he passes over what seems to have been greater success with newspaper "ombudsmen" — employed by the papers — to make sure the public always gets a fair shake in the news columns.

Nevertheless, it is a thoughtful book that both those who write and edit the news and those dependent on them for it will find highly worthwhile. — 0 —

GEORGE JACKSON, in San Quentin Prison awaiting trial for the slaying of a Soledad guard for which his two fellow defendants were recently acquitted, died last August in an attempted break. "Blood in My Eye," a second collection of Jackson's writings, has been published posthumously by Random House. His earlier book was "Soledad Brother."

A Bitter Attack Upon The System

BLOOD IN MY EYE by George L. Jackson; Random House, 197 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Mary Leydecker.

"Blood in My Eye" is a second collection of the late George L. Jackson's letters from prison to friends and relatives. This book, published posthumously, contains writings completed just a few days before Jackson died in an abortive escape attempt at San Quentin last August in which three guards and two inmates were killed.

In his first book, "Soledad Brother," Jackson's letters, forcefully and impressively, told how he evolved from an 18-year-old robber into a prison revolutionary. By the time he wrote "Blood in My Eye," Jackson had come the full route to advocating only violence to solve the country's problems as he saw them.

The book is a bitter diatribe written by a man incarcerated so long that hatred had seemingly consumed him.

It opens with a statement by Jackson that just about sums up all his views:

"We must accept the eventuality of bringing the USA to its knees; accept the closing off of critical sections of the city with barbed wire, armored pig carriers crossing the streets, soldiers everywhere, tommy guns pointed at stomach level, smoke curling black against the daylight sky, the smell of cordite, house-to-house searches, doors being kicked in, the commonness of death."

From this grim opening, Jackson goes on to describe for almost 200 pages details of how much a revolution should be carried out, complete with instructions on camouflage, ambushes and other techniques of warfare.

He maintains vehemently that such a war is the only way "political prisoners," as he describes himself, can be freed, and as the only hope for black Americans. Ironically, months after his death, his fellow defendants, also blacks, charged with the slaying of a Soledad Prison guard were acquitted — by the U.S. jury system.

Jackson did not live to hear that verdict. And despite it his bitterness will live on in today's still unhappy and restless world.

Something Special When 2 People Touch

INTIMATE BEHAVIOUR by Desmond Morris; Random House, 244 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Jorie Parr.

Oh, no, not another sex book! I thought. And no, this, it developed, is not just another sex book. Rather a balanced, loving treatise of one of man's most pressing needs.

Dr. Desmond Morris, author of "The Naked Ape" and "The Human Zoo," now turns his attention to "the something special that happens when two people touch one another physically." He notes that we have gradually become less and less touchful, more and more distant, and that has been accompanied by emotional remoteness.

Mother and her womb envelope the patterns outlined in "Intimate Behaviour." Whoever has been reluctant to pull the plug from the warm bathtub can empathize with the many identifications throughout.

For a man of science, Dr. Morris indicates a compatible nature with a tender subject. Love, he declares, is a biological fact. "A fleeting touch on the cheek from the one they adore will be worth more than six hours in 37 positions with someone they do not." As for the liberated young, "They will not give up holding hands merely because they are permitted to copulate."

The author reiterates that man is the sexiest of the primates, holding that if anything, it is remarkable how low the level of activity is considering the stress of modern living. Further, the average human animal can enjoy roughly half a century of active sexual life, a range that few other mammals can match.

For the person without another to love, there are the substitutes. The professional touchers, such as doctors and hairdressers. The pets, the candy and coffee, too, cigarettes, waterbeds. Let them have them, they're better than nothing, is the theory.

If the trend has perhaps swung a little too far in today's permissive atmosphere, at least we are in a better position than our immediate ancestors. And we should be grateful for the sexual reformers of the 20th Century.

The recent vogue of encounter groups demonstrates the compeling need for intimacy. Dr. Morris allows as how "we laugh at educated adults who pay large sums to go and play . . . touch and hug in scientific institutes . . . How much easier it would all be if . . . we could release our feelings, and indulge ourselves in an occasional, and magical, return to intimacy."

Marin Poet On Rifts

THE FAMILY by Abram Matthies; Dorrance, 150 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

With poetry, essays, proverbs, stories and parables, Abram Matthies examines the rifts in families and society — "Where is the difference/That creates so much pain?/Is it the 'I' that wants to be vain? . . ." — and concludes: "Recognition of our faults is a very good lesson."

Matthies is a Fairfax resident involved in construction work, who was born in Russia, who has lived in Germany, Canada and South America, and who has led an adventurous life.

Through his book, prose and poetry, runs the theme of love as the bridge that spans not only the generational gap, but all the other breaches in our social structure: "For in defeat we suffer unending pain, And in love, unending pain."

A Classic For The Antiques Collector

OLD PEWTER, BRASS, COPPER, AND SHEFFIELD PLATE by N. Hudson Moore; Tuttle, 229 pages, $8.25. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

The mania for collecting antiques continues to gain in its momentum as indicated by the report of its publisher, Charles E. Tuttle Co. of Rutland, Vt., that the entire initial order of this book had already been sold, even before its arrival from the printer.

Small wonder, though, for this new edition of a much respected manual that first appeared in 1905 touches upon not one, but four, favorites of seekers of things old and beautiful.

Pewter, however, is the star of the book. Wrote author Moore: "Old pewter is becoming daily of greater interest to the householder, since the fancy of using this attractive ware in country houses has become so widespread. Old plates, platters and chargers that have not seen the light for scores of years . . . are now brought forth and treated with pride and consideration. Hollow-ware — jugs, mugs, tankards, and the like — is even more in demand . . . "

True in Moore's time, and even more true today.

His book offers as good a history of pewter through the turn of the century as has been written, and deals expertly and affectionately with its special, winning qualities.

Brassware, copper utensils and Sheffield plate then receive the same treatment.

Moore's writing style is personal and chatty, so that the book has a great deal of old-fashioned appeal of its own. And there are a goodly number of photographs of some striking pieces. More than most 65-year-old books for collectors, "Old Pewter, Brass, Copper and Sheffield Plate" has held its value. It is deserving of the handsome reprinting Tuttle has accorded it.

Tricksters, And Tricked

HOAXES by Curtis D. MacDougall; Dover, 309 pages, paperback, $2.75. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Dover Publications picked a fortuitous time to reissue Curtis D. MacDougall's "Hoaxes." Clifford Irving's "autobiography" of Howard Hughes — which certainly would be included in a book such as MacDougall's if one were written today — should stimulate interest in a fascinating subject.

As MacDougall, Northwestern University journalism professor, points out, we sometimes love to be hoaxed — and we always love to see someone else the victim of a trickster. MacDougall goes into the reasons for this, illustrating them with hoaxes drawn from history.

Such famous foolers as the "Cardiff Giant," the "curse of King Tut," and Orson Welles' "invasion from Mars" are here along with many less-known hoaxes. It is a book amusing, instructive, and sometimes disconcerting.

"The great need of the mystery story today is not novelty of apparatus but novelty of approach. The whole genre needs overhauling, a return to first principles, a realization that murder has to do with human emotion and deserves serious treatment. Mystery story writers need to know more about life and less about death — more about the way people think and feel and act, and less about how they die." — Philip Van Doren Stern, 1944.

From The Who- To Why-Dun-Its

By DON KEOWN

The art critic who is himself a painter working in the abstract school is unlikely to view an exhibition of canvases all done in the representational manner without some personal prejudices.

Likewise the music critic steeped in opera and the classics upon assignment to a rock concert, or vice versa.

Thus it is that Julian Symons, in his "Mortal Consequences," billed as "a history from the detective story to the crime novel," but actually as much a critique as a history, is influenced by the bent of his own work.

Symons is one of the foremost practitioners of that very flexible genre that has come to be called the crime novel. And as such, he looks with some impatience upon the older form from which it sprung — the detective story or the who-done-it — and upon those few who persist in still writing it.

But allowing for Symons' personal bias in favor of his own school of plotting, and recognizing, too, that the mystery-suspense field is peculiarly susceptible to individual likes and dislikes, one must agree that the literate and knowledgeable Symons has written a most enlightening survey of a field too often disdained or neglected.

Of the detective story, Symons writes: "(Edgar Allan) Poe was the founding father whose genius suggested the themes to be followed by other writers." But, he stresses, Poe's fatherhood of a new genre was strictly unintentional. "He thought that his mistress was Art, but really she was Sensation."

The detective story that followed, Symons writes, was tailored for a conservative middle class with increasing leisure time, money and literacy. Symons names Wilkie Collins and Emile Gaboriau as the two who "after Poe, set the pattern in which detectives were made," elevating the "honest professional" to status along side Poe's "aristocratic amateur."

Symons gives Arthur Conan Doyle and his Sherlock Holmes full marks for their contributions to the genre's advancement — "if one were choosing the best 20 short detective stories ever written, at least half a dozen of them would be about Sherlock Holmes." But he regrets the mythology that has sprung up around the Holmes tales.

By the late 1920s, Symons, writes, a certain weariness had started to appear around the mechanical ingenuity of the detective or crime-puzzle story. New blood began to take new tacks and employ new devices, and some of the old hands shifted their direction. But the 1930s — the Golden Age for the genre — were still to be dominated by the classical detective story. This was the era of Sayers, Van Dine, Carr, Christie, Blake, Queen, Innes, Eberhart and Marsh.

And, to Symons at least, it was a period when writers sacrificed character and story depth for the sake of a mechanical perfection in their puzzles.

"To insulate your writing totally from life permits the creation of a kind of art, but enjoyment of it has limitations as great as those in the closed world of Restoration comedy," Symons writes. "Indeed they are greater, for crime stories must inevitably be 'about' life in a way that a play need not be, and if the effect is wholly artificial, in the end we dissent from what is being offered us. The Golden Age was not the main highway of crime fiction that it looked at the time, but a minor road full of interesting twists and views which petered out in a dead end."

Symons minimizes the fact that it was a very long time petering out. And that, indeed, a hard core of appreciators of the detective puzzle story remain among us today, still enjoying what seems to be one of the most diversionary kinds of reading yet devised for man.

But Symons is happy to move on to a new age in which writers aimed at "combining popular entertainment with a study of people and problems."

"The new writers," he says, "were inclined to ask Why rather than How, and their Why was often concerned with the psychological make-up and social background of killer and killed." And the Great Detective, no longer essential since there was no puzzle to command his deductive resources, tended to disappear from crime fiction.

At this same time writers, too, had been discovering the greater rewards and opportunities of the novel over the short story.

The remainder of Symons' book contains some provocative dissections of the work of Patricia Highsmith (a particular favorite of his), Dashiel Hammett, Raymond Chandler, Georges Simenon, Margot Bennett, John Bingham, Ross Macdonald, John MacDonald, Nicholas Freeling, Margaret Millar, Friedrich Durrenmatt, Stanley Ellin, Shelley Smith, Andrew Garve, Michael Gilbert, Ed McBain and others.

Some will be irked by Symons' belittling of the work of such proven performers as John Creasey and Agatha Christie, suspecting Symons of confusing prolific output with necessarily mediocre, and will notice, too, the total absence of some favorite names — Sara Woods, M. Fagyas, Frederic Brown, Bill Knox, L. P. Davies, Charlotte Armstrong, etc. Some will quarrel, perhaps bitterly, with his categorizing of certain writers — as "serious novelists," as "entertainers" as "big producers," as "curiosities," as "hum drums," etc. A chapter on spy fiction seems superficial and probably would best have been omitted since it seems outside Symons' expertise. After all, there is no similar chapter on the authors of Gothic fiction.

But on the whole, Symons book is valuable and authoritative. Thankfully, he wavers only occasionally in his rejection of the snobbism that crime fiction is automatically second-rate fiction, claiming rightfully that Hammett's "The Glass Key" can stand comparison with any American novel of its decade (but accepting the phrase "a mediocre form" as descriptive of crime fiction writing).

As a reader of some 100 crime fiction hardcover books and no small number of other fiction works annually, we are convinced there are more hack mystery and detective books than hack works in fiction generally simply because there are more total books written in that genre than in any other. Julian Symons may not be as plain spoken in his assertion of that premise as one might hope, but the very fact that he has chosen to write a book of the critical nature of "Mortal Consequences" testifies to the seriousness with which better suspense fiction authors regard their craft, seeing it as a mirror of one very meaningful aspect of our many-faceted society.

AN APPROPRIATE project for this 50th anniversary year of that guardian of American democracy, the American Civil Liberties Union, is the publication of "The Rights of Americans" by Random House, both as a hardcover book and as a $3.95 Vintage softcover book.

Norman Dorsen of the ACLU has edited this handbook of pieces by the scholarly likes of Columbia Law School Dean Michael I. Sovern, New York University Law Prof. Graham Hughes, attorney Daniel A. Rezneck and Columbia Law School Prof. Kent Greenawalt on such topics a the right to equal educational opportunity, to equal employment, to housing, to legal services, to the vote, to protest, to publish, to privacy, to religious liberty and to travel, as well as on the rights of such groups as criminal defendants, prisoners, mental patients, juveniles, women, educators, students, union members and servicemen.

In his introduction, editor Dorsen quotes Robert F. Kennedy: "It is not enough to allow dissent. We must demand it. For there is much to dissent from."

And this is the theme that runs through all these thoughtful, often inspring pieces — and through the courageous history of the ACLU.

IN THE TIME of grandmother, needles meant sewing and knitting. And just a short time back the word "needle" brought to mind the dreadful habit of drug addiction.

But today needles are most likely to be mentioned in connection with acupuncture, the ancient Chinese method for anesthetizing and healing.

It involves, of course, the expert placement of fine needles through the skin into key control points to relieve pain, to remedy maladies or to desensitize portions of the body. Hardly the stuff for parlor games. But then, the Chinese do not regard it as such. And more and more westerners have become curious about this centuries-old Oriental science.

They can pursue their interest and satisfy their curiosity by reading Random House's new $1.75 Vintage Book paperback edition of Dr. Felix Mann's "Acupuncture: The Ancient Chinese Art of Healing," which is available also in hardcover. The book was originally published in 1963.

With drawings and charts, Mann, a British doctor who studied in China and then set up an acupuncture center in London, goes into the subject in detail and at length. You won't emerge from the book in any position to practice acupuncture upon yourself or others. Indeed, the descriptions may suffice to cure you of all further interest in acupuncture and in needles generally. But certainly you will have a much better understanding of this much-discussed subject.

THE SENATOR'S RANSOM by Ken Bernstein: Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 255 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

KEN BERNSTEIN
commendable purpose

Ken Bernstein, who used his experience as an NBC correspondent in Moscow to provide the background for his earlier "Intercept," now makes similar use of time served in South America for this, his second novel.

A United States senator and presidential aspirant touring Latin America is kidnaped in Brazil by a band of idealistic leftists who plan to use him to counter the tyranny of their country's ruling military junta. In the hands of his abductors, the senator learns much about the brutality of a totalitarian government and about the desperation of those who risk their lives to fight its oppressions from underground. And he discovers a great deal about himself as well.

Bernstein quite plainly is motivated by a commendable desire to expose the ruthlessness and the corruption of the kind of military government we have encouraged in too many countries in Latin America and elsewhere. Unfortunately, in order to make certain his points are unobscured, he has oversimplified and underwritten. The reading goes very rapidly. But the absence of subleties and complexities robs his story of much of its bite and conviction.

Virginia City — The Liveliest Ghost Town

The sun, reflecting off the huge mounds of gold and silver mine tailings, winks, and the gentle wind nudges tumbleweed across the road in front of you. At any moment there is this feeling that a bearded, booted, dusty miner will clamp a sweaty hand on your shoulder.

In the early morning and in the evening there is a quietness about Virginia City, Nev. The past shadows you up the long hill that is C Street past places with names like, among others, the Bucket of Blood, the Silver Queen, The Bonanza, The Delta, and the Longbranch Saloon.

IN THE DAY the town literally jumps and becomes without a doubt the "liveliest ghost town" in the world as hundreds, and sometimes thousands, arrive to touch the past and for a brief time, live it.

There was a time when Virginia City was the largest city between St. Louis and "Frisco," with some 2,200 buildings resting gingerly over 750 miles of underground diggings.

Virginia City's shining hour lasted from the moment gold was discovered in 1859 until the late 1890s.

Many of the nation's wealthiest families would spring from those who struck it rich in that period; names like Hearst, Mackay, Roos, Sutro, Fleishacker, Flood, Baldwin, Fair, Sharon, O'Brien and Fong.

THEY, AND others, retrieved some $1,250,500,000 in gold and silver from the Comstock and other surrounding lodes, the richest body of precious ore in the history of the world.

At its peak in 1873 in the City of Virginia, itself, there were no less than 30,000 residents — with that many more in satellite communities like Gold Hill and Silver City.

Virginia City was named after James Fenimore, better known to bewhiskered miners as "Old Virginny," because he came from the state of Virginia. Fenimore, so the story goes, fell and broke a bottle of whiskey on the earth, exclaiming that he was christening the locality "Pirginia Town," which later became "Virginia City."

TWO BROTHERS, Ethan Allen and Hosea Ballous Crosch, discovered the Comstock Lode but both died shortly thereafter. Hosea struck his foot with a pick and died a week later from gangrene. Ethan died a few months later in a severe snowstorm.

Henry Comstock, a Canadian trapper and adventurer, laid claim to the land, finally driving a bargain so that he and a companion, Emanuel Penrod, had equal shares in the claim.

By 1862 at least 40 companies had erected shaft houses, and 12 had installed machinery for pumping water and hoisting rock from the mines. More than 12 million dollars was taken from the area that year.

THE VIRGINIA and Truckee Railroad was begun in 1869 and eight months thereafter trains were chugging 21 miles into Carson City. The "Iron Horses" eliminated hundreds of teams composed of 10 to 18 horses and mules. The animal pack trains had been used to transport concentrates and freight across the Sierra Mountains.

In 1875 the booming mining town was literally burned to the ground as 2,000 buildings and homes were destroyed in a 10 million dollar fire. The hearty populus, undaunted, immediately rebuilt the city into even a greater city.

The slow decline of the Comstock began in 1890 until finally, by 1940, only about 600 persons remained. Today the population has climbed to over 800.

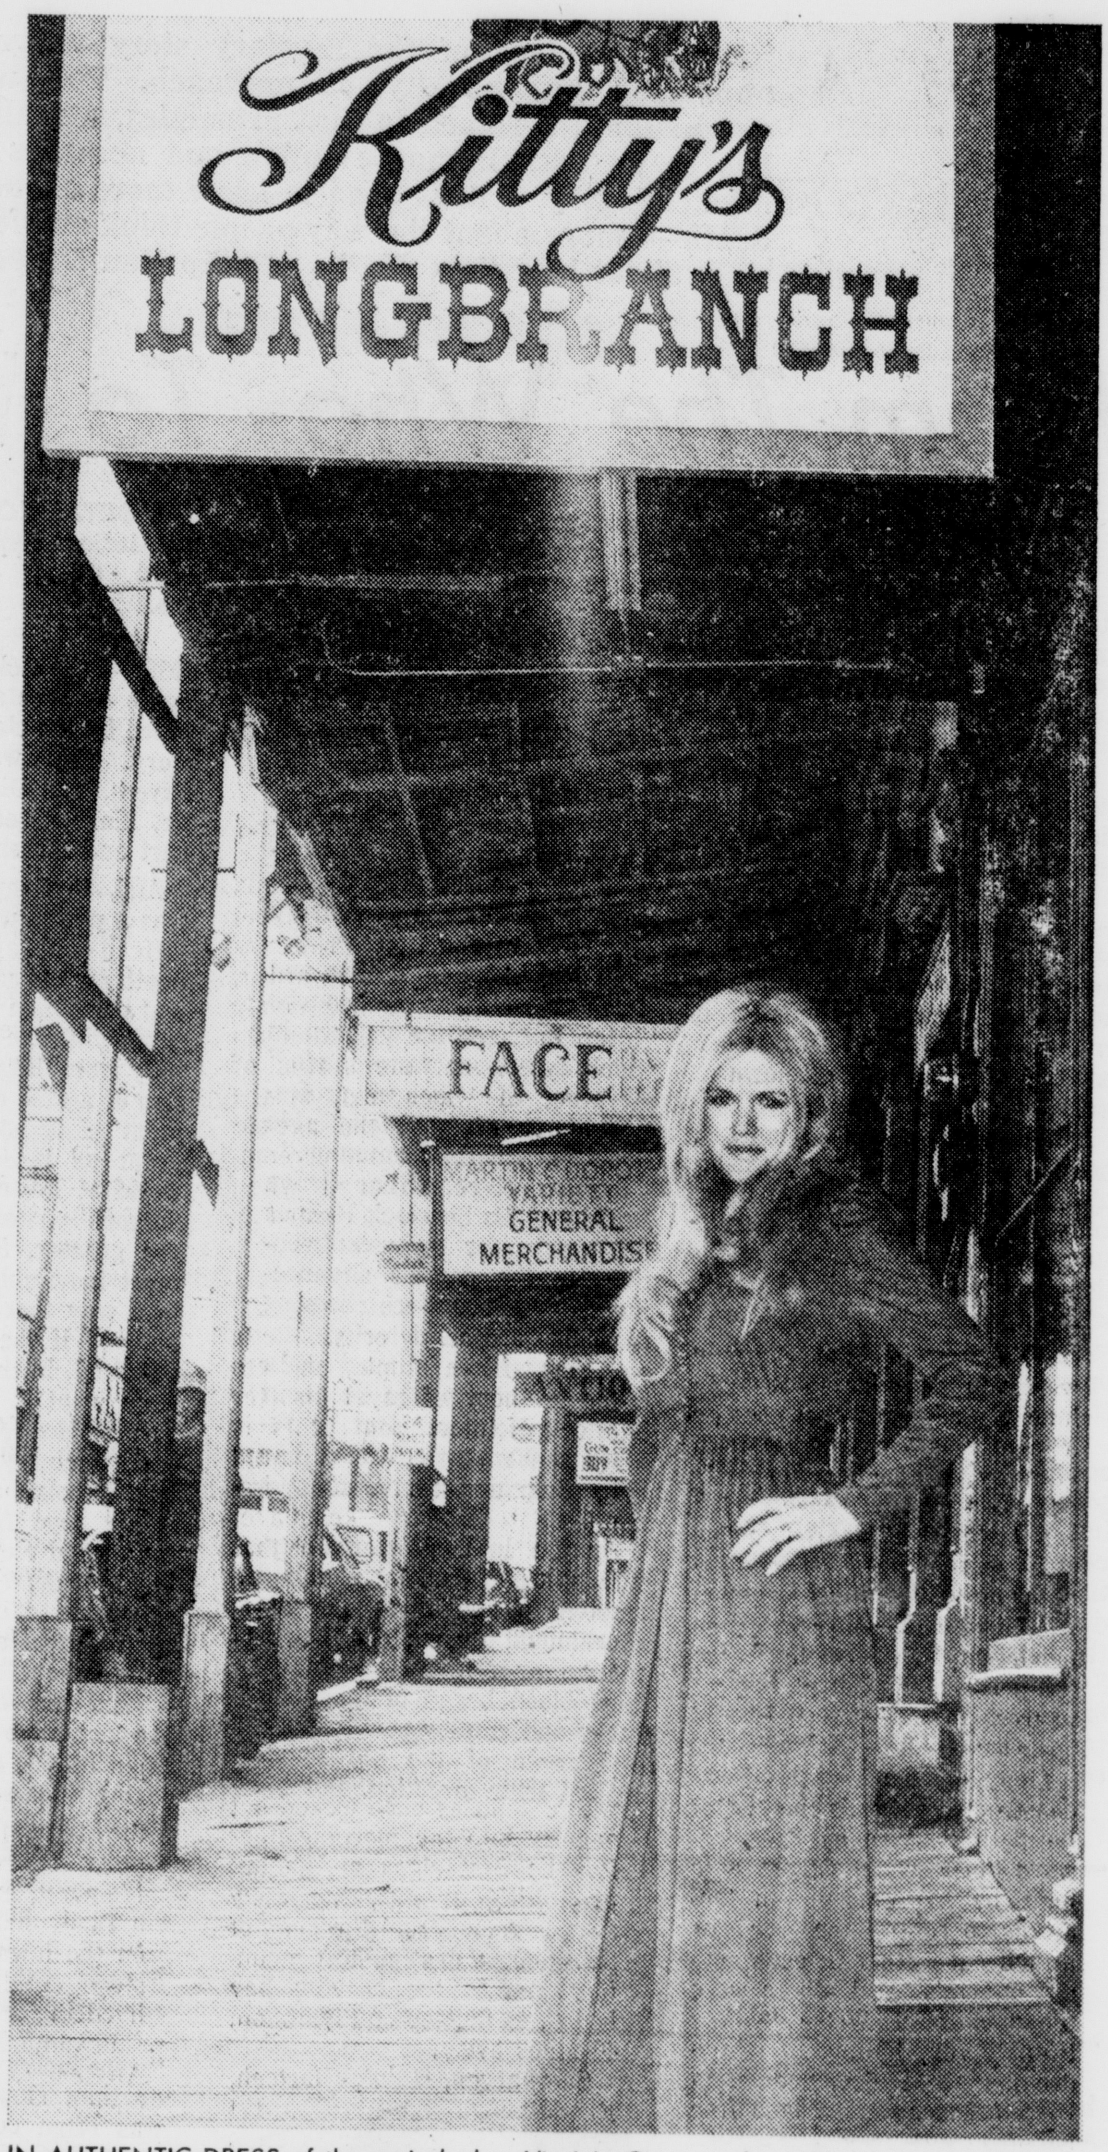
SIGHTSEERS visiting the town this year will find most of the natives decked out in late 19th Century attire — adding color to an already colorful town.

Visitors should not miss the cemetery not far from the village, the many mansions restored to their original conditions, St. Mary's in the Mountains Catholic Church, the Opera House, St. Paul Episcopal Church, and of course, the mine sites.

Virginia City residents will stage a 10-day celebration pegged "Bonanza Days," from July 21 to July 28. This is the first year for this affair. The annual world-famed Camel Races will be held the second weekend of September.

MARK TWAIN, publisher of The Territorial Enterprise newspaper in Virginia City for several years, said on a revisit to the town in his later years, "From Virginia's airy situation one could look out over a vast, far-reaching panorama of mountain ranges and deserts; and whether the day was bright or overcast, whether the sun was rising or setting, or flaming in the zenith, or whether the night and the moon held sway, the spectacle was always impressive and beautiful."

It still is!



IN AUTHENTIC DRESS of the period when Virginia City was the goldmining capital of the West, pretty Barbara Smith of Reno poses before one of the several old-time saloons that cater now to tourists instead of prospectors and help Virginia City retain the color and flavor of its past.

In Europe, Americans Ride The Rails — And Like It

By MURRAY J. BROWN

While Amtrak still struggles to put U.S. rail passenger service back on the right track, European railroads are enjoying ever-increasing popularity among Americans touring the continent.

Many take advantage of low-priced promotional fares such as the Eurailpass — which offers unlimited travel within a specified time on any or all of 13 continental railroads. It still is one of the best transportation bargains in Europe in these days of the devalued dollar.

Eurailpass tickets are sold only to residents of the Americans and must be purchased before leaving for Europe. They can not be bought overseas.

I HAVE ENJOYED riding trains in France, Italy, Germany and Norway. I have found them modern, clean, comfortable, punctual and convenient and manned by efficient and courteous crews.

The International Union of Railways, the 46-member association of European and other railroads, maintains the success of rail services is based "largely on the close traditional relationship between Europe's railroads and tourism."

Actually, the distance between major points of tourist interest are not that great now that the average speed of European express trains is from 80 to 100 miles an hour. For instance, Paris is less than three hours from Brussels, less than four from Lyon and about six from Zurich.

ARMED WITH THE Eurailpass, Americans can travel first class on the railways of Austria, Belgium, Denmark, France, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and West Germany.

At this writing, it is $125 for 21 days or unlimited travel, $160 for one month; $210 for two months; and $250 for three months. For students between 14 and 25 years of age, there is a two-month second-class unlimited ticket called Student-Railpass for $130.

The Eurailpass Executive Committee reported recently that Eurailpass and Student-Railpass sales in 1971 showed a 42.5 per cent gain over the previous year — a record-breaking total of 132,600.

IF YOUR PLANS include Britain, a Britrail Pass could come in handy. For $50, the ticket holder is entitled to eight days of unlimited first class travel, $65 buys 15 days — and $50 worth of Thrift-trail coupons gives 1,000 miles of economy class train rides.

Special excursion and other fares are available in most European countries, also. A number of airlines are cooperating with railroads on packages to help get more mileage for the American's travel dollar.

Eurailpasses, incidentally, are accepted aboard Trans-Europe Express TEE trains which are the cream of the European systems. These all-first class trains connect more than 100 major cities. Advance reservations are a must year-round, however.

For those who want to bring cars along, many European railways have had auto-train plans for years. This winter several provided free breakfasts to car owners using international car-sleeper trains.

For Castles, Go To Wales

The Travel Pages

They stand as gaunt, silent witnesses to an historic past, links with fierce battles, whispered romances, the purple and gold of pageantry, conspiracy and betrayal, ambition and triumph. The castles of Wales are unique.

No visitors to this picturesque land can return unaware of them.

If you go to Wales for the long, unspoiled stretches of sandy coast, for the salmon fishing on the sparkling Clwyd, for the lofty solitude of mountain peaks, for the quiet holiday on a hill farm, for the meeting of a score of nations in the Llangollen International Eisteddfod, for the opera in Cardiff, for pony-trekking in beckoning hills, or for a few days of drifting by car from one old market town to another, sooner or later you'll end up inside a castle.

ONCE THERE were more than 300 of them, proud symbols of the sovereignty of a local landlord or the determination of a conqueror to hold what he had taken. Two-thirds have almost entirely disappeared, their only relics the tumbling wall you discover in a leafy lane, a mound of stones used by a farmer as a cattle shelter, a gateway cunningly incorporated into a modern house.

But almost a hundred castles still remain in a splendidly arrogant state of preservation from lordly Caernarvon, in the northwest, to Caerphilly in the southeast, the second largest fortress in Europe. Only royal Windsor is bigger.

Many of these castles were constructed towards the end of the 13th Century by King Edward I of England. Others were built by earlier Norman landlords to control the Welsh or attach each other in petty feudal quarrels; still others were the homes of Welsh princes themselves, homes in which dreams were dreamed of a United Wales, and a land free from the foreigner.

CAERNARVON, its eagle tower rising like an accusing finger against the skyline, its stone walls never quite shutting out the distant beat of the sea, is where the first Prince of Wales, the son of Edward I, was born. Since then, the male heir to the throne of Britain has always taken the status of Prince of Wales and, in the summer of 1969, the age-old echoes of splendor and ceremony were reawakened when Prince Charles was invested as the latest Prince of Wales.

But not all the echoes that linger faintly within these old castles are happy ones.

Flint, for example, shelters the memory of royal disaster and disillusionment: this is where Richard II was captured by Bolingbroke in a scene immortalized by Shakespeare. And it was at Harlech that Dafydd ap Ifan ap Einion endured a long and devastating onslaught during the Wars of the Roses.

HARLECH IS one of the many castles set in a superb panorama. From its turrets, where sentries once looked out eagerly into the morning light for the first signs of the approaching enemy, the view sweeps round from the peak of Snowdon, Wales' highest mountain, across the curving bay below, to the top of Plynlimon, 40 miles away.

Caernarvon, Flint, Harlech, Rhuddlan — where Edward I held parliament, Dolwyddelan — the birthplace of Llywelyn the Great, set amid the greenery of Gwydir Forest, and many others all beckon the tourist who has chosen a holidy in Wales.

Conway offers the most superb front to the sea; its walls stand grey and erect against a distant green mountain background, while beneath, on the placid tide, red fishing boats and white yachts drift lazily. While her husband, King Edward I, was away at the wars, Queen Eleanor grew on the castle terraces the first sweetpeas ever planted in Britain.

DENBEIGH, HIGH above the waving corn of the Clwyd Valley, has a museum with relics of Sir Henry Morgan Stanley, the African explorer who was born there. Gwydir, near Llanwrst, is of a later vintage, a Tudor mansion with peacocks on the lawn. Powys, red sandstone amid a park, has been lived in for five centuries.

Beaumaris, on the island of Anglesey, sleeps quietly but once a year is the backcloth fgr the excitement of the Menai Straits Regatta.

Some of the Welsh castles have produced great kings. Pembroke, frowning down on what was once a great naval port, was the castle in which Henry VH, the first of the distinguished Tudor kings, was born. Monmouth, near the winding Wye, was the birthplace of Henry V, victor of Agincourt.

ABERGAVENNY Castle was the scene of a particularly horrible massacre in the 12th Century.

The Welsh chief Sitsylt captured the castle and its Norman overlord, William de Braose, and de Braose regained his freedom only when Henry II of England made peace with the Welsh. To celebrate the peace — or so he said — de Braose then invited Sitsylt and other local Welsh chiefs to a feast in the castle, and had them all slaughtered while they were at the table.

Nothing so gruesome is likely to happen in the splendidly preserved Caldicot Castle, at the coastal end of the Wye Valley, where every night medieval banqueting scenes are re-created. and guests can enjoy the food and drink of centuries ago to the dancing and music of the minstrels of those days.

To see what a Norman baronial hall was really like, go far west to Manorbier, looking out over a sandy bay; it is perfectly preserved, privately owned, but open to the public.

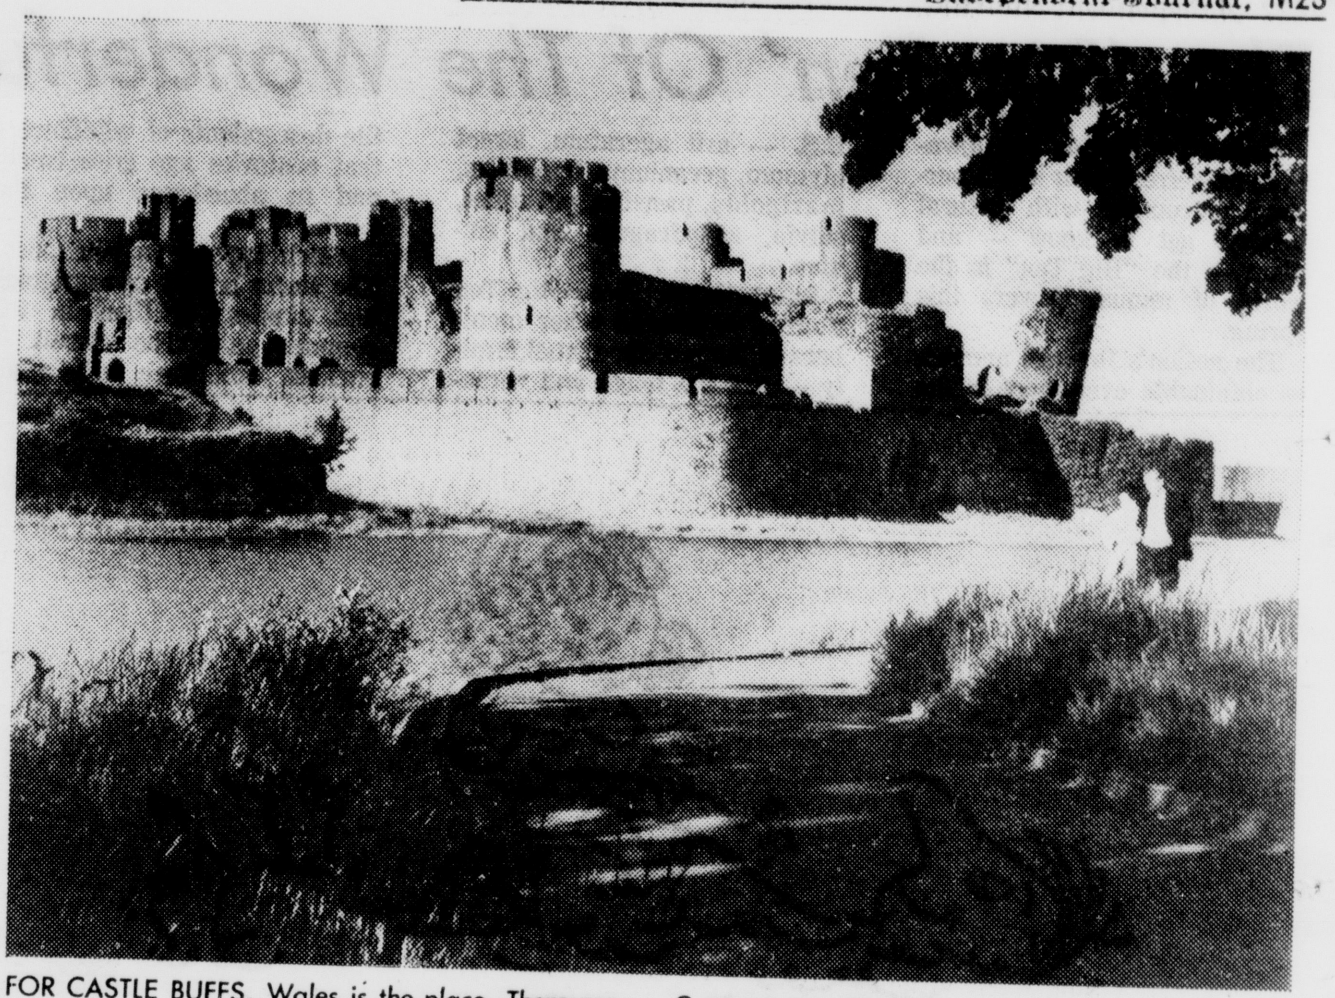
OR DREAM by the tree-lined shore of the nearby River Cleddau, outside Carew Castle, where faint echoes of madrigal, applause, dancing and jousting might disturb the air. Here, they held festivals and tournaments in the sixteenth century.

A tragic woman inhabits the last and greatest of the castles and one which celebrated its 700th anniversary last year. Gilbert de Clare, the Red Earl, built Caerphilly Castle ostensibly to control the Welsh tribes of Glamorgan and to resist attacks from the north. But he had a distant claim to the English throne, and hoped to use the great castle as his base.

He married Princess Alice, a French princess who soon found the bleak winter and grim, warlike life very different from the sophisticated French court. She met and fell in love with Tew Teg, a local Welsh prince, but they were betrayed to the Red Earl by a priest to whom they had confessed. The Red Earl sent her packing to France, Tew Teg caught up with the priest and hung him, and the Red Earl went back to hunting animals and the Welsh.

BUT LEGEND persists that on winter nights, Alice, clad in green, can be seen looking anxiously up the valley, waiting for the sound of horse's hooves to tell her that her lover had returned.

Cambrian and Northeast Airlines within the British Air Services Group offer excellent air service from the rest of Britain to Cardiff and to the other airports serving Wales.



FOR CASTLE BUFFS, Wales is the place. There are massive fortresses such as Caerphilly Castle, pictured here, 700 years old in 1971 and just four miles from Cardiff. And there are historic Harlech, Caernarvon, Conway and many others, some preserved, some restored, some in ruins, but all romantic and intriguing.

Dublin Is Justly Proud Of Its National Gallery

The art-oriented visitor to Ireland will be interested to know that Dublin's National Gallery is rated one of the best in Europe.

It possesses a larger gallery of paintings than the Prado, the Louvre, or any other European gallery, the explanation being that the others are art museums and contain many different kinds of art works besides paintings.

Director James White is justifiably proud of his gallery and the broad collection of paintings it contains from European countries from 1350 on. "I attribute this" he says, "to the highly civilised group of collectors in the last century who traveled widely and gave generously of their collections. A contributing factor also was the natural inclination of Dubliners to compete with London."

A thrill for the visitor to the gallery is to spot such art book favorities as Breughel's "A Peasant Wedding"; Michelangelo's "Holy Family"; Rubens' "Christ at the House of Martha and Mary"; Rembrandt's "Portrait of a Young Man", and Durer's "St. Catherine."

The 'Big Ten' Of The Wonderful World Of Annuals

If you are looking for down-to-earth refreshment and a personal encounter with natural beauty, get to know — and plant — the "Big Ten" in the world of annual flowers this spring.

The nation's favorite annuals — obtainable everwhere in the U.S. — are ageratum, sweet alyssum, geraniums, impatiens, marigolds, pansies, petunias, salvia, snapdragons and zinnias.

Interestingly, these Big Ten flowers — like all other members of the prolific annual family — are the tough and versatile descendants of wildflowers that centuries ago grew freely and in abundance upon the earth.

Which appeals to you most? The rustic beauty of marigolds and zinnias, brilliant in the summer sun? The charm of pansies, each face with a piquant character all its own? Bright impatiens, blossoming luxuriantly in full shade?

If you are a beginning gardener, you may choose to plant groups of several species, already fully-rooted and growing in "flats," and available at modest cost at nurseries, garden centers, supermarkets, hardware and variety stores. Setting the flowers out in your garden is easy, contact with the earth can bring deep refreshment, and, best of all, the flowers themselves will reward you with non-stop blooms all spring, summer and early fall.

THE POWER OF a flower is enhanced if we know its basic characteristics and how to handle it.

A prominent horticulturist has lamented that the U.S. is a "nation without hands." In our over-technologized society, relatively few persons know how to disbud a plant, prune a tree or even properly water flowers. Similarly, many persons do not know the difference between an annual and a perennial flower.

What exactly is an annual?

Almost all annuals live and die in one growing season — from frost's end in spring until the recurrence of frost late in the fall season. In tropical and semi-tropical regions, annuals can flourish indefinitely, for there is no frost to kill them.

PERENNIALS DO not die in one season. Once planted, they thrive year after year, reappearing on their own at their individual time of blossoming.

If most annuals complete their life cycle from seed to seed and require yearly planting, why make the effort? Why not plant the more enduring perennials instead?

The answer to this question reveals the strength of Nature's determination that the earth shall be clothed in beauty. Annuals are instant bloomers. They provide immediate and long-lasting color. Perennials — although equally exquisite flowers — have an entirely different character. Most bloom for much shorter periods than annuals each year.

Light requirements for the Big Ten differ.

Ageratum, originally a wild plant from Mexico, prefers full sun but will tolerate some light shade. Find just the right place for this particular flower, says Bedding Plants Inc., and you will be amazed at its beauty. Its abundant clusters of small, fuzzy blossoms are an incredibly rich and pure shade of sky blue.

Favorite annuals that must have full sunlight are marigolds, petunias, salvia, snapdragons, sweet alyssum and zinnias.

ANNUALS ARE sold at garden centers in the artificial media or earth-filled containers called "flats" where they have grown from seed to fully-matured plants. To remove flowers from flats, gently separate one plant from another, with particular care that each delicate root system is not damaged.

Adjusting The Lawn Mower Carburetor

When a gasoline engine powered lawn mower sputters unevenly, stalls or dies frequently, it could mean a clogged gas line or dirty air cleaner is the fault.

More than likely, it simply indicates the need for carburetor adjustments that most home handymen can make.

Explicit instructions for carburetor adjustments are included in the owner's manual supplied with your power equipment. Since there are many different types of carburetors — some requiring more, less or no maintenance — it is important that these instructions be consulted. They will indicate what adjustments can be made and the proper procedure.

MOST OUTDOOR power equipment around the home, like mowers and tillers are powered by either Tecumseh or Briggs and Stratton air-cooled gasoline engines.

Here, in brief, are the carburetor adjustment instructions for Tecumseh engines equipped with standard float bowl or diaphragm carburetors:

1. Close the power adjusting needle finger-tight by turning clockwise. Then open one turn.

2. Do the same with the idle adjusting needle, then open it one turn for a diaphragm-type carburetor or five-eighths of a turn for a float feed carburetor.

3. Start engine. With the throttle control open to RUN or FAST, turn the power adjusting needle one-eighth turn at a time, forward or backward, until the engine runs smoothly. If the engine tends to stall under load, enrich mixture slightly by turning needle counterclockwise.

4. To adjust for smooth idleing or slow speed, move throttle lever to IDLE or SLOW position and adjust idle needle until engine runs smoothly, proceeding as in step three above.

Garden Pages

BRIGGS AND Stratton recommends the following procedure for simple adjustments to its carburetors:

1. Close the power adjusting needle valve by turning it clockwise. Then open it one and one-half turns.

2. Set engine throttle control at normal operating speed. Turn needle valve clockwise until engine starts to lose speed (lean mixture). Then slowly turn needle valve out past the point of smoothest operation until engine just begins to run unevenly (rich mixture). Turn needle back clockwise to midpoint between rich and lean mixture to point of smoothest operation.

3. Move engine control to run engine at SLOW. Turn idle adjusting screw until a fast idle is obtained.

4. To check adjustment, move engine control from SLOW to FAST speed. Engine should accelerate smoothly. If engine stalls or dies out, increase idle speed or adjust carburetor, usually to a slightly richer mixture.

FOR THOSE who do not want the nuisance of periodic carburetor adjustment, there are new rotary power mowers powered by Tecumseh engines with no-adjust carburetors.

The carburetor is factory programmed for fast, sure starts, even idling and smooth running in varying as well as normal load conditions. It is a chokeless, float bowl carburetor with an automatic prime. Because it is chokeless, it also cannot be flooded. There is always a proper fuel mix — never too rich, never too lean — to start quickly and run at peak efficiency.

From its exterior appearance, the no-adjust carburetor looks very much like any other premium type float bowl carburetor found on outdoor power equipment, except it does not have or require the normal adjustable needle valves.

If You Received A Plant For Easter, Give It Care

Water about twice a week unless the soil becomes dry to the touch earlier. Don't keep plants in drafty places or close to radiators. A light window and a room temperature of 65 degrees is favorable for most flowering plants.

After your lily finishes blooming, cut the stems but continue watering until the foliage ripens, then suspend watering and let the plant dry. When the ground has warmed, remove the bulb from the pot and plant outdoors in a permanent spot. The plant should then bloom in the fall each year. Lilies like rich loam.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

- For garden color this summer, set-out bulbs now. Gladiolus, Dahlias and Canna Lilies are but three spectacular choices.

- Hot weather vegetables can be planted now: Cucumbers, Squash, Beans, Sweet Corn, Tomatoes, Peppers, and Egg Plant.

- April is a busy month for planting summer-blooming annuals from nursery flats. A wide selection of flowers and colors is still available.

- Trim hedges in a slightly pyramidal form. This assures the lower portion receiving plenty of sunlight to encourage bushy, green growth.

- Now you can prune away foliage and stems damaged by frost this past winter.

When Water Flows, Take Action Fast

Some Plumbing Knowledge Essential To Householder

By BARBARA CURRY
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

Was Ponce de Leon looking for youth in his search for the source of "the fountain"?

As a do-it-yourself plumber, I'm not so sure. He just may have been looking for a water cutoff valve.

You'd be amazed at the number of people I've discovered (and the horror stories they tell) who don't even know how to turn off the water! Short of a fire, water can do more damage faster than almost anything. Yet in most homes, it's easy to control.

Exceptions are some apartments where the plumbing almost pre-dates the iron age. If you're stuck with chancy plumbing, be sure to include water coverage in your insurance.

ONE PRACTICAL thing to do if exposed pipes look fragile: Have some epoxy sealer and tape on hand to act as sort of a tourniquet. Another thing I learned the hard way — don't try to clean up scaly-looking pipes with steel wool. I did, and shine they did — but they also broke out in pinhole leaks. Apparently the rust and scale had acted as a seal.

"Let sleeping dogs lie," indeed.

For those who are more blessed with relatively normal pipes and plumbing, it's expensive folly not to know where and what to do.

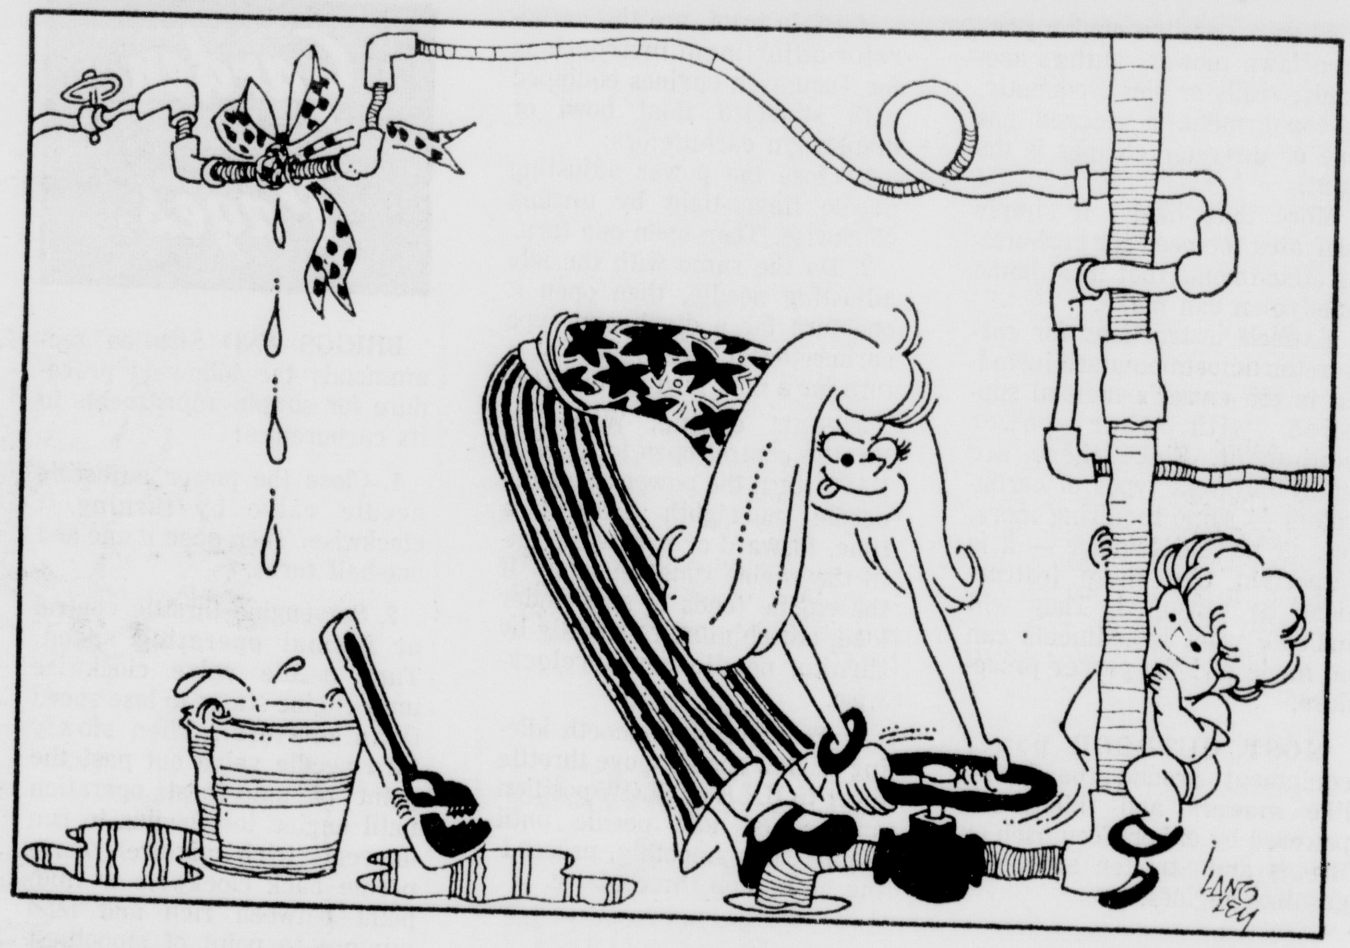
With a house, unlike most apartments, you can control the complete water supply at its source. The main water supply is run through the meter (why don't they make these meters electric, too, like those on gas pumps so you can keep track and not go into shock at bill time?), and then routed to the various fixtures.

CLOSE TO THE inscrutable meter, usually you'll find the main cutoff valve. It's a rather hefty, knurled, wheel-looking thing. Next, try to turn it. If you can't, squirt some sort of lubricant where the shaft meets the pipe. Aftar a while, if it's still "frozen," call the water company or district and let them take it from there. Give this chore high priority on your "things to do" list when you move into a new place.

Fortunately, you don't need a resort to this valve often, maybe never. But if you suddenly realize the sweet sound of a babbling brook is in the house, and you don't know where, turn off the water and go hunting, not vice versa.

Most of the time, the smaller cutoff valves stationed on the lead-in pipes to fixtures stop any flood threats. Again, check these for operability. I once worked one with a removable "skate key." Trouble was it was so removable it wasn't to be found. A trip to the plumbing supply house solved a problem before it happened.

IN ALL CASES you turn clockwise until you can't turn any more. Then go about fixing whatever the problem is, or if it's beyond you, call for help. At least you've called a halt before you have an indoor swimming pool.



Once you turn off the water, fixing a drippy faucet is one non-emergency you can do handily to save money and possibly your sanity. A worn-out washer is almost always the culprit. To be ready to match whatever washer you find, get an inexpensive assortment beforehand.

The insides of faucets, even the fanciest, are basically alike. There is a small plug (washer) that makes a water-tight seal for the hole where the water comes from. When you turn on the water, you "unplug" this hole.

BEFORE YOU plumb the depths, take an old bath towel and put it in the basin. This keeps dropped parts from going down the drain or dropped tools from chipping the finish.

Now take the handle off. There's a screw there someplace that holds it on. Sometimes it's out in the open, but it can hide under a snap-off or screw-type cap that says H or C or is color-coded red or blue . . . or . . . or . . . believe me, it's there.

Remove the screw and pull the handle off the stem. This has a knurled end which keeps the handle from slipping and positions it properly. The handle may stick (may? almost always). Gently pry it off with a screwdriver, wrapped in tape so you don't scratch the finish, or "rock" it back and forth with your hands.

NOW LOOSEN the nut that's sitting there, and then the stem (it looks vaguely like a spark plug). The washer is low man on the totem pole. You'll find a screw holding it at the bottom. No doubt the screw will be recalcitrant. If it is, hold the upper part of the stem with pliers and loosen. Pick out a washer that matches, put it on and replace parts in order, good and tight, turn on the water and you're back in business.

Naturally, any plumbing project is a water project and as such, rust, corrosion, and sediment are usually the main roadblocks. Patience and an "easy does it" approach, rather than brute strength, more often than not will do the deed.

Handyman's Pages

Keeping Up With The Time As Hobby And Money-Saver

The title of Harold C. Keily's new book is "Clock Repairing as a Hobby."

But its a beginner's introduction to a skill that can aso save the home handyman money, and perhaps even permit him to develop an after-hours side trade.

Author Kelly has been a teacher of horology at two colleges, a repair department manager for a large jewelry firm, a columnist for a trade publication, and a lifetime student and enthusiast of clocks and watches. Now retired, he lives in Monrovia in this state and still serves from time to time as an expert horological consultant.

The manual he has written is pitched for the novice, beginning with an explanation of clock works, describing and analyzing typical clock problems and their correction, and offering a special chapter on cleaning techniques.

Worn bushing, broken teeth, sprung mainsprings, wobbly pendulums — all these and more problems are discussed. Even such unusual timekeepers as the 400-day clock receive attention. But it is the basic, fundamental procedure with which the average handyman will be most concerned, and Kelly covers it fully, with the help of simple line drawing illustrations.

Association Press, 291 Broadway, New York, is the publisher of the $4.95 book. D.K.

A Little Boldness Lifts A Room

By CAROLYN S. MURRAY

Boldness and derring-do may be appreciated in television heroes and Grand Prix race participants, but the thrill wears off with over-exposure.

The same thing happens in interiors. A little boldness is fun; a change of pace. But if that shock formula is repeated too often within a living environment, it becomes useless as a definitive decorating tool.

The big, bold pattern can work miracles for a mundane space. It substitutes for good architectural detail. It can help give the illusion of a central focal point in a room without a fireplace or some other important feature. But it can also overwhelm the space and everyone who happens to use it.

IT'S A LOT more fun to use bold patterns where they are least expected.

For example, it's a surprise to find, as one enters a long hall, a bright design at the far end, or even on the ceiling if the space is tall and narrow. Bold colors on the doors to various rooms uplift a drab passageway.

In a kitchen, it's fun to have some gay colors and patterns facing into the working area as a special bonus and morale builder for the cook.

BATHROOMS are usually elegible for a bold color-uplift. A ceiling of pattern with walls of smaller pattern or co-ordinated colors is a nice solution. The pattern might be one of your own creations: Posters pasted closely together to create an overall design or bands of colored paint worked in stripes, radial lines or a plaid.

The pattern you choose for this small-dose effect might be found in a washable, strippable wall covering, a fabric or wallpaper.

You don't have to follow the manufacturers' suggestions about how to hang the product. Manufacturers usually provide a full repeat of a design and carefully advise you how to have the design centered on the wall. But if you prefer a looser approach, just let some of the motifs be half or roughly finished, seeming to disappear around a corner or into a wall.

OR HAVE THE pattern turn the corner, go up over the ceiling or down over the floor. (You can copy the motif in paint, or applique a vinyl cutout or two to the existing floor. This is especially fun for a child's room, with large-scale flowers or animals used as the motif.)

Just remember not to overdo this decorating trick. A little boldness goes a long way. Save some bold ideas for a second home or another incarnation!

SUPER DAISY is the appropriate name of this large-scale floral pattern by Imperial. As used here it is bright blue, yellow and red. But you can also find the same pattern in yellow, green, orange and pink, and in lime-green and blue. It adds a nice punch of color and bold pattern to a room that might otherwise be too dull.

A CABINET IN THE CORNER

ONE OF the chronic problems in the American home is lack of space. And yet, too often, room corners go unused, even in the most crowded house or apartment. A corner cabinet not only adds utility to this unused area, but also lends new life to the room's decor. For $1 the home handyman can obtain Corner Cabinet Pattern No. 426 by writing Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. Then, armed with a list of materials, instructions and pictures, he can build the cabinet TV actress Susan Flannery of the "Days of Our Lives" series is shown enjoying at left. The cabinet here is made of birch plywood, but many other fancy plywood finishes are also available. Top shelves display fancy chinaware, silver, etc. while bottom drawers hold linens and other vital supplies of the homemaker. Some other Ellingson patterns for the home: No. 377, wall magazine rack, $1; No. 176, hanging wall desk, $1; and No. 272, portable sewing machine cabinet, $1.

Now Is The Time To Make Sure Your Air Conditioning Is Ready

By DOROTHEA M. BROOKS

High on the homeowner's list of spring cleaning chores should be the air conditioning system. All of a sudden it will be that time again.

Winter can be hard on idle air conditioning equipment and a check of all systems, some routine preventive maintenance and any repairs or adjustments that may be called for will ensure trouble-free operation from the first of the warm spring days through the hottest summer weather, according to George E. Buchanan, an expert on air conditioning.

HE OFFERS SOME tips for the springtime checkup, starting with a thorough reading of the manufacturer's maintenance manual. Generally he suggests:

Window units that have been stored all winter should be placed upright on a level surface for a period of 24 hours to allow oil in the sealed system to drain back into the compressor.

Dust all exposed surfaces, paying special attention to air inlets and outlets; wipe down platic surfaces with soap and water; and oil according to manufacturer's instructions.

Rusting does not occur frequently but it can happen, especially if you live near the seashore. Buchanan suggests cleaning and painting any exposed parts that may have deteriorated over the winter months.

IT IS ALL WISE, he says, to test-run the unit on the floor before installation.

Choose a day when room temperature is in the 70s and outside temperature in the mid-60s and let the air conditioner run for five to 10 minutes. Note the cooling effectiveness and listen for unusual noises that may indicate the unit requires more extensive checking. If the unit runs but does not cool it usually means it has lost its charge of refrigerant and an authorized dealer should be called.

Air conditioners that have been left in the window over the winter also require attention. But if the unit has operated at times during the winter, Buchanan said, a change of filter and oiling may be all the maintenance required.

FOR HOMES WITH central air conditioning, Buchanan recommends the following:

—Reset dampers for air conditioning. Damper adjustment is required only when there are separate ducts for the cool air.

—See that air inlets and outlets, both indoors and out, are free from obstruction.

—Clean or replace filters.

—Lubricate where called for. This generally is limited to fan motors and bearings.

—Turn on power for at least one day before you start the compressor. Run the fan only, with the cooling thermostat set high. In the compressors of many makes of air conditioners, power is required to prewarm and improve the lubricating qualities of the compressor oil. Even where this is not a necessity, a 24-hour warmup can do no harm.

—If there is an auxiliary drain pan under the unit, as is the case in many attic installations, be sure the pan is cleaned out and the drain open. Flush with a pitcher of water to check runoff because insects sometimes block drains.

—Pick a day when the outside temperatures are in the mid-60s for a test run. Shift the thermostat from heat to cool and run equipment for five or 10 minutes by dropping the thermostat to below room temperature. Listen well for any unusual noises, either indoors or out. Any unusual noise that persists indicates the need for professional attention.

SOME RESIDENTIAL units, Buchanan said, are complete packages, but many others are "split systems." By this arrangement, the heat-discharging compressor-condenser section is located outdoors, while the cooling evaporator is in the house and connected with the ducts to various rooms.

Split systems require all the checks already listed, and a few others as well.

When there is piping going outside, check the condition of insulation, concrete foundations and exposed metal surfaces. Make sure concrete foundations have not been broken or tilted.

Marin Homeowner's Notebook

TERMITES INVADING MARIN HOMES NOW!

Every homeowner in Marin County should be on the alert for a cloud of winged ant-like insects anywhere around his home. It may be a swarm of termites!

As soon as the rains end in Marin County, all three types of termites found here send out swarms of flying "kings" and "queens" to start new nests. Swarming is heavy in the early spring and fall, but continue in some degree from late February through late October.

Termite colonies send out swarms only after they've been established for three years or more. The flying reproductives can go only a short distance, seldom more than 100 feet unless helped by winds. So if you see a cloud of swarmers or their discarded wings, there's a large termite nest nearby.

There is a silver lining in that cloud of swarmers, though. The nest is still fairly small (6,000 to 10,000 termites) when the first swarms are sent out. If you detect an early swarm, therefore, you've avoided the worst damage. Later, the nests grow to 250,000 termites or more.

The three types of termites in Marin have somewhat different habits for nesting and swarming.

All three types of termites have infested homes in every part of Marin, however. So every homeowner should be alert during the swarming season. If you see a swarm or discarded wings, get help from a structural pest control expert immediately. He'll make sure nothing clouds your home's future.

Hinkley & Gordon is a state-licensed structural pest control company. For two generations, we've provided Marin's most expert and thorough pest control services.

For more information about Marin County's destructive pests, just call the Hinkley & Gordon office. We'll mail you our free Marin Home Care Calendar. It shows when and how to detect pest problems. How to avoid many of them. And what kinds of professional services are available to help you.

TELEVISION NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The producer of the new weekly, one-hour comedy-variety program starring Bill Cosby on CBS next season will be George Schlatter, a veteran who created NBC's "Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In" and produced it until a parting of the ways last year.

"Sesame Street," now in its third U.S. season, will be introduced in Poland and Yugoslavia this spring. The children's program already has been seen in some 50 countries and territories.

Producer-director Greg Garrison has contracted for 102 variety shows for the 1972-73 season, some for networks, some to be syndicated. His "The Golddiggers" half-hour series, which has been renewed, and a new series starring comedian Jonathan Winters are for syndication. Network-wise, NBC has ordered 28 new Dean Martin hours and seven hour-long variety shows as Martin's replacement this summer. ABC has ordered 15 half-hour shows starring British comedian Marty Feldman.

Two Lovely Ladies Of The Opera Pay Musical Tributes To Old Vienna

By LOUIS SNYDER

Two glamorous operatic ladies, one Spanish, one American, have come forth with discs celebrating Vienna and its most famous exports —song.

Of 11 numbers on her "Prima Donna in Vienna" recording, Metropolitan Opera soprano Pilar Lorengar sings six arias from operas, only one of which ("Fidelio") had its premier there, and five operetta selections as Viennese as whipped cream.

Beverly Sills, in her "Welcome to Vienna," also chooses operetta gems, a Strauss waltz (the orchestra under Julius Rudel plays two Strauss numbers without her), the irrepressible "Wien, Wien" ("Vienna, City of My Dreams"), and by coincidence, Marietta's Lied from Korngold's "Die Tote Stadt," the only duplication of Miss Lorengar's list.

PILAR LORENGAR
A touch of poignance

WELCOME TO VIENNA, Beverly Sills, soprano, with Julius Rudel conduting London Philharmonic Orchestra (ABC/ATS-20009).

The arias that Miss Lorengar has chosen to include are from operas which are now very much at home in either of Vienna's two main houses: Mozart's "Le Nozze di Figaro ("Dove sono"), Beethoven's "Fidelio" (Marzelline's aria), Weber's "Der Freischutz" ("Leise, leise"), Wagner's "Tannhauser" ("Dich teure Halle"), and Richard Strauss's "Arabella" (a duet with Arlene Auger), plus the Korngold.

To all she brings a voice of unique quality, with its slight vibrato that adds a touch of poignance to each of the heroines she is protraying.

For Weber's Agathe and Wagner's Elisabeth she employs the dramatic timbre to which performances in the opera house do fullest justice. They are less flatteringly recorded.

The operetta numbers receive equally felicitous treatment: lilting melodies from Strauss's "Gypsy Baron," Zeller's "Vogelhandler, "Lehar's "Eva" and "Gypsy Love," and Kalman's "Czardsa Princess," to remind us of the fund of vocal grandeur just over the line between grand and light opera.

Miss Sills' "Welcome," which Rudel described before the fact as being "just for fun," is indeed more relaxed and informal. The stage is set by a winning rendition of that "Merry Widow" staple, "Vilia," complete with a backup chorus (John Aldis Choir), then comes a hauntingly beautiful performance of the "Tote Stadt" aria. (Fans of Miss Lorengar and Miss Sills will have to decide which is the more appealing of these versions.)

Rudel interjects an onomatopoetic orchestral reading of Johann Strauss's "Thunder and Lightning Polka" (the Overture to Strauss's "Night in Venice" comes on side two), and Miss Sills follows, trilling away in the upper register in Strauss's "Voices of Spring."

Her singing of opulently melodious numbers from Heubeuger's "Opera Ball" ("Im Chambre Separee"), and two Lehar hits, "Giuditta" and "The Czarevich," only permits one to conjecture what a Viennese sensation Miss Sills would have caused in the days when operetta was in flower.

"Wien, Wien," which concludes the recital, comes off almost religiously — not a usual interpretation. Full of feeling — schmaltz, if you will — it is perhaps not as carefree as one might wish, but still movingly caressed by the infinite warmth of the singer's quite incomparable projection from the heart.

SAUSALITO'S SEA-LION

There is a sea-lion
In Sausalito.
Go to the sea-lion
And touch him.
His smart bronzen body
Between rocks and rolling stones
And reddish little crabs
Is now green
With plancton and patina,
Bathing joyfully
In the rising tide.
Go and touch him
And you are touching me.
